All Estimates Will Provide Restoration Of U. S. Pay

Nine Old-Line Agencies Draft Preliminary Budget Figures.

Bureau Directs Omission of Cut

Emergency Studies to Begin in Early December.

By Robert C. Albright.

On specific instructions from the Budget Bureau, provision for 100 per cent salary restoration has been made in all estimates submitted for the 1936 fiscal year, it was learned last night.

Only ordinary expenses of Government, covering the nine old-line Federal departments, are being covered in preliminary budget studies, it was authoritatively reported.

Emergency estimates will be withheld until the House Appropriations Committee gets actively under way next month on the usual, regular estimates now being whipped into shape by Acting Budget Director D. W. Bell.

Confirmed by Roosevelt.

This was partially confirmed at the White House, where President Roosevelt announced he will have nothing to give out on additional public works and relief needs until the first of the year.

At the Budget Bureau, Director Bell admitted that all Government departments have received instructions to make no allowance for the 5 per cent legislative pay cut in computing 1936 costs.

The budget officer insisted this action has no particular significance concerning any possible lifting of the Federal pay cut.

"That policy remains to be worked out," he said.

Organized Federal workers, however, have high hopes that the remaining 5 per cent pay cut will be repealed by the next Congress, even if rising living costs fail to warrant earlier action by the President.

10 Per Cent Slash Rejected.

It was recalled here that budget estimates submitted to the last Congress provided for a 10 per cent salary reduction, as opposed to the 15 per cent cut previously in force. It is a matter of record that Congress rejected this slash and imposed a 5 per cent cut in its place.

Whether the bureau will write a 5 per cent salary cut into the 1936 estimates to Congress, or allow for 100 per cent restoration, in line with its departmental instructions, remained a matter of speculation.

Delay in preparation of next year's emergency estimates gave rise to reports the Administration is getting ready to curtail its spending program, in line with economy pressure from banking and business interests.

Public Works Administrator Ickes recently told newspapermen he

Derby Racers On Return Hop

Fourth Place Team Seeks to Beat Scott's Time, Round-Trip Mark.

Melbourne (Saturday), Oct 27 (AP). Cathcart Jones and K. W. Waller, racing back to England after placing fourth in the London-to-Melbourne Air Derby, completed the first lap of the return flight by landing at Charleville at 10:50 a. m. local time (7:50 p. m. Friday Eastern standard time.

Taking off from Melbourne at dawn, the Englishmen sped over the 787 miles to Charleville at a rate of more than 200 miles an hour.

The English pair, believing their green (DeHaviland) Comet was the fastest ship in the race, hoped to better the record-smashing 76 hours 59 minutes 50 seconds the derby winners, C. W. A. Scott and Campbell Black, took to come down.

They also want to set a mark for the round trip that would give other airmen something to shoot at.

As Jones and Waller set out on their return, four-fifths of the 20 planes that left Mildenhall Airdrome last Saturday still had not reached Melbourne.

The crews of the successful British, Dutch and American planes accepted an invitation to proceed to Canberra next week as special guests of the Commonwealth.

The Dutch plane of D. L. Asjes and G. J. Geysendorfer was destroyed by fire at Allahabad when it collided with an automobile on the airfield. No one was injured.

Six Russians to Die For Grain Crop Fraud

Smolensk, U. S. S. R., Oct. 26 (AP). Six men were condemned to death and 40 imprisoned today for dishonesty and inefficiency in handling grain crops and for failing to make grain deliveries to the government according to program.

In all, 53 were tried, including farm executives and milling officials charged with the theft of 1,400 tons of grain and flour.

Drawing by Davis.

Startled by the sale of Manager Joe Cronin by the Washington Baseball Club to the Boston Red Sox yesterday for a cash price reliably reported to be $200,000 Washington fans turned to speculation concerning his successor as pilot of the Senators.

Opening wide his well-stocked money bags, Owner Tom Yawkey of the Red Sox, a director in several Wall street corporations, tempted Owner Clark Griffith of the Nats with the richest proffer in baseball history and plucked Cronin from the Washington team.

Transplanted to Washington in the trade was Lyn Lary, clever-

Vienna Faces A New Crisis On Tax Edict

Provinces Are Deprived of Right to Share in Austrian Levy.

Vienna, Oct. 26 (AP).—Political tensity throughout Austria, bringing forecasts of renewed civil strife, increased tonight as the government proclaimed new legislation regulating taxation rights of the federal, provincial and municipal governments.

Facing renewed activity by Socialists, Communists and Nazis, and anxious over conflict between Austria's two "private" armies, Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg's cabinet nevertheless stirred up an old hornet's nest by taking from the provinces and municipalities their right to share in taxes collected in Vienna.

Fearful of Conflict.

Veteran political observers, declaring tensity greater than that of July when Nazi rebels assassinated Chancellor Dollfuss, pointed to conflict between the Heimwehr (Fascist home guard) headed by Prince Ernst von Starhemberg and Schuschnigg's Catholic storm troops as particularly ominous.

Still another possible source of trouble was pointed out tonight by Maj. Emil Fey, minister of interior and vice leader of the Heimwehr, who in an address to business men predicted new struggles over organization of the proposed corporative state.

"That this fundamental change will not be carried out without fights and difficulties," Fey said. "Many forces still at work are bound up in an outworn mentality of parliamentary and social economy."

Fight for Power Seen.

A recent editorial in Die Bundespolizei (organ of the national police) prophesied a final decisive battle for power in Austria before the end of the year, and said "great masses of arms are smuggled across Austrian borders."

The trouble between the Heim-

New Deal Foes Are Criticized By First Lady

Campaign for Her Friend Turns Into Defense of Husband's Policies.

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 26 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt concluded her up-State "stumping tour" for Mrs. Carolina O'Day, Democratic candidate for Representative at Large, tonight with a new defense of the President's policies.

Of the critics who call the New Deal "wasteful," the President's wife said:

"When you hear those things, just remember a little common sense is still left in the Government."

Of the farm program that called for destruction of surplus hogs and cattle, Mrs. Roosevelt said:

"You hear, sometimes, that several million pigs were thrown into the Mississippi River. It is hard to believe that thinking people think that. It would just be too stupid."

400 Hear Address.

Mrs. Roosevelt spoke at a dinner attended by about 400 guests.

Col. Frederick Stuart Greene, the Virginian who became head of New York's public works system, introduced her as "America's ablest woman."

The President's wife referred to her friend, Mrs. O'Day, as "my candidate." Her reference to Miss Natalie Couch, Mrs. O'Day's Republican opponent for reelection as Representative at large, was as "our opponent."

Mrs. Roosevelt remarked that "I

Quezon Operated Upon, Then Phones Philippines

Baltimore, Oct. 26 (AP).—Manuel Quezon, Philippine independence leader, underwent a major surgical operation here today so successfully that he was able to place a long distance phone call immediately afterward.

Quezon left the operating room at the Johns Hopkins Hospital to call his wife in the Philippines to tell her how he was feeling. Dr. Hugh H. Young said the patient was in "excellent condition."

U. S. Plans Brewery Meters To Clock Country's Imbibers

The Government announced yesterday it was going to install meters in breweries in an attempt to put beer on a taxicab basis, and any minute now the rate may be 15 cents for the first stein and 10 cents for each additional glass.

Secretary of Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., feels that if he can find out exactly how much the boys in the back room are having, he can earn a lot of money for the U. S. A. by collecting more taxes. The Government has been tinkering with these meter gadgets for some time, and the machinery now has reached the point where it provides everything except an alibi to give your wife when you reach home after drinking 12 steins.

The beer meter came as quite a shock to official Washington, because everybody figured the beer crisis was all washed up six weeks ago when Morgenthau put out explicit orders on how to open kegs. Any beer parlor that failed to remove the bung and drive it through the Government seal, was hereafter considered a public enemy just like "Pretty Boy" Floyd.

The ablest sleuths in the Treasury Department have been lying in wait for some malefactor who dared to flout the laws of this Republic by destroying the seal and then taking out the bung, but they could not catch anybody. That seemed to

Bank Heads Proffer Aid To President

Callers Tell Him They Will Join His 'All-American' Team.

Will Cooperate With Peek to Stimulate Foreign Trade.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

The rapprochement between the banking fraternity and the Roosevelt Administration was made complete yesterday when four officials of the American Bankers Association called at the White House to offer themselves as players on the President's "All-American team."

"And what positions did he give you?" Rudolf S. Hecht, of New Orleans, new president of the association, was asked.

"He didn't specify," was the smiling response, "but he did accept our offer."

Tongue in cheek, the President later in the day told his press conference that he could hardly put the bankers out at end, that he didn't think they should play center, that to call them half backs might be insulting, but that all should take turns carrying the ball.

Would End Guerilla War.

Behind this bantering by-play, which originated in the President's proposal Wednesday night for an "All-American" line-up of business, industry, labor and agriculture, lay the desire—now expressed on both sides—for an end of the guerilla warfare which many felt was hampering recovery.

As evidence of their intentions to cooperate, the bank association officials left the White House to attend a luncheon with George N. Peek, president of the Export-Import Bank, during which they agreed to name a committee to assist Mr. Peek in stimulating foreign trade.

Further announcement of plans will be made at the meeting of the Foreign Trade Council next week in New York, it was said. For the present it was decided an outstanding group of financial advisers will be chosen to act continuously with Mr. Peek, the President's special adviser on foreign trade.

With Mr. Hecht at the White House were Francis M. Law, of Houston, retiring president of the Bankers' Association; Robert V. Fleming, of Washington's Riggs National Bank, first vice president, and Tom K. Smith, of St. Louis, second vice president.

Banker Borrows Quarter.

To Mr. Law went the distinction of obtaining the first loan under the new program of cooperation when he borrowed a quarter from a reporter to pay for his taxi to the White House. Fumbling in his pockets, the genial Texan was abashed to find that he couldn't meet the fare.

Recovering from this incident, Mr. Law was astonished when he was greeted by the President with, "Hear you are broke; that you are begging on the White House doorsteps."

Then Mr. Roosevelt showed the surprised bankers a newspaper account of what had just happened at the White House entrance. The story of the Texan's plight had been telephoned to a press association office, and had just come in on the White House news ticker.

After the interview, Mr. Law's "two-bit" loan was taken over by Mr. Fleming, on behalf of the Riggs National, while Mr. Hecht told newspapermen that the banks are

'Gas' Price Drops Today to 11 Cents

Another Independent Slash Follows Majors' Cut.

The price of gasoline in Washington today will come within a cent of the low level reached during the gas war several months ago, when about 30 independent dealers will cut the figure to 11 cents a gallon.

Independent dealers decided to slash the price another half-cent yesterday after the Standard Oil Co. instructed its dealers to reduce prices another half-cent to 12 cents this morning. The other major companies immediately prepared to follow suit.

The current gas war has been under way two weeks with the independent dealers maintaining a price scale of a cent under the major oil companies.

The independents warned they are well organized and are ready to make even further cuts in prices if the larger companies insist on continuing the war.

Party Chiefs Turn Backs On Sinclair

Support Is Withdrawn by Creel, Defeated Candidate.

Letter of Indorsement From Farley Called a 'Mistake.'

After apparently flirting with the idea of supporting Upton Sinclair, the Roosevelt Administration has now definitely turned its back to the former Socialist and his California campaign for Governor, it became apparent last night.

From New York, George Creel—generally regarded as an Administration spokesman for California—released a blast against the "EPIC" planner in the form of a letter withdrawing his earlier offer to campaign in Sinclair's behalf.

The letter was dated October 18, at Washington, thus antedating, by almost a week, Mr. Creel's call at the White House last Tuesday. It was believed that the letter was in Creel's pocket when he conferred with Mr. Roosevelt at that time.

Farley Letter a "Mistake."

Further indication that the Administration now wants Sinclair defeated came yesterday in an explanation by the Democratic National committee that a letter of indorsement sent the California candidate over the signature of Chairman James A. Farley was all a "mistake."

Mr. Roosevelt himself has maintained a strict silence, but his keen interest in the California campaign has been attested by the frequency with which Californians have appeared on his appointment list. Asked yesterday for comment, he replied merely that he could not take part in any State campaigns.

Won't Get McAdoo's Aid.

Leaving the White House four days ago, Mr. Creel declared that he would have to "assess" the California situation, and that if Sinclair was still standing on the Democratic State platform he would support him. In his letter, he declares that the erstwhile Socialist has now reverted to his original "EPIC" platform.

The letter from Democratic headquarters, carrying the rubber-stamp signature of Farley in his customary green ink, was dispatched in error by a subordinate, it was said. Considerable mystery surrounded the missive, which was not cleared up when Mr. Farley, on a visit to the White House yesterday, refused to comment.

Senator William Gibbs McAdoo, Democratic Californian, received reports of the Creel letter to Sinclair without surprise. Furthermore, he declared that speaking engagements in Arizona and Utah will prevent him from stumping in Cali-

Court Veto Sought Of TVA Purchase

Transaction Is Approved by State Board.

Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 26 (AP).—Acquisition by the Tennessee Valley Authority of privately-owned utility properties at and near Knoxville—the first large city to invite the TVA "yardstick" rates—was approved today by the State Railroad and Public Utilities Commission, but immediately court action was started in an effort to block the transaction.

Declaring the sole question before it was "the question of the public interest," the commission relegated to the courts for determination all legal and constitutional questions that had been raised.

Embraced in the sale contract are the electric utility properties of the Tennessee Public Service Co., at Knoxville, Sevierville, Newport, Dandridge, White Pine and other nearby communities. The agreed sale price was $6,191,000.

Glass Plants to Close; Blame Imports to U. S.

Weston, W. Va., Oct. 26 (AP).—Charging that foreign competition, particularly from Japan, has "wrecked" the thin glass industry in America, officials of the Louie Glass Co. and the West Virginia Glass Specialty Co. announced today the plants will shut down at midnight tonight for an indefinite period.

Eleven hundred persons receiving monthly pay of between $85,000 and $95,000 will be thrown out of work at the plants here.

'Numbers' Declared One of Capital's Most Lucrative Rackets; Police Say One in Every Three Plays, While Gangs Kill for Profits.

By Edward T. Folliard.

When Elmer B——, the file clerk, decides to pass up that bottle of milk for lunch and bet the 10 cents on the "numbers" game, he probably feels a little bit devilish, but that's about all. Certainly he doesn't feel guilty of any great wrongdoing.

Ten cents! What harm could that do? True, Elmer hopes to "hit" the lucky number and thereby get 600 to 1 for his money—$60. But if that is wrong, Elmer will tell you, then so is the Irish Sweepstakes lottery wrong, and the whole world plays that.

"Anyway," says Elmer, "why don't the police bother about something else? Here they are beefing about the 'numbers' game, and in the meantime hoodlums and gunmen are running away with the town."

The police answer to that is that Elmer, however virtuous he may feel, is directly supporting the hoodlums.

The greatest single cause of gun-toting, shootings and killings in Washington, they say, is gambling. And of the various forms of gambling, they add, the "numbers" game is the most widely played and the most profitable to the operators.

Lieut. George Little, chief of the headquarters gambling squad, estimated yesterday that one out of every three Washingtonians plays the "numbers" game.

Assistant United States Attorney Roger Robb, who is assigned to prosecuting gambling cases, corroborated Little's estimate.

"I don't say," explained Robb "that one out of every three play the game every day. But I do think they play it more or less regularly."

If that is true, the comparatively small sums that are played on the game must, in the aggregate, amount to a rich prize for the "big shots" whose runners comb the town to gather it in.

Passing over the moral aspect of the game and concentrating on the criminal aspect of it—one with which Elmer probably is not familiar—we find this:

The "big shots" who back the game frequently hire armed men to act as their bodyguards. They realize that they not only are in danger of being robbed or "snatched," but that there are other gamblers who envy them, who would like to move in on their territory.

Among these particular gamblers,

Florida Mob Asks Audience For Lynching

Man Seized in Alabama Held for Death at the Stake.

Greenwood, Fla., Oct. 26 (AP).—A colored man seized from an Alabama jail was in the hands of a mob determined to lynch him near here tonight, according to reports, while 32 sheriff's deputies and a dozen extra officers were ordered on duty at strategic points throughout Jackson County.

At Tallahassee, State capital, a secretary to Gov. Dave Sholtz quoted Sheriff W. F. Chambliss as having told him he had sworn in a number of deputies and considered himself capable of taking care of any situation that might arise.

Meanwhile, large numbers of persons from outside Greenwood appeared in this village. From Arcadia, in southern Florida, Gov. Sholtz telephoned his office authorizing calling out State troops if Jackson County authorities deemed such a step necessary.

A secretary said he would attempt to reach Sheriff Chambliss again to convey the tropp offer.

At Marianna earlier in the afternoon a deputy sheriff said he had heard nothing of the mob, but that if it was determined to kill the captive, Claude Neal, he knew of "no way to prevent it."

Confessed to Slaying.

Neal was taken by a Florida mob from the Brewton (Ala.) Jail, where he had been taken for safekeeping, early today. He had confessed, officers said, to attacking and slaying Miss Lola Cannidy, 22, near here last week.

Sheriff John P. Harrell, at Chipley, Fla., adjoining this county, said he had been informed by telephone that the mob would take Neal to the place where the attack occurred, tie him to a stake and "let the girl's father" kill him. There were reports the mob planned to carry out the lynching between 8 and 9 p. m. (Central Standard time.)

J. P. Newell, executive secretary to Gov. Sholtz, said the Governor was out of the Capital. From Jack-

Mrs. Moffett, Wife of FHA Head, Killed

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—Mrs. Adelaide Taft Moffett, 47, estranged wife of James A. Moffett, Federal Housing administrator, fell to her death today from her eighth-floor apartment in the fashionable East Fifties.

A brother-in-law told police at the hospital that Mrs. Moffett suffered a dizzy spell, went to an open window for a breath of fresh air, and fell out.

Estranged for Ten Years.

Mrs. Moffett had been separated for ten years from her husband, who resigned as vice president of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey on becoming associated with the NRA last spring. Later, he was named head of the Housing Administration.

Moffett's home is on Park avenue.

Their daughter, Adelaide, a debutante of last winter, attracted attention recently through her efforts to become known as an actress and radio singer. Her father threatened to sue a Miami night club last winter when it became known she was acquiring musical experience there.

She had played first with the South Shore Players on Long Island soon after her graduation from Todhunter School, with which Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt is associated.

Identified by Daughter.

Miss Moffett lived with her mother and was among the first to reach the hospital. She identified her mother.

Mrs. Moffett fell into a courtyard back of the apartment building. The superintendent found her unconscious and notified police and

Long, His Debtors and Police Depart for Game at Nashville

Baton Rouge, La., Oct. 26 (AP).—A joyous, shouting army of football fans, some the guests and others the debtors of Senator Huey P. Long for the trip, entrained here late today for his invasion of Nashville, Tenn. There they are to lend their cheering support to Louisiana State University in its grid battle with Vanderbilt tomorrow.

The mass movement of virtually the entire cheering section of the Louisiana school, made possible by Long's distribution of several thousand dollars to students lacking the train fare, got under way with the Kingfish and the 125-piece university band aboard "The White Special."

The university's 1,500 cadets were scattered throughout other sections of the five-train fan special.

Louisiana State police, armed, and with special permission to enter Tennessee so equipped as game wardens, patrolled the trains to preserve order.

Before boarding the train, Long denied a report he would use the occasion to announce his candidacy for President of the United States in 1936 on his "share the wealth" platform, and turned down a request to speak on behalf of Tennessee Democratic candidates as "a physical impossibility" because of his role in the football activities.

He said he would speak at the game, but refused to divulge his subject.

Authorities Plan No General Drive

Building, Fire Violations Will Be Employed in Gaming Attack.

Developments yesterday in the District's crime situation were:

The District Bar Association proposed an alliance of lawyers and laymen to fight crime and announced additional plans for the Monday night meeting to further crime suppression.

Establishment here of a criminological institute to train policemen in scientific crime detection is in prospect.

"Numbers racket" is described by police as the most lucrative racket. Estimates are that one in three Washingtonians aid in the support of racketeers.

The District Bar Association's special committee yesterday laid plans for the crime suppression mass meeting Monday night at the Mayflower Hotel, while local government officials and police discussed methods of discouraging gambling in the Capital.

Officers of the special bar committee met at the office of George Maurice Morris, with F. Regis Noel, president of the District Bar Association, present, and selected Robert N. Miller as chairman of the mass meeting.

Among those who will be asked to address the gathering are Melvin C. Hazen, chairman of the Board of District Commissioners; Leslie C. Garnett, United States Attorney; E. Barrett Prettyman, corporation counsel, and Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police.

Meanwhile, Maj. Brown and Hazen, who direct the police department, decided to concentrate police activity on aiding Montgomery authorities in solving the slaying of Allen B. Wilson, a newspaper carrier, shot down by mistake at Takoma Park, Md., by gunmen engaged in a gaming war.

No General Drive Now.

It was understood at the District Building yesterday that there will be no general campaign launched against gambling houses and other crime by the Police Department for the present.

The Commissioners issued a formal order, however, that the police shall report to the District heads every raid they make on a

Nevada Senator's 15-Year-Old Daughter Reported Missing From Reno.

Reno, Nev., Oct. 26 (AP).—Department of Justice agents were reported tonight to have joined in a search for Miss Patricia McCarran, 15-year-old daughter of Senator Patrick A. McCarran, of Nevada, who, Reno police said, disappeared from her home Monday night. Police said they learned the girl had spent one night in a Reno Hotel and then vanished.

The girl's mother declined to comment here and Senator McCarran was reported in Florida, where he attended the American Legion convention at Miami.

Officers said they had been informed that a girl, who gave the name of "Sylvia Zane," was taken into custody by authorities at Montello, Nev., Tuesday after she was put off a train because she had no ticket.

They said the girl, who they believed may have been Miss McCarran, was taken to a Government transient relief station at Elko, Nev., where arrangements were made to provide her with transportation to Washington.

Honolulu, Oct. 26 (AP).—Leon Skilling, navigator for the famous Australian flier, Charles Ulm, announced on arrival here today from Australia that he, Ulm, George M. Littlejohn and another Australian airman would attempt a flight from Canada to Australia in November.

Skilling said the four men probably would take off from Vancouver or Montreal and fly to Melbourne, with landings at Honolulu, Fiji Islands and Auckland, New Zealand.

Bankrupt Farm Increase Laid To Attorneys

(Associated Press.)

An assertion that unscrupulous attorneys were persuading reluctant farmers to take advantage of the Frazier-Lemke debt moratorium measure was made yesterday by Farm Credit Administration officials.

The bill, indorsed by Senator Huey Long, provides machinery for a drastic scaling down of farm indebtedness under Federal court supervision, and for a five-year moratorium for the debtor if the attempt at adjustment fails. He must go bankrupt to get the moratorium.

Financial interests regard the measure as an example of radical legislation, and several speakers said so at the Bankers Association meeting.

Increase Blamed on Lawyers.

Reports to the FCA are that the increase in the number of cases filed under the Frazier-Lemke act in the Second and Fourth Land Bank districts are attributable largely to a sysematic effort by some lawyers to get business.

Officials also said there were indications that some conciliation commissioners were cooperating with the atorneys in an effort to persuade debt-burdened farmers that the bill is the quickest method of relief.

Conciliation commissions have been set up in virtually every rural county in the country. A preliminary to the moratorium sections of the Frazier-Lemke bill is an attempt to scale down farm debts through the commissions, and the fee is increased if the farmer pleads bankruptcy. Officials said many of the commissions were composed of only one or two members.

No Accurate Data at Hand.

The Second Land Bank District includes Pennsylvania, Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland and Delaware; the Fourth, Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky and Tennessee.

Officials said they had no accurate data on the actual number of cases under the Frazier-Lemke bill, but their information was that comparatively few farmers had instituted bankruptcy proceedings outside the two districts. A possible exception, it was said, was the Seventh District, which includes North Dakota, Minnesota, Michigan and Wisconsin.

The constitutionality of the Frazier-Lemke act is in doubt. Only one Federal court has passed upon it, Judge Chesnut in Baltimore holding it unconstitutional in that it confiscated property without due process of law.

More Than Billion Loaned.

The FCA has loaned more than $1,000,000,000 to farmers in an effort to prevent foreclosures. Any wholesale resort to the Frazier-Lemke act would cause the Administration to lose heavily. Insurance companies and other concerns holding farm mortgage paper would lose also.

"We feel that the farmer should try voluntary means first," Scott Hovey, general counsel of the FCA, said yesterday. "We feel, too, that a great many farmers are being misled as to the applicability of the Frazier-Lemke bill."

FCA officials said that apparently there was nothing the Justice Department or other Federal executive agencies could do to prevent lawyers from soliciting Frazier-Lemke business.

First Lady Raps New Deal Foes

It was at a meeting of women voters in Buffalo that Miss Couch's criticism of the New Deal spurred Mrs. Roosevelt to a spirited defense of the President.

Denies Waste.

Pounding a fist into the palm of her hand, the First Lady, speaking to 1,200 women at Syracuse today, defended the Roosevelt Administration against charges that it was wasteful.

"I do not question for a minute," she said, "that there is waste in certain places. You do not always get the proper persons to get things done, but an honest effort is being made."

Groups of women, unable to get into the hotel ball room where Mrs. Roosevelt spoke, crowded around the entrances.

"I have yet to hear a man or woman candidate who has told you what they could, or would, do if they were in office in place of the people they criticize," Mrs. Roosevelt asserted.

Moses "Apologizes."

A demonstration during the speech of Miss Couch yesterday caught the attention of Robert Moses, Republican candidate for Governor, who also spoke in Buffalo last night. Boos mingled with cheers when Miss Couch asserted:

"It took the people of France four years to learn that their republic was no more when Napoleon became emperor, but the people in this country have learned in a year and a half that they no longer have a republic."

Moses' comment on the demonstration was:

"It was not representative of the intelligent thinking women voters of Erie County."

Mrs. Roosevelt will make another speech for Mrs. O'Day in New York City on November 1.

The First Lady defended the NRA in her Syracuse talk. "We have short memories," she said. "In the spring of 1933 people came to Washington and said 'take our business. Do anything with it to make it run.'

"Now the sick man is better and doesn't like 'regulation.' He wants to get back and make as much profit as possible. He doesn't think about his neighbors. But the only good we care about is the good of the people."

She emphasized that NRA codes "were made by the industries themselves. You get the idea that these codes were imposed."

Government borrowing she described as "a choice between two evils." "No one in the opposition that I've heard has told you what they'd do. They tell you what they don't like."

As to the budget, Mrs. Roosevelt said: "The budget for regular governmental expenditures is balanced."

Between You and Me

Upton Sinclair's Hopes Held Dwindling in California Election.

By Raymond Clapper

BETTING inside the Administration is that Upton Sinclair will lose in California.

The White House has cooled off toward him. Just after he became the Democratic candidate for Governor in California, Sinclair hurried to Hyde Park. The President kept him talking for two hours. As he left, the lean vegetarian beamed and dropped the sly hint that he thought he had some new ideas until he talked with Mr. Roosevelt.

Now comes the autumn frost. This week two important California Democrats landed in Washington on the same day. One was George Creel, defeated opponent of Sinclair and supposedly the Administration's fair-haired boy in that fight. Now he has declared against Sinclair's election.

The other arrival was Culbert L. Olson, Democratic State chairman of California, not an original Sinclair man but now managing his campaign and a loyal supporter. He tried to get an appointment at the White House. He was told that if he was received it would be only on condition that he not discuss politics. He said he didn't want to talk politics — heaven forbid! — and settled down to wait for an audience. He never was received, and left town without having met the President.

Secretary of Interior Ickes went to California to dedicate Hetch-Hetchy Dam and Sinclair asked him to make a speech for the ticket. Honest Harold refused. Harry Hopkins, who originally rejoiced publicly over Sinclair's nomination, also declined to speak.

When Sinclair came East he found Postmaster General Farley glowing with warm good will.

"Call me Jim," said Farley to the ascetic, hermit-like visitor. That does not exactly represent Farley's attitude now despite the mysterious alleged letter of indorsement which has just leaked out. Farley won't explain that letter. Others say it was a form letter sent in behalf of Democratic candidates in many States and that a typist wrote in Sinclair's name automatically, entirely innocent of the important fact that there are Democrats and Democrats. He doesn't speak of Sinclair for publication, now, there being no newspapers printed on asbestos paper at this time.

Behind the bonus vote of the American Legion at Miami is a curious cleavage between able-bodied veterans and the disabled. Arizona, one of the few States voting solidly against immediate payment of adjusted compensation certificates, has a legion membership 35 to 40 per cent of which is disabled. Virginia, which cast most of its votes against the bonus, has a new disabled veterans' hospital which President Roosevelt dedicated last week. Colorado was another of the few States most of whose delegates voted against the bonus. Disabled veterans feel that a large cash payment now to able-bodied veterans might prejudice aid for those who could not work if they found it. It's one of the arguments to be used against the bonus in Congress.

Word comes down from New York that members of the New York Stock Exchange have been complaining that a little group of insiders run it. The board of governors is selected from floor traders. But many of the largest investment houses with seats on the exchange have no floor members—that is, members who spend most of their time actually trading on the floor of the exchange.

These plain members say they are the forgotten men of the exchange, and they have been raising the devil about being regimented. Finally the floor members humored them to the extent of letting them set up a harmless advisory committee which is derisively referred to as the brain trust.

What made them really mad, though, was when they wanted to close the exchange on Saturdays. They saw no us in having to tear themselves away from their yachts and polo ponies and go into town for a two-hour session. The board of governors turned them down.

It just goes to show that everybody has his troubles.

President Roosevelt passed over one opportunity to point up his olive branch speech to the bankers. He could have told them that the first law passed under his Administration was a bankers' relief act. Public Law No. 1 of the Seventy-third Congress was the emergency banking relief act.

One explanation of Henry Ford's recent digs at the Administration may be that he has a cousin, Clyde Ford, running for Congress on the Republican ticket in Michigan. Cousin Clyde is a candidate in the Dearborn district which is dominated by cousin Henry's employes.

Japanese Deny They Support Oil Monopoly

(United Press.)

Official opinion here backfired quickly yesterday on an assertion by a Japanese foreign office spokesman that Japan had no responsibility for the Manchukuo government's maintenance of the "open door" policy in Manchukuo.

Officials here saw in this statement "an attempt to be clever in the shifting of stage props" in the Far East to make it appear that the Japanese government had had no hand in the Manchukuo government's announced intention to create a state oil monopoly closely allied with Japanese oil and financial interests.

The United States, Great Britain and the Netherlands have made formal representations to the Japanese government, protesting that such action violates the "open door" policy which Japan by treaty and by official public declarations is obligated to respect.

These representations inferentially hold the Japanese government responsible for action of the Manchukuo government, recognized by only one foreign country—Salvador.

Although officials here would not be quoted, they saw a close connection between the apparent attempt to "squeeze out" foreign oil companies operating in Japan and in Manchukuo and the naval conversations among American, British and Japanese delegations in London.

The Japanese in London officially have demanded a navy of parity strength with British and American fleets; abolition of so-called "offensive" naval units such as airplane carriers, capital ships and heavy cruisers.

Navy officials here said if the Japanese demands were met by the other powers they would give Japan, for all practical purposes, a fence around the mainland of Asia.

In such event they said the nations of the world could consider the "open door" policy in China ended for all time.

Officials here indicated no intention of following the Tokyo foreign office spokesman's suggestions that protests regarding the Manchukuo government's action be forward to the Chinese Nationalist government at Nanking. Joseph C. Grew, American Ambassador at Tokyo, will continue efforts to negotiate a settlement at Tokyo, it was stated.

In support of their contention that Japan has responsibility for maintenance of the "open door" policy in Manchukuo, officials cited numerous public declarations by Japanese government officials at the time the Manchukuo state was organized two years ago. The substance of these was that Japan would "do all possible" to maintain the "open door."

Move to Wreck Naval Sessions Laid to Nippon

Refusal to Fix Figures Is Basis of Belief in American Circles.

London, Oct. 26 (AP).—A belief was voiced in some American quarters tonight that Japan is trying to wreck tripower naval talks in progress here.

Refusal of the Japanese delegates to fix the maximum figure to which they would be willing to limit defensive ships gave rise to the belief they were seeking to entangle the conversations so compromise would be impossible, thus giving them an opportunity to abandon the discussions.

These American sources were convinced Japan would excuse her walkout on the plea the other two participating powers, Great Britain and the United States, would not give her sufficient rights under the new treaty she proposes to make her defensively secure.

Proposal Foreseen.

Once the conversations were at an end, the Americans believe, Japan would propose a nonaggression pact among the three powers to forestall any difficulties which might be entailed in a possible naval building race.

To the joint demand of the British and American delegations that Japan suggest a maximum figure for tonnage limitation, the Japanese proposed technical experts of the three powers set the figure.

Ambassador Tsuneo Matsudaira and Admiral Isoroku Yamamoto were described as feeling their proposal was fair.

At today's meeting with the British, headed by Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, Matsudaira and Yamamoto asserted Japan was willing to compromise on any technical basis provided basic principles of her plan are recognized.

Held Unsatisfactory.

The United States representatives, Norman H. Davis and Admiral William H. Standley, feel the Japanese procedure has been unsatisfactory, an opinion shared in some degree by the British.

The British and the Americans, irked at Japan's failure to disclose technical details of her plan, feel they know little more now than they did before the start of the conversations.

An authoritative American source today pointed to Japanese policies at Shanghai and in Manchuria as proof of the way Japan can act when she believes her security menaced, adding that Japan entered Manchuria and fought the Chinese at Shanghai on the plea of self-defense.

This excuse could be offered for abandoning the conversations here, he said. The Americans feel such action would please the Japanese public greatly.

Sinclair Loses New Deal Backing

Creel Raps Sinclair And 'EPIC' Plan

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—George Creel, unsuccessful candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor of California, in a letter made public today withdrew support of Upton Sinclair, the nominee.

Sinclair, he asserted, had deviated from an agreed modification of his "EPIC" plan.

"'Immediate EPIC,' I am sorry to confess, puts me back exactly where I was in the primary campaign," Creel wrote to Sinclair on October 18, according to the text of a letter published in the World-Telegram.

Withdraws Support.

"In its essence it is the original EPIC plan that I attacked as unsound, unworkable and un-American, designed to appeal to the credulities of ignorance and despair, and immeasurably hurtful in its effect on true progressivism.

"It is, therefore, with very real regret that must always be stirred by lost opportunities, that I withdraw my offer to campaign in your behalf."

"Let me say again that I do not question your honesty," the letter stated, "but you have a most amazing faculty of making yourself believe the things you want to believe.

"An example, take your repeated statement that you can and will end poverty in California, and that you won't take more than one or two, of your four years to do it. This is an optimism carried to the point of delirium.

"Economic Island" Hit.

"Your dream of creating an 'economic island,' alien and antagonostic to its immediate environment and to the rest of the country as well, is damned by every economist, yet you persist in it."

Creel said in the letter that as chairman of the Democratic State convention he found the platform drawn up was one to which "every true Democrat, every true Progressive, could subscribe without loss of faith or sacrifice of principle."

"In 'immediate EPIC,' however," he wrote, "what do I find on the back page but your original plan, set forth exactly as it was in the first edition of 'I—Governor of California.' The fact that the contents admit various changes and acknowledge necessity for certain postponements only aggravates the offense."

Merriam Takes Lead In Digest 'Straw' Vote

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—The Literary Digest's "straw" poll for Governor of California gave Frank F. Merriam, Republican candidate, a lead over Upton Sinclair of about two and a half to one, according to returns tabulated to date.

Of 62,208 ballots cast, Merriam was given 42,141, and Sinclair, Democratic candidate and "EPIC" proponent, 17,284. The percentage was 62.70 per cent of the vote for Merriam and 25.72 per cent for Sinclair. The rest was divided among three other candidates.

Coal Consumption Down.

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—Continued warm weather over a large area of the country has had an unfavorable effect on coal consumption, according to reports reaching trade circles covering the month of October up to date. An upturn in the number of oil-burning outfits installed during the period also was believed a factor in the sluggish market.

Public Works Plan Expanded For the Winter

Officials Prepared to Hire Thousands When Cash Is Available.

(Associated Press.)

An expanded public works and work-relief program took form yesterday as the Administration's main effort to pull the jobless through the winter and pace the recovery march toward more nearly normal employment.

Mindful of the approaching cold, officials rushed a compilation of projects on which thousands of men could be put to work quickly when and if Congress appropriates additional money.

Meanwhile, the prod was applied to speed construction of public and private buildings, roads, dams and other public works enterprises for which funds already have been allocated by the PWA, now virtually moneyless.

Projects Lagging.

In some instances, these projects have lagged, delaying the employment of many men who otherwise face a winter on the relief rolls. The effects of this speeding up process will figure largely in determining the scope of the new combined public works-work relief program now in the making.

Just how much money will be asked to finance this combined program, regarded by many as the successor to last year's Civil Works Administration, remains to be decided in the next two months.

Preparing to meet any emergency, the Relief Administration has developed projects on which 3,500,000 could be put to work within two weeks. However, Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins has said he is not counting on such an expansion, but rather intends to increase gradually the number doing work relief and decrease the number of direct relief rolls.

The work relief projects include such enterprises as making clothing and furniture and canning meats and vegetables for use of families receiving Government aid.

Road Jobs Included.

Among the Government departments asked to compile new construction projects are the Agriculture Department and the Bureau of Public Roads. The Roads Bureau is understood to have asked some State highway commissions to list highway and bridge projects that could be started within 30, 60 or 90 days.

In the Agriculture Department, officials are studying elevators or grain storage projects, to be located in rural areas to carry out the AAA's proposal for an "ever normal granary." The AAA seeks to have stored sufficient grain to avoid any possible food shortage, such as was threatened by last summer's drought.

Also being surveyed are plans for extending relief in rural and rural industrial communities through the existing rural rehabilitation program. Approximately 80,000 families are now being helped to keep house and home together through partial employment in leased factories, where a variety of goods are made.

U. S. Man in Reich Held for 'Treason'

Munich, Germany, Oct. 26 (AP).—Richard Roiderer, a naturalized American, was held here today on a charge of high treason.

He was arrested at Linau June 22, suspected of attempting to smuggle gold over the border, but this charge was dropped when notes of a political nature were found on his person. The American consulate does not know whether any military secrets are involved in the charge.

Roiderer came here to live with his aged mother in 1922. He taught languages in a business college.

Restored Pay To Be Provided By Estimates

Nine Old-Line Agencies Draft Preliminary Budget Figures.

could use $1,500,000,000 next year to advantage. Doubt generally is expressed that he will get anything approaching this figure.

Relief Administrator Harry Hopkins has been operating on a month-to-month basis, from pooled emergency funds doled out by the President. He estimates relief funds thus provided may last through March 1.

Biggest Treasury Drain.

These two New Deal agencies offer the largest potential emergency drain on 1936 Treasury finances, and a less generous policy affecting them might be regarded here as the turning point toward a balanced budget.

Members of Congressional appropriation committees feel the regular old-line departments have been cut to an almost irreducible minimum during economy drives over the period of the last three years.

From $4,478,507,979 in ordinary expenditures appropriated in the 1933 fiscal year, funds for these old-line agencies were reduced in 1934 to $4,088,000,000, and last year to $3,950,155,580.

Increased cost of materials has forced nearly all of these departments to raise their estimates for 1936, and particularly is this true in Army and Navy Departments, where food and quartermaster equipment for military personnel is a dominant item.

For this reason, the opinion prevails that any saving to be done must be effected primarily in emergency outlays.

Hearings in December.

Chairman James P. Buchanan of the House Appropriations Committee plans to open Congressional hearings on 1936 estimates early in December.

At least five withdrawals from his committee, due to election reverses and Administration appointments, will make a reorganization of the House group necessary.

At least two House appropriations sub-committees will have new chairmen, replacing former Representative W. A. Ayres, of Kansas, head of the Navy sub-committee, and Representative Ross Collins, of Mississippi, chairman of the Army sub-committee. Ayres is now a member of the Federal Trade Commission, while Collins withdrew from the House to run for the Senate.

anxious to go along with the Administration in promoting recovery.

"We think Jackson Reynolds (president of the First National, New York) expressed the sentiment of the overwhelming majority, if not the unanimous opinion, of the bankers in his speech," Mr. Hecht declared.

Willing to Make Loans.

Affirming that "the banks want to lend," the Louisianian added that Mr. Law has sent notices to clearing houses suggesting that their member banks advertise to acquaint the people of their willingness to make loans.

"We are going through with the program of cooperation," he went on. "Of course, the bankers can't lend if business does not borrow, but the bankers are making it known that they are anxious to do their part."

In deciding to name a foreign trade committee, the bankers followed a suggestion put forth by Mr. Peek in his address to the recent convention. Mr. Peek also will address the Foreign Trade Council next week, after which Mr. Hecht will issue a statement explaining the new plan, it was said.

Foreign Trade Is Aim.

Appointment of the advisory group was construed as an effort on the part of Mr. Peek to interest private capital in loans to promote foreign trade. The Export-Import banks were set up originally to supply credit in transactions which could not be financed through ordinary channels.

Meantime, it was learned definitely that no new moves toward stabilization of the dollar and the British pound are being considered by the Administration, despite the recent speech of United States Ambassador Robert W. Bingham in Edinburgh, Scotland.

Official said they had no knowledge of any such intentions, confirming indications that the Ambassador was speaking personally and not for the Administration when he declared, "in the long run, for the benefit of both Great Britain and the United States, I think the pound and the dollar should be stabilized in relation to each other."

Mr. Farley and Rubber Stamp Confuse Issues of Election

Can't Seem to Agree on Which Candidates Are O. K. to Indorse.

By Harry Ferguson.

In the great game of trying to get Democrats elected to office next month, the box score on the Democratic National committee tonight stood:

Assists—Zero.
Errors—Three.

A rubber stamp of the signature of James A. Farley, chairman of the Democratic National committee, caused some of the trouble, but it doesn't explain how the Democratic committee woke up and found it was urging the reelection in Tennessee of a conservative Republican.

Farley came out of the White House yesterday, a badly harassed man, to find that, unknown to himself, he had urged California voters to elect Upton Sinclair Governor. Sinclair used to be a Socialist, but now is a Democrat, and if you think that is confusing hear how the Democratic National committee got itself tied into knots.

Rubber-Stamped His Name.

The committee prepared a form letter to be sent to voters in various States. Candidates' names were to be filled in. At the bottom of it was Farley's rubber-stamp signature—in green ink—followed by this postscript:

"Friends of the Administration in Washington will be gratified for all your efforts.—J. A. F."

Farley is famous, among other things, for his penchant for green ink. He will use no other hue.

When those letters got loose in California, it looked like the Administration was indorsing Sinclair, which, from all indications, is one of the last things Farley wanted to do. The National committee denies such letters ever existed; another source said they were sent out by mistake.

Backs New Deal Foe.

That storm quieted down, and then somebody opinted out that Mr. Farley had been green-inked into urging Tennessee voters to reelect Representative Carroll Reece, a valiant Republican who fights the Democratic New Deal as often as he can get the floor, which is pretty often. Some office worker thought that Reece was a Democrat and filled in his name. Well, the Democratic committee marked that error up to profit and loss and figured that nothing else could possibly happen.

People kept on green-inking Mr. Farley's signature onto letters, and that brings us to the Montana situation. In the third paragraph Mr. Farley (still unaware of what a beating he was taking, of course) urged Montana voters to elect two Democrats to the Senate—Senator Burton K. Wheeler and James E. Murray. Things ran smoothly for about 80 words in that letter, and then, presto! Mr. Farley's mind was changed for him and he threw Murray overboard, urging Montana Democrats to elect "the Hon. Burton K. Wheeler and the Hon. John E. Erickson" as Senators.

Each State is entitled to two Senators, of course, so the suggestion that Wheeler, Murray and Erickson all be elected was not only unusual but downright unconstitutional. The Democratic committee couldn't fool the Montana voters, though, because most of them vaguely remembered that Erickson had been defeated in the primary weeks ago, and they put the error down to the fact that the stage coach to Washington probably hadn't arrived with the news yet.

Guess that's about all right now, but the letters are still going out and no man knoweth what the morrow will bring. Least of all Mr. Farley.

Western Australians Make Secession Plea

London, Oct. 26 (AP).—Four western Australian delegates came to London today to ask King George and Parliament to permit their state's secession from the Australian commonwealth.

A recent plebiscite held in western Australia, separated by more than 1,000 miles of waste land from eastern Australia, showed its people favored separation by more than 2 to 1.

Capone's 'Heir' Sent to Prison As Tax Evader

Humphreys, Public Enemy No. 1 of Chicago, Gets 18-Month Term.

Chicago, Oct 26 (AP).—Public Enemy Murray Llewellyn Humphreys, successor in rackets to Al Capone, fell heir today to the Capone fate as well and was sentenced to prison on his plea of guilty to the charge that he dodged his income tax bill.

Business genius of the gang that was wrapping its tentacles around the profits of bootleg liquor, cleaning and dyeing, linen supplies, laundries, teamsters' unions and bottled beverage trades in the latter days of Capone, Humphreys came home after 16 months in hiding and took what he knew was coming.

Pleads Guilty to Charge.

Agents of the Internal Revenue Bureau met him at the Indiana State line and escorted him to the Federal courthouse.

He was led before Federal Judge Charles E. Woodward and pleaded guilty to an indictment returned in June, 1933, charging that he tried to evade $23,190 taxes on an income totaling $169,561 for the three years ended in 1932.

Edwin Hess, the attorney through whom he had arranged to surrender, pleaded for leniency. Judge Woodward ordered Humphreys to Leavenworth Penitentiary for 18 months and fined him $5,000. He will have to pay his delinquent tax and interest besides.

Indicted 18 Months Ago.

Humphreys was already away on his voluntary vacation when the Federal grand jury indicted him 16 months ago. Besides that indictment—the same sort of weapon the Government had used to thrust the Capones, Al and Ralph, the Guziks, Sam and Jack, Frank Nitti, Frank Lake, Terry Druggan and others as notorious, into prison—Humphreys was also a fugitive from a year's jail term assessed in county courts for carrying a concealed weapon.

Humphrey was named public enemy No. 1 by the Chicago crime commission after Capone's forced abdication.

Prostrate Disciples Coax Gandhi Out; He Visits Congress

Bombay, India, Oct. 26 (AP).—The Mahatma Gandhi returned to the Indian Congress Assembly today, forced out of retirement by the weapon he himself invented—passive resistance.

Cheers greeted the leader as he arrived for the initial gathering of the party pledged to independence to India.

Gandhi's determination to withdraw from party activity was broken down by seven congress delegates, including two women, who lay stretched at full length on the ground near Gandhi's quarters for 30 hours, despite night chill and midday heat.

Thirty thousand visitors watched the opening proceedings of the congress. An attempt by Communists to invade the congress was repulsed by police. Ten were injured during another Communist demonstration near the camp.

Today's was the first meeting of the congress since 1931. During the government's vigorous crushing of all forms of subversive activities in recent years the congress was unable to meet in 1932 and 1933.

Mannequins, Irked At Junior League, To See First Lady

New York, Oct. 26 (U.P.).—Professional models of New York, angered at "job-chiseling" by society women, may appeal to Mrs. Roosevelt for support.

Gertrude Mayer, who is leading the insurrection of professional mannequins against what they call "unfair competition," thought the First Lady would be interested in their plight.

Miss Mayer said the threat to raid Park avenue for the debutantes' boy friends was not a joke.

A member of the Junior League laughed at the threat. "It's silly," she said. "If they could get the boys, they would anyway. If they can, let them have them."

U. S. Plans Meters To Check on Beer

end all controversy in re beer. And then along comes this meter.

When these meters are installed, every drop of beer that goes out of a brewery will be registered, just like electricity and gas are now. The Government will put seals on the meters, but right now the brewers are at the crossroads awaiting specific orders from the Treasury on whether you can use a sponge to dampen the seals or have to wet 'em with your tongue. Some time before December 1 the Treasury will come through with some rules—it always does.

By the time the Treasury and the brewers get through settling all the details in connection with the installation of beer meters, the members of the consuming public probably will have given up in despair and gone on a sarsaparilla diet. The good old days are gone forever, it seems, for any beer we get from now on will taste as if it had been liberally flavored with red tape.

A. F. L. Seeking New Auto Unit For Employes

Workers Are Reported as Dissatisfied With Wolman Board.

(Associated Press.)

A new automobile labor board, with power to hold employe elections, likely will be asked by the American Federation of Labor within a short time.

This was disclosed yesterday following a series of conferences between Francis Dillon, chief of the A. F. of L. auto organizers, and high Federation officials.

Dillon reported that union auto workers were dissatisfied with both the progress of the present Wolman board in settling discrimination cases and the employers' refusal to grant the outright sole recognition the union wants.

Restrained on Power.

The present board, headed by Dr. Leo Wolman and set up by President Roosevelt to ward off the threatened general auto strike last spring, was not given power to hold elections. The agreement provided that the A. F. of L. union and "inside" unions should be given recognition in proportion to their strength.

That settlement has been a thorn in the A. F. of L.'s side, particularly in view of the Labor Relations Board's decisions that the labor organization with majority strength should speak for all the employes in any plant.

Alfred Sloan, jr., president of General Motors, only last week reasserted that company's contention that any group of employes would be recognized for collective bargaining.

Bargaining Aid Seen.

Creation of a new board, the federation feels, might result in a similar decision for autos.

"The present Labor Relations Board has authority to delegate the power to order elections to the present Auto Board. Some time ago, however, Labor Relations Board members indicated they did not intend to delegate any such power to subsidiary boards for a while, if ever.

By act of Congress, President Roosevelt could create a new auto board, with powers similar to the Labor Relations, Steel and Longshoremen's Boards.

Pennsylvania Demands R. B. Mellon Inventory

Pittsburgh, Oct. 26 (AP).—The Commonwealth today demanded in court the immediate filing of an inventory of the estate of the late Richard B. Mellon, brother of Andrew W. Mellon.

Unofficial estimates of the tax the estate will pay Pennsylvania have ranged from $6,000,000 to several times that sum. One State official said he "had seen figures in Harrisburg" placing the value of the Mellon holding as high as $450,000,000. A spokesman for the family said such a sum was "ridiculously high."

Wife of Explorer To Have Appendix Out Before Cruise

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 26 (AP).—Most persons are willing to wait until their appendixes become troublesome before having them subtracted from their interior mechanism, but not so Florence, youthful society wife of William A. Robinson, wealthy Cambridge explorer.

Although Mrs. Robinson's appendix is as healthy as anyone could desire, she has decided to have it out now and conveniently, and not risk the experience her husband had last spring. While cruising in the South Seas in their ketch, Svaap, Robinson was stricken with appendicitis, and the appendix brust before a naval vessel with a surgeon aboard reached him.

The Robinsons soon will set out upon another distant voyage in the South Pacific, and Mrs. Robinson's appendix will not be included in the equipment.

Florida Captive Faces Lynching

sonville, Gov. Sholtz was urged to call out troops to prevent the lynching in a telegram sent by Mrs. William B. Cornell, chairman of the Florida council of the Association of Southern Women for the Prevention of Lynching.

The Dothan (Ala.) Eagle, published 40 miles north of here, said it had been told the mob was holding Neal four miles from the scene of the attack; and that a brother of the girl had been informed the lynching would occur "as soon as it gets dark." The mob, the Eagle said, had invited "all white folks to attend the slaying."

Greenwood has a population of about 400 persons and is nine miles north of Marianna.

Cannidy, the father of the slain girl, is an aged farmer.

Neal was taken from the Brewton Jail by a mob estimated at 100 men. Sheriff G. S. Byrne said the mob, which appeared in Brewton in automobiles with Florida license plates, covered an officer at the jail with a pistol and demanded Neal, declaring they were going to carry him to the girl's father.

Justice Department Won't Take Action

Attorney General Cummings last night studied reports of the plight of Claude Neal, colored, threatened with lynching, and decided there was no basis for Federal action, according to the Associated Press.

Reports that Neal had been transported across the State line from Alabama to Florida by a mob met the statement at the Justice Department that this was not in the scope of the Federal kidnaping statute, which applies to abductions involving ransom.

The Department said no agents have been detailed to the case.

Danger of Single Highway During Storms Cited in Petition.

Ocean City, Md., Oct. 26 (AP).—A petition bearing the signatures of more than 1,000 residents of this area requesting the construction of a coastal highway from here to the Delaware line has been filed with the State Roads Commission.

The petition, which was sponsored by Mayor W. T. Elliott, of Ocean City, former Mayor W. W. McCabe, and the mayors of Pocomoke City, Berlin and Snow Hill, points out that there is but one entrance and exit to Ocean City at the present time and that this fact is a cause of much apprehension on the part of residents when severe weather sets in.

Construction of a new highway, to the Delaware border, according to the petition, will provide another entrance and exit from Ocean City, and would afford protection to residents and visitors in the event of storms and high water similar to that which virtually marooned the entire area last year.

The proposed road, it is said, would give easy access to Fenwick, Bethany Beach, Selbyville, Rehoboth, Lewes, Cape May and other points to which there is now no direct route from Ocean City. The road also would open up an agricultural section and would serve to balance motor traffic in and out of the peninsula area, according to the petition.

The right of way is available at this time without cost to the commission, the document affirms, and the materials for building the road could be obtained cheaply and are close at hand. Cost of construction was estimated at $4,000 a mile.

Harry D. Williar, chief engineer of the State roads commission, said in Baltimore today the petition would be considered at the commission meeting Monday.

Administration to Seek a Prompt Decision by Highest Tribunal.

A prompt Supreme Court test of the railroad retirement act will be sought by the Administration to guide in drafting a program of social legislation to be presented at the January session of Congress.

Action of the District Supreme Court Tuesday in declaring the railroad retirement measure unconstitutional prompted Attorney General Cummings to intimate yesterday that the future of other bills of a similar nature would hinge to some extent on the decision by the highest tribunal on the retirement act.

"It is important," he commented in announcing plans for an appeal, "for the Supreme Court to pass on this act, not only for the particular purpose of a decision on the railroad retirement act, but to determine the scope to which any such acts can apply."

Officials reported that no substitute for the retirement act would be considered until after the Supreme Court ruling.

Other Administration social legislation will be sponsored by the economic security committee, including the Attorney General, Secretaries Perkins, Wallace and Morgenthau, Rexford G. Tugwell, Undersecretary of Agriculture, and Harry L. Hopkins, Federal relief administrator.

The committee will name a group of experts to aid in drafting old-age pension and unemployment insurance measures. The details of the bills remain to be decided.

Mr. Cummings also announced he would hold in abeyance a final decision on whether to prosecute the Houde Engineering Co., of Buffalo, N. Y., for failure to abide by the majority rule decision of the National Labor Relations Board until additional evidence is obtained.

The board ruled the company should recognize the United Automobile Workers, an American Federation of Labor affiliate, as collective bargaining representative for all of its employes because a majority of the workers voted for that group instead of a company union in a special election.

Insull Dividends Reported to Jury

Chicago, Oct. 26 (AP).—The Corporation Securities Co., in which investors lost $100,000,000, paid Samuel Insull $252,547 in cash dividends, the jury trying Insull on mail fraud indictments was told today.

Prosecutors produced evidence that Insull and other directors voted one of the dividends November 2, 1931, with $53,539 going to 11 of the men on trial.

That was 2½ months after the corporation became insolvent, according to earlier testimony by Government accountants. The charge was regarded as having important bearing on the civil suits which piled high against Insull during his unsuccessful flight to Europe.

Roosevelt's Three Sons Ushers at Cushing Debut

Boston, Oct. 26 (AP).—Miss Barbara Cushing, debutante daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Harvey W. Cushing of New Haven, Conn., formerly of Brookline, Mass., was presented to society here tonight with the three sons of President Roosevelt among her ushers.

Dr. Cushing is a famous brain specialist and a professor of medicine at Yale University.

Jury Acquits Judge Of Murdering Friend

Thomasville, Ga., Oct. 26 (AP).—City Court Judge Roscoe Luke, a former member of the State court of appeals, today was acquitted by a superior court jury of the murder of his former business associate and "best friend," Oscar Groover.

A coroner's jury, the day after Groover was killed while sitting in Judge Luke's automobile, returned a verdict of accidental death.

Killers of King To Be Returned, Premier Avows

Yugoslav Leader Pledges Fight to Uproot Terrorist Bands.

Belgrade, Oct. 26 (AP).—Premier Nikola Uzonovich today promised Yugoslavia his government will never rest until the assassins of King Alexander have been brought to Yugoslavia.

In the new government's first declaration before the full Parliament, he pledged, in addition, unceasing efforts to root out Yugoslav terrorists refuged in neighboring states.

(French authorities said the Marseille murder gang had been harbored in Hungary, and the Little Entente in its recent meeting at Belgrade discussed steps to end Balkan terrorism through international action.)

The premier had high praise for the child King Peter's dignity and courage in carrying out the first sad duties of his reign, and thanked the many representatives of foreign countries who attended Alexander's funeral.

"Their presence," he declared, "proved to us the high level to which the late King had succeeded in raising Yugoslavia's prestige abroad."

Uzonovich said the Yugoslav people had shown the world that Yugoslavia's enemies, who had hoped by Alexander's slaying to disrupt the country, had not succeeded.

To the cheers of the house, the cabinet chieftain declared his government would carry out Alexander's last testament to the letter and defend Yugoslavia to the uttermost.

"Supported by the united people and our army we need have no fears for the future," he said.

A proclamation issued by the new regency today declared the country "united internally and secure in its foreign relations."

Hauptmann Sheds A Tear on Baby's Visit to His Prison

Flemington, N. J., Oct. 26 (AP).—Bruno Richard Hauptmann held his baby, Mannfried, in his arms for a few moments today in sight of the cell where he awaits trial for murder in the Lindbergh kidnaping.

Tears were in his eyes as he took the child from the arms of Mrs. Harry O. McCrea, wife of the jail warden. The child laughed and otherwise showed his pleasure by jumping up and down in his father's arms.

During the few minutes Mannfried was in the bull pen opposite the cell Mrs. Hauptmann waited in the wire cage outside.

Mrs. Hauptmann took living quarters in the community today, intent on remaining until the trial is concluded.

Hauptman's reading matter today included a biography of Abraham Lincoln, after he had asked for literature on historical subjects. The prisoner remained awake until 4 a. m., reading the book.

physicians who summoned an ambulance.

Mrs. Esther Seifert, a neighbor in the same building, was visiting Mrs. Moffett. She stepped out for a moment and, returning, found her friend had disappeared.

Complained of Headache.

About noon, Mrs. Moffett telephoned her cousin, Dr. H. Lyman Hooker, and complained of a headache. He called about 2 p. m. and gave her some medicine.

Another physician, Dr. Francis Homans, said she had been ill some time and was subject to fainting spells.

Mrs. Moffett was the daughter of the late Dr. A. R. McMichael, of New York.

Her husband is the son of one of the original partners of John D. Rockefeller, sr., and he built most of his large fortune on the inheritance from his father.

Two other daughters, Mrs. J. F. Carlisle, jr., and Ruth Moffett, and two sons, Robert and Jackson Moffett, also survive.

Moffett Rushes by Air To Scene of Tragedy

James A. Moffett was informed of the death of Mrs. Moffett yesterday afternoon and left the Capital at once by airplane for New York, according to the Associated Press.

Word of the fatal fall was given the housing administrator by telephone. His aids reported he was greatly shocked and dropped everything to rush for the airport.

wehr and the Storm Troops reached the point of open clashes today at Innsbruck and Graz. In the former city police were called out.

Soicalist and Communist opposition, although suppressed, continued to harass the government. They were reported to be planning separate uprisings in upper Austria and upper Styria. It was reported troops, massed near the Yugoslav border since the Austrian insurrection in July, had been sent to the upper sections.

The Heimwehr leaders are demanding the nation's corporate Parliament be composed entirely of representatives of the auxiliary armed forces. Chancellor Sschuschnigg and other Catholic leaders are bitterly opposed to this.

TVA Is Target At Coal Chiefs' Sessions Here

Entire Power Program of New Deal Attacked as 'Unfair.'

Leaders in the coal industry yesterday expressed their disapproval of Government competition with private enterprise in general and the Tennessee Valley Authority in particular.

Meeting at the Mayflower Hotel, the National Coal Administration heard the New Deal's policy of invading the hydroelectric power field denounced as unfair on two grounds: First, that it constitutes unjust competition, and, second, that water power rather than coal is used to generate the electricity.

The Tennessee Valley Authority was quick to answer the attacks with a proposal that the coal industry and the TVA mutually arrange an unbiased investigation of the respective costs of water power and coal energy.

TVA Chairman Arthus E. Morgan made the offer in a personal appearance before the Bituminous Coal Research Division of the association.

Attack on TVA.

The most outspoken attack on the TVA was made at the dinner last night by Forney Johnston, counsel for the Alabama Coal Operators, who has challenged the constitutionality of the TVA in the courts.

After asserting that the coal industry has no right to protection against any law of obsolescence, and that it had no ground for complaint against Federal expenditures for relief, public works or "Federal waste," Johnston said:

"But when the Government crosses the line of governmental function and becomes a tradesman, it lays aside its sovereignity and violates the law. The industry with which it competes has the right to object, and that is precisely what the National Coal Association is doing—protesting against the subsidized mutilation of its legitimate market by the Federal Government in its vast and constitutionally indefensible power program."

Power Policy Hit.

A previous attack on the Government's power policy was made in a report by Charles O'Neill, chairman of the Government relations committee.

"The National Coal Association has persistently fought against the extravagant allotment of the taxpayers' money to uneconomic hydroelectric plants by the PWA and other Federal agencies. * * *

"Numerous bills for additional water power are sure to be introduced at the next session of Congress. The Administration will spare no effort to secure ratification of the St. Lawrence waterway treaty with Canada.

"It is currently reported that the President has it in mind to recommend the establishment of other valley authorities similar to the TVA.

Thirty-Hour Week Opposed.

"In the debauched state of public mind on the subject of Federal appropriations for local enterprises, it is going to be necessary for the bituminous industry to fight most strenuously to protect its interests against such unfair and unjustifiable public competition."

The committee also urged the association to express itself as opposed to the 30-hour-week bill, expected to be reintroduced in Congress.

Earlier the coal producers were told by C. E. Bockus, president of the association, that the industry would be headed for strikes, disorder and bankruptcy if code restrictions were removed.

He said it is essential that the industry protect itself against a return to "unbridled" competition.

"Continuation of code control, together with price regulation, would be satisfactory to me," he said, "but as yet I have seen no guarantee of such a happening."

U.S. Buys Big Tract Of Land in Georgia

Farm Rehabilitation Plan Will Be Launched.

Fitzgerald, Ga., Oct. 26 (AP).—Ten thousand acres of land near here has been sold to the Federal Government for $80,000 by Judge A. J. McDonald, Twight Rogers and the Wingate estate. The location of farm families on the land under the Federal farm rehabilitation program is planned.

The Jefferson Davis Memorial Park, owned by the State of Georgia, is almost in the center of the property, which lies in part on both sides of the Allapaha River.

The townsite of Irwinville, with its old courthouse and jail buildings, was included in the transaction.

70 Million Put In Home Repair

(Associated Press.)

The Housing Administration figured last night that $70,000,000 already has been invested in home repairs and modernization work.

Reports from banks said that 24,270 loans, totaling $10,485,000 had been made under the clause of the housing act which places a Government guarantee behind 20 per cent of a bank's aggregate losses.

Housing officials added that hundreds of other loans had been completed, but not yet reported to them. They estimate that for every dollar lent by banks between $4 and $4.50 in cash is spent privately for home repairs.

The housing campaign is being conducted throughout the country by 4,000 local committees, James A. Moffett, administrator, said. Nine thousand banks are cooperating.

The mortgage insurance phase of the housing act will go into effect November 1, and regional directors are meeting now to decide on regulations and prepare machinery.

Michigan Coed Admits Kidnaping Was a Hoax

Detroit, Oct. 26 (AP).—After three hours of questioning, police announced tonight that Elsie Waier, 21-year-old Wayne University coed, revealed that it was the burden of studies and not a kidnaping which prompted her disappearance here last Monday night.

The girl was found on a bus in St. Louis Thursday night by officers. Late today she returned by airplane to Detroit with her father, Vincent Waier, an architect.

Crime Institute May Be Result Of Study Here

School to Teach Scientific Detection Seen After December Parley.

Establishment of a criminological institute to train policemen in scientific methods of capturing law violators may result from Attorney General Cummings' crime conference here in December. The institute would be comparable to the United States Naval and Military academies.

Officials yesterday revealed numerous persons have displayed interest in plans for the parley. Participants will include legal, medical, sociological, scientific, religious, educational, civic, police, patriotic, welfare and service organizations as well as press, radio and movie representatives.

The conference is expected to act favorably on suggestions for establishment of a crime detection institute which would familiarize its students, preferably young men, with modern methods of solving mysteries.

One of the greatest evils of American police systems, officials privately commented, is the frequent changes in personnel due to political maneuvering. Proponents of the institute believe its graduates would be so well qualified it would be difficult for politicians to obtain their dismissal.

Financing a Question.

So far the institute idea remains in a tentative stage. One of the issues to be decided is whether it shall be financed by the Government or some private foundation. In any event, it is generally regarded as likely that experts of the Justice Department's famed Bureau of Investigation, headed by J. Edgar Hoover, will figure in its operation.

Those in charge of arrangements for the conference emphasized the Government would stay in the background and give the participants from private life an opportunity to draft their own recommendations. The Attorney General has indicated he hopes the conference will result in permanent cooperation between private and public groups in fighting crime.

The conference will pay particular attention to means of making local jails escape-proof, improving their sanitary conditions and preventing overcrowding.

Pardon Problem on Program.

Other problems to be considered will include ways of reducing the number of pardons, which total several hundred a year in some States; means of curbing paroles; methods of expediting court procedure and obtaining higher-type men for trial court judges; means of obtaining uniform criminal laws in all States; coordination of Federal, State and municipal police agencies; tentative plans for establishment of vagrancy preventive agencies; discussion of proposals for creation of State departments of justice, and organization of communities to fight crime.

President Roosevelt will address the opening session in Constitution Hall December 10. The other speakers will be announced later.

Dr. Gaines Speaks At Sweet Briar

Sweet Briar, Va., Oct. 26 (Spl.). "Whatever may have been the zone of enthusiasm from which it sprang, education was conceived in America as the development of capacity for ministry to the social order," Dr. Francis Pendleton Gaines, president of Washington and Lee University, said in an address on "The American Idea in Education" delivered at the annual Founders' Day exercises of Sweet Briar College in the college chapel today.

"Through all the centuries," President Gaines said, "various programs of satisfaction have been offered to the hunger of the mind, various modes of opportunity. There was the ancient speculation of the philosophers as to a way of life; there was the zeal of a mental aristocracy for pure learning; there was the mood of the continental renaissance, an eagerness to push far the boundaries of knowledge and at the same time to perfect individual accomplishment in art.

"No one of these impulses was basic in the launching of education upon these western shores. Variations in specific origin do not menace the singular unity of the American idea in education. Our school sprang first from the brow of evangelism, the handmaiden of the Lord; then it was established as a function of government, the guarantee of leadership and of adequate response; then it was the chosen medium of generous individuals who wanted to perpetuate the glorious privilege of youth. Yet from all these roots, the life of the plant, its flower and its fruitage were uniform."

Chanters to Give Warrenton Concert

Richmond, Va., Oct. 26 (Spl.). The Acca Temple Shrine Chanters, headed by Illustrious Potentate John E. Rose and Imperial Recorder James H. Price, will make a trip to Warrenton, Va., Tuesday and will give a concert that night.

The Warrenton Shrine Club is planning a gala ladies' night. The performance will be staged in a local theater. It is expected a large crowd from the surrounding country, which comes under Acca Temple's jurisdiction, will be on hand.

Others expected to make the trip are Charles A. Overton, A. Simpson Williams, J. Robert Beadles, Claude W. Woodward, Claude Guthrie, John Doyle, H. H. McCanna, Merrill Lee, Aubrey Pond, Henry Barnham, Maurice L. Tyler, A. H. Curtis, E. R. Dyson, Joseph I. Manst, E. F. Schmidt, Ramon W. Andrews, Joseph H. Bennett, Arthur Lambdin, Stuart Ragland, J. 'Numbers' Finance Crime Here, Third of City Plays, Say Police as well as among those who make handbooks on the horses or run card and dice "joints," there is constant conflict and innumerable feuds.

And Guns Bark.

Living thus in an atmosphere of peril, the gamblers either arm themselves or hire armed men to guard them or do their bidding. It follows that occasionally the guns will bark.

Virtually every spectacular shooting here in the last two years has involved gamblers.

In the case of the gambler, "Milsie" Henry, a gunman was imported here from Philadelphia to do the job. He was Charles Harris, who now is in the District jail awaiting the electric chair. Harris, according to the testimony in court, lay in wait for "Milsie" outside the latter's home off Sixteenth street and "rubbed him out" in professional style.

Had it not been for the fact that "Milsie's" bodyguard, John Kendrick, had got into trouble just prior to this, the Philadelphia gunman might not have been so successful.

He Shot a Policeman.

But Kendrick had been so indiscreet as to shoot a policeman and as a result he was behind the bars. Later he escaped from Lorton and joined the tri-State gang. Now he is at Alcatraz, Uncle Sam's so-called "Devil's Island."

Prior to the "Milsie" Henry killing, a young gambler named Tally Day was killed. "Bull - dog" city never before has known. Sweeney was arrested, but later released.

Last month Bryant MacMahon and Sam Melincov were killed. They, too, were gamblers.

In the language of the newspaper city room, all these were "cheap killings," nothing to get excited about. So long as gamblers killed each other, it was argued, what cared the upright citizen.

Innocent Man Slain.

But the other day the guns of gamblers—or of killers hired by gamblers—brought down a young fellow who himself was an upright citizen, who had the misfortune to be mistaken for somebody else.

That put a different face on things.

It has been related that Elmer B—— and thousands like him, by playing "numbers" and other games of chance, are supporting the lawless element that has made a shooting gallery out of Washington.

That is one view of it. But there are many Washingtonians who think this is the purest sophistry. It is like saying, they argue, that if it weren't for language there wouldn't be any profanity.

"What About the Police?"

The question such Washintgonians ask is, "What about the police?" What are they doing besides tagging automobiles?

The police say they are doing all they can with the laws they have. They point out that, under the existing code of laws, the numbers racket isn't even a violation. What is needed, they say, is a more drastic gambling law, and they plan to go before Congress this winter and again ask for one.

Meantime, it would appear that not only Washington's laws, but Washington's law enforcers are in for a period of scrutiny such as the

J. T. Waesche Is Dead After Long Illness

Son of Pioneer Merchant Succumbs at Thurmont at Age of 85.

Thurmont, Md., Oct. 26 (Spl.). James Theodore Waesche, 85, died yesterday after an illness of about three months. He was a son of the late Capt. Henry Waesche, pioneer farmer and merchant of Carroll County, and was born near Double Pipe Creek April 4, 1849.

Early in life Mr. Waesche removed with his parents to the home farm of Francis Scott Key, author of "The Star-Spangled Banner," near the Frederick and Carroll County line, and received his education in district public schools.

Mr. Waesche was one of 12 citizens of Thurmont who established an electric light and power enterprise in the town. Later he took over the plant. At the time of his death he was superintendent of the Mechanicstown Water Co. He was a Democrat but never held public office. Mr. Waesche was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, member of the Masonic order and a charter member of the Jr. O. U. A. M.

In 1875 he married Miss Cassandra Cover, daughter of the late Enos Cover, who died about three years ago. Two daughters, Mrs. Grayson R. Shaffer and Miss Margaret B. Waesche, Thurmont, and one brother, Charles A. Waesche, Baltimore, survive.

Funeral services will be held from the M. E. Church Sunday.

Henry Frank Lewis.

Culpeper, Va., Oct. 26 (Spl.).—Henry Frank Lewis, 56, game warden of Culpeper County and member of a prominent family, died yesterday at his home near town, where funeral services were conducted today by the Rev. J. T. Edwards and the Rev. G. W. Cox.

He is survived by his wife, the former Miss Sudie Lewis, and one son, Cadet William Lewis of Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Blacksburg, and the following brothers and sisters: Dr. Herbert Lewis, of Richmond; Dr. M. B. Lewis, and Enoch Lewis, of Culpeper; Russell Lewis and Mrs. John Frazier, of Richmond, Mo., and Mrs. G. B. Colvin, of Culpeper County.

Elton Tribby.

Hamilton, Va., Oct. 26 (Spl.).—Funeral services for Elton Tribby, 57, who died suddenly at his home in Hamilton from a heart attack, were held at the residence today.

Mr. Tribby was a native of Loudoun County and had spent the greater part of his life in the Hamilton community. He is survived by an only child, Mrs. Dean Tribby Weaning, of Hamilton; one sister, Mrs. Thomas Preston, Hamilton, and a brother, Carl Tribby, Baltimore.

Victor de Kalb Hickman.

Lovettsville, Va., Oct. 26 (Spl.).—Burial services for Victor de Kalb Hickman, 52, son of Mrs. M. M. Hickman and the late W. S. Hickman, of Lovettsville, who died last night in Georgetown Hospital, will be held at the Lovettsville Union Cemetery at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow.

He is survived by his wife, who was Miss Mary Henwood, of Washington; four children, his mother, seven brothers (T. P. Hickman, vice president of the Franklin National Bank, Washington; Roy Hickman, of Washington; H. W., B. D., E. Paul and Russell, of Lovettsville; Earl, of Pennsylvania), and three sisters, Mrs. Henry Barthel, of Clarke County, and the Misses Mary and Nina Hickman, at home.

Winchester Studies Fire Alarm System

Winchester, Oct. 26 (Spl.).—Installation of a modern fire-alarm system in Winchester is being considered by representatives of the four volunteer fire companies and members of the fire committee of the common council, it was learned today.

At a meeting attended by the committee, Mayor C. R. Anderson, Charles P. McVicar, commissioner of revenue; Lee Barr, fire chief, and others, it was decided to present a resolution to the council asking for a system to cost about $2,100.

Dr. Taylor Heads Carroll Red Cross

H. Peyton Gorsuch Named Vice Chairman.

Westminster, Md., Oct. 26 (Spl.). Dr. Clifford Taylor, of Westminster, was elected chairman of the Carroll County Chapter of the Red Cross at the annual meeting of the organization, held here yesterday.

Dr. Taylor succeeds H. Peyton Gorsuch, who has served as chairman for 14 years, and who declined to accept the nomination for reelection. Mr. Gorsuch was named vice chairman.

Other officers named were Mrs. Landon C. Burns, secretary; J. Albert Mitten, treasurer; Mrs. H. B. Speir, chairman of roll call; Miss May Grimes, chairman of junior work; D. Eugene Walsh, chairman of home service, and W. Carter Stone jr., chairman of first aid.

Prayers Urged For Recovery

Virginia Presbytery Votes to Send Petition to Roosevelt.

Charles Town, W. Va., Oct. 26 (Spl.).—The Winchester (Va.) Presbytery, closing its semiannual session here yesterday, voted a petition to President Roosevelt to call the Nation to "a season of prayer for National and spiritual recovery" by observing Thanksgiving Day and the three following days. Copies of the petition were sent to Governors of the four States in the jurisdiction of the Presbytery—Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania.

A commission was named to install the Rev. Allen Jones, of Stephens City, who accepted the call to the Opequon group of churches near Winchester, Va.

The Rev. H. H. Leach, of Duffields, W. Va., was named moderator, and Alfred Eppard, of Piedmont, W. Va., reading clerk. Contributions for the first six months showed an increase of 7 per cent and church attendance a percentage of 54, against the average of the United States, which is 34 per cent.

Virginian Takes 3 Flower Prizes

Awards Made in 8 Classes at Front Royal.

Front Royal, Va., Oct. 26 (Spl.). Mrs. Beverley F. Browne won three of the eight classes in the annual fall flower show of the Warren County Garden Club today, getting blue ribbons for her collection of roses, hardy chrysanthemums and her arrangement of flowers in small containers.

Mrs. Aubrey G. Weaver was first with an exhibition of large flowered chrysanthemums and an arrangement of flowers in large containers. The classes for a winter bouquet of garden flowers and for a general collection of flowers were won by Mrs. John H. Downing. The blue ribbon for a winter bouquet of berries went to Mrs. Harold W. Smith.

The classes were open to club members only. Mrs. C. L. Melton, Mrs. James Spencer and Mrs. W. A. Coleman, of Norfolk, were the judges.

Old St. Andrew's Homecoming Set

Leonardtown, Md., Oct. 26 (Spl.). Homecoming services will be held at Old St. Andrew's P. E. Church, near here, Sunday. The Rev. Calvert Buck, Washington clergyman, will be in charge of the morning service beginning at 11 o'clock.

Laymen's service, at 3 p. m., will be addressed by Dr. Sinclair Bowen, Howard Busey, R. O. Singleton and Rev. Clyde Brown, all of Washington.

St. Andrew's Church was built in 1775 and is one of the most beautiful of the old churches in Maryland. Rev. Jesse M. Woodrow is the rector. Music will be furnished by St. Alban's choir.

Wilson Murder 'Error' Scouted In New Theory

Montgomery Police Hint Slaying May Have Been Intended.

Possibility that the murderers of Allen B. Wilson, who was shot early Tuesday near Takoma Park, Md., actually had killed the man for whom they intended their bullets was voiced yesterday by Montgomery County authorities. State's Attorney Stedman Prescott intimated that the county police have been working on the possibility that Wilson was not slain when mistaken for "Mickey" McDonald, reputed Washington big-time gambler, in front of whose house Wilson was shot to death.

"Although the gangster theory appears most tenable," State's Attorney Prescott said, "we are not entirely satisfied that this was so, since some angles do not point entirely to the accidental murder theory."

In considering the possible deliberate murder of Wilson, police pointed out that the only place on Wilson's newspaper route that had a tree big enough to conceal an assassin was across from the place where he delivered his papers near the McDonald home. Police also asserted that the murderer might have considered the possibility that an attack on McDonald's life would be considered likely were the shooting of Wilson to take place there.

McDonald's usual procedure was to ride to the door of his home in a taxicab, without stopping at the driveway entrance, since he was well aware of the fact that he was "on the spot" after other attempts had been made on his life.

Wilson stopped and pushed a newspaper into the tube and then started off before the shooting began, police said. Furthermore, the weapons used, a 12-gauge shotgun and a .32 automatic pistol, are weapons available to any private citizen.

Investigation meanwhile was pushed by Metropolitan Police, cooperating with Montgomery County authorities.

Lieut. John Fowler, ballistics expert, and Detective Sergt. Floyd Truscott conferred with Montgomery County police and examined five shotgun shells from which came bursts of gunshot that riddled Wilson's automobile.

Returning from Montgomery County, Truscott and Fowler went into a long conference with Inspector F. S. W. Burke, chief of detectives.

All gambling establishments in Washington remained closed yesterday. Numbers operators, however, continued along their routes.

In Silver Spring funeral services were held for Wilson, the father of three small children. Burial was at Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Truck Hits Cows, Then Overturns

4 of Herd of 50 Crippled in Virginia Crash.

Winchester, Va., Oct. 26 (Spl.).—A truck and trailer, loaded with nine tons of box board en route to Baltimore, overturned today on Route No. 50, about half a mile southeast of Paris, Va., when the driver applied his brakes suddenly in an effort to avoid running down a herd of about 50 Government-owned cattle.

The cab of the truck was badly damaged, but the trailer escaped with minor breakage. The vehicle was the property of F. W. Foley, of Broadway, and was driven by Charles Miller.

Four of the cattle were crippled and two later were killed.

Woman Dies as Car Demolishes Wagon

Berlin, Md., Oct. 26 (Spl.).—Mrs. Jane Downs, wife of Sewell L. Downs, Whaleyville, was fatally injured last night when the wagon in which she was riding was demolished by an automobile operated by George Collins, Pittsville, Md.

The funeral will be held at the Methodist Episcopal Church at Whaleyville at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow.

Government Will Aid Fight Upon Disease

Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 26 (Spl.).—Washington County farmers will receive compensation from the Federal Government in fighting Bang disease, source of malta fever infection, the health department was notified yesterday by E. O'Connor Puts Off His Decision On Coast Job

Cites Major Problems in Present Post as Reason for His Delay.

J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency, who has been offered the well-paying post of Federal Reserve agent in San Francisco, last night said he would give no consideration to accepting the offered post until he had solved some of the major problems now before him.

The post of reserve agent, which includes the chairmanship of the directors of the Federal Reserve Bank at San Francisco, pays $25,000 annually. Mr. O'Connor now receives $12,000 annually, less the Government pay reduction.

Pacific Coast bankers have been anxious to have Mr. O'Connor named to the position and the Federal Reserve Board yesterday informally offered him the appointment. Mr. O'Connor is an ex officio member of the board.

Engaged in Liquidation.

"I have not given any thought to accepting this offer, and shall not do so until I have solved some of the problems of my present office growing out of the closed bank situation," Mr. O'Connor said.

Mr. O'Connor is making a vigorous effort to liquidate the closed National banks under his jurisdiction. In addition, it is expected, he will stay here for some time to advise the Administration regarding proposals for changes in bank legislation at the next session of Congress.

The Federal Reserve System has a committee, representatives of governors of the banks, the directors of the banks and the board studying the proposals. The Treasury likewise has a committee at work on proposed changes in the Federal Reserve and National bank acts.

The reserve authorities are particularly studying proposals to liberalize the provisions regarding paper eligible for discount in order to make the system more helpful to banks in rural and small communities where there is not a large supply of 90-day commercial paper.

Proposed Legislation.

One proposal is to ask Congress to make a permanent part of the reserve act and without reference to the emergency the authority given the reserve banks in the so-called first Glass-Steagall act, passed in 1932. The existing authority expires March 3, next.

Another proposal which has gained favor at the Reserve Board would give that body direct authority over the open market operations of the system. These operations, which consist of the purchase and sale by Reserve banks of Government securities, are now subject to the direction of an "open-market committee," consisting of one member selected by each Reserve bank.

The board at present may prescribe regulations regarding such operations, but they are directed by the committee and it is not compulsory for a Reserve bank to engage in such an operation.

The Reserve governors on the committee studying proposed legislation have urged that the law be changed to provide that four of the seven members of the Reserve Board be selected by the banks instead of the President. Privately, however, they admit there is not much hope for their proposal, since the trend is to increase the authority of the President over the system.

The Treasury experts have put forth a proposal to give the board veto power over the naming of governors of the banks, now selected by the directors of each bank.

Lady Furness Sharply Assails Mrs. Whitney's 'Mud Slinging'

Rebukes Her for Effort to Adopt Gloria, 'An Only Child.'

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—A sharp verbal attack on Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney was made today outside the door of the courtroom where she and Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt are contending for the custody of the latter's 10-year-old daughter, Gloria.

The former Lady Furness, twin sister of Mrs. Vanderbilt, asked:

"Why should people in glass houses sling mud? That woman has always had all she wanted.

"Why should she want to adopt this child when the asylums are full of lovely children who would appreciate being adopted? Why should she want to adopt my sister's only child?

"If Mrs. Vanderbilt had four or five children, I could understand her trying to do this because she was fascinated by the child. But why is she trying to do this when my sister has only one child?"

Lady Furness, who crossed the Atlantic to testify in Mrs. Vanderbilt's defense, said she had not seen her mother, Mrs. Laura Kilpatrick Morgan, since her arrival. Mrs. Morgan has aligned herself with Mrs. Whitney, testifying that Gloria, heiress to $4,000,000, was treated by her mother like a "poor orphan."

All day yesterday and most of this morning, Lady Furness was on the witness stand. She was succeeded by Mrs. Olga Wright, the wife of the former Vanderbilt butler and Mrs. Vanderbilt's personal maid before the employment of Marie Caillot.

She is understood to have replied to the testimony of Mlle. Caillot, whose statements linking Mrs. Vanderbilt and the Marchioness of Milford Haven made Supreme Court Justice John F. Carew close the court to press and public on the third day of the trial.

Again accompanied by a trained nurse, Mrs. Vanderbilt came to court late this afternoon and remained only a short time.

Phoenix, Ariz., Oct. 26 (AP).—Official efforts to eject aliens from Salt River Valley farming land were renewed today by T. E. Scarborough, deputy county attorney.

The State law prohibits ownership or leasing of land by aliens.

Farm Loans Go To $37,000,000

U. S. Land Bank at Baltimore Frees Mortgage Cash.

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 26 (Spl.). Approximately $37,000,000 of dammed up farm mortgage money has been released during the past 17 months by the Federal Land Bank of Baltimore and land bank commissioners in the District, according to an announcement by Charles S. Jackson, president of the banks.

Mr. Jackson reported that of the total amount of money advanced by the bank and the commissioner, $14,974,600 was loaned in Virginia, $13,700,000 of which was used for refinancing purposes.

In Maryland, $8,977,400 has been loaned of which $6,300,000 was for refinancing purposes and in West Virginia the total was $4,751,800 of which $4,200,000 was for refinancing.

The 17-month period was from June, 1933, to October 15, 1934.

Democrats Set Anne Arundel Rally Tonight

Gov. Ritchie and Running Mates on State Ticket Due to Speak.

Annapolis, Oct. 26 (Spl.).—Anne Arundel County Democrats are planning a big rally in the House of Delegates Chamber at the State House tomorrow night. It will be in the nature of an anti-climax of the party's local campaign, as a county-wide rally will be held Thursday at Crystal Beach, Magothy River.

Indications are that the Republicans will have the last say so far as Annapolis is concerned, their rally is being arranged for Saturday night of next week.

State Senator Ridgely P. Melvin, candidate for reelection, will preside over the Democratic meeting here, and Gov. Albert C. Ritchie and his running mates on the State ticket are listed among the speakers, in addition to United States Senator Millard E. Tydings.

Harry W. Nice, Republican candidate for Governor, will be the chief speaker at the G. O. P. rally, and Mayor Walter E. Quenstedt, of Annapolis, candidate for clerk of the Court of Appeals, will preside.

Candidates for local offices of both major parties are conducting a round of campaign meetings in the districts. Democratic clubs of Annapolis and Eastport have been particularly active in this respect.

Figures compiled by Clinton S. Shaw, clerk to the county supervisors of election as a result of the recent new registration, show that on affiliation the Democrats have a margin of close to 2 to 1 on the Republicans. The total registration is 27,498, of which 18,024 are affiliated as Democrats, and 9,071 as Republicans.

Canned Goods Steady.

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—Trading in canned goods continued routine during the present week, according to reports reaching the trade. Some good business, however, was reported in squash and pumpkins and some sellers reported a satisfactory demand for grape fruit.

Training School Short of Funds, Report Holds

Home for Feeble-Minded Always Hampered, Jones Says.

The District Training School for the Feeble-Minded, at Laurel, Md., "from its beginning has been hampered at almost every turn by lack of money to do very essential things," Kenneth B. Jones, former superintendent, said in his annual report for the last fiscal year, made public yesterday. "Necessary utilities and accommodations have been provided only long after the need for their existence was pressing," Mr. Jones said.

"In consequence, makeshifts have been frequent and almost the rule. Never has it been possible to plan adequately for present needs with any hope that such plans would be carried out."

The institution, he added, was situated far from the eyes of the average District resident. Its inmates were the children of "the poor, the unfortunate and the mentally subnormal,' 'and the institution "has not had the weight of influential personal contacts that ordinarily demand support in other fields."

The indictment of the institution by the former head was admitted by District officials to be the more severe inasmuch as there was no "sour grapes" involved. Mr. Jones resigned to accept a higher paid job, with more authority and more money with which to work in another State.

The daily average of inmates in the last fiscal year was 462 mentally subnormal children. This was an increase of 15 per cent over the year before.

Two Sued Here On Race Forms

Chicago Publisher Asserts Rodier, Murphy Copy His Material.

The Daily Racing Form Publishing Co., of Chicago, yesterday obtained from Justice F. D. Letts, in the District Supreme Court, an order requiring Henry T. Rodier and J. M. (Jack) Murphy, who are connected with The National Scratch Sheet and The Daily Sporting News, to show cause why they should not be enjoined from encroaching upon copyrighted material appearing in the Racing Form.

Through Attorneys Wilton J. Lambert and Rudolph Yeatman, the plaintiffs claimed they expended several hundred thousand dollars a year in getting material for their "horse race charts." They claimed they had, by a "decoy" system, learned that the defendants had in 27 instances copied their form charts and had published them.

Affidavits from the Racing Form officials, purporting to show that errors had been deliberately made in their charts so that the errors would be picked up by any company that reproduced them, accompanied the petition.

John J. Preller, Jeweler, Is Dead

One of Oldest in Capital Passes at Age of 77.

John J. Preller, 77, of 122 Todd place northeast, one of the oldest manufacturing jewelers in Washington, died early yesterday at his home after a brief illness.

Several years ago Mr. Preller, who operated a firm here for many years, retired. A native of Baltimore, he came to Washington 60 years ago.

Mr. Preller was a member of St. Martin's Catholic Church and the Holy Name Society of St. Martin's.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Catherine D. Preller; three daughters, Mrs. W. W. Williams, Mrs. A. Andrew Kramer and Miss Margaret Preller, and four sons, Clement F., John, jr., Walter L. and Francis J. Preller, all of Washington.

Funeral services will be held at the home Monday at 8:30 a. m., followed by mass in St. Martin's Catholic Church. Burial will be in St. Mary's Cemetery.

5,000 Cities Told Of Planning Needs

Chicago, Oct. 26 (AP).—Charles E. Merriam, member of the National Resources Board and professor of political science at the University of Chicago, said tonight that cities of the United States face a bigger job of civic planning in the future than they ever have in the past.

Addressing the American Municipal Association, which represents 5,000 municipalities throughout the Nation, Dr. Merriam said the modern city must include plans for housing, recreation and social welfare; plans for a metropolitan area; adjustments to county and rural planning, and in many instances must plan for interurban conditions.

Charles S. Ascher, former executive director of the National Association of Housing officials, told the association that all indications from Washington show that the National Administration intends to back public housing more strongly than ever.

Ellen McAdoo and Film Actor, Back Home, Deny Elopement

Their Intended Nuptial Day Passes With Plans Still Indefinite.

Los Angeles, Oct. 26 (AP).—The intended wedding day of Ellen Wilson McAdoo and Rafael Lopez de Onate found the principals in seclusion, the prospective bride saying she didn't know what to do and the film actor disclaiming any plans for eloping.

Fears expressed by William H. Neblett, law partner of Ellen's father, Senator William G. McAdoo, that the couple had eloped despite threats the girl would be cut off from her $10,000-a-year income proved unfounded. They appeared early this morning and announced they had had not been married. The wedding had been set for today.

"I have no statement to make other than I made before," said Miss McAdoo upon her return home. "Our marriage plans are indefinite."

The marriage license applied for in Riverside Monday by the 19-year-old granddaughter of President Wilson and the 38-year-old film actor had not been issued.

Miss McAdoo's parents objected to the marriage and the Riverside County clerk said he would not issue the license unless De Onate, known on the screen as Ralph Navarro, could prove he is of Spanish blood, as he claims, and not Filipino.

When Miss McAdoo came home early this morning it was learned she and the actor had been visiting at the homes of friends.

Keep Smiling! Worry's Found To Be Chief Cause of Baldness

Depression Made Hair Fall at Rapid Rate, Expert Discloses.

The bald-head row is growing. It's because there are more bald heads. And that's because of the depression.

At least that's what one of the Nation's best-known scalp specialists reports after looking over the balance sheets covering business done during the last five years in his scalp-treatment establishments in 32 American cities.

And Washington hairdressers yesterday backed him up. Said one: "Depressions cause worry, and worry causes your hair to fall out."

Said another:

And another:

"Worry upsets the nervous system. An upset nervous system is one of the causes of falling hair."

The scalp specialist who made the Nation-wide survey, which included Washington, said the potential enlargement of the bald-head row runs all the way from 10 to 25 per cent. Washington scalp treaters said they hadn't kept any statistics on baldness, but they believed the increase here to be something like that.

But skin disease specialists at the United States Public Health Service, who haven't been keeping track of the rise and fall in bald heads either, said they didn't believe bald headed men were such great shucks at worrying, and that the principal causes of falling hair were:

1. Seborrheic dermatitis, which is nothing more or less than dandruff.
2. Disturbances of the ductless glands, which is something you should ask the Public Health Service to explain.
3. Senile change, which means that you are growing old, that your glands are wasting away, and that your hair probably is tipping you off ten years or so in advance.

Furthermore, the Public Health Service will tell you baldness sometimes runs in families, an hereditary trait, that there have been bald-headed men for centuries, the Bible mentions them, and that if your hair is falling out, the thing to do is to see your physician.

Warning Sounded Against Halloween Vandalism on Cars

An appeal to parents to warn children against damaging cars in their Halloween pranks was made yesterday by the District of Columbia Club of the American Automobile Association.

"The annual loss to motorists due to the over enthusiasm of Halloween celebrants usually runs into a huge sum," the association said, "and a greater part, if not the entire loss, could be prevented. In many instances, it may be attributed to children who do not realize the damage they are causing."

The A. A. A. has also appealed to school authorities to cooperate in a movement to assure Halloween celebrations without damage to cars.

15 Mexicans Slain In Religious Ambush

Mexico City, Oct. 26 (AP).—The Chamber of Deputies was informed tonight that 15 persons were ambushed and killed in a fight between militant Catholic elements and local authorities near Tanhuato, Michoaca.

The ambuscade, deputies were told, was arranged by a religious faction.

298 on Year's Roll At Industrial Home

74 Girls Among Those Sent to School.

There were 224 boys and 74 girls cared for in the Industrial Home School at Wisconsin and Massachusetts avenues in the last fiscal year, according to the annual report of Earl W. Cassie, superintendent, made public yesterday.

"The children," Mr. Cassie said, "represent, in the main, behavior problems and many of them have been on probation from the Juvenile court prior to their commitment. Our chief function, therefore, is the care of children who have failed to make a satisfactory social adjustment in their homes, in school and in the neighborhood environment."

Verne Sankey's Widow Is Cleared in Kidaping

Sioux Falls, S. Dak., Oct. 26 (AP). Mrs. Fern Mae Sankey, widow of Verne Sankey, gangster, tonight was acquitted by a Federal court jury of a charge of conspiracy in the Charles Boettcher 2d kidnaping.

It was Mrs. Sankey's second trial on this charge, a previous jury having disagreed.

Non-Ferrous Metals Found Improving

Lead and Zinc Advance in Prices; Copper Rises in Foreign Marts.

New York, Oct. 26.—With major non-ferrous metals moving into consumption at a moderately higher rate, contrasted with last month, the general tone of the market is gradually improving, Metal and Mineral Markets reports in its issue this week. "During the last week higher prices were named for lead and zinc.

Domestic copper was held to be steady, and producers as well as custom smelters see nothing in the immediate situation to upset the market.

The rise in the foreign price of copper attracted wide interest. Tin was inactive, but somewhat higher on the movement in sterling exchange."

Copper Higher Abroad.

"The feature in the market for copper from a price standpoint was the rise in prices abroad.

The average price obtained on copper sold yesterday that was reported to M. & M. M. was 6.85 cents, c. i. f. European ports, against 6.425 cents a week ago. Demand for copper abroad was fairly active.

"Sales of domestic copper for the last week totaled 3,600 tons, against 3,300 tons in the week previous. So far this month domestic sales have totaled 10,185 tons, a figure within a few thousand tons of clearing the book of custom smelter copper plus the deficit incurred in September."

Good Call for Lead.

"A fair lead business was booked last week, particularly on Thursday and Friday. The weekly total volume of sales, however, was only a little better than half that for the preceding seven-day period.

The bulk of the tonnage sold changed hands at 3.70 cents, New York, and 3.55 cents, St. Louis.

"The market for prime Western zinc scored a net gain for the week of 5 points. Inquiry for zinc seemed to improve in the last few days, and some fairly large lots changed hands, including early 1935 delivery metal, at the higher figure. One lot sold at 3.825 cents, but the quantity was too small to influence the average for the day."

Cummings Bars Movie Depicting Career of Purvis

The man-hunting activities of Melvin H. Purvis and other Justice Department men will not be portrayed on the screen with the approval of the department, the Associated Press says.

Attorney General Cummings said yesterday the reported plans of a Hollywood motion picture company for a film centered around the careers of Purvis, who tracked down John Dillinger and "Pretty Boy" Floyd, and other Federal agents, did not meet with the department's approval.

"Those things are not in accord with our ideas," he said.

Banker's Death Holds Motorist For Grand Jury

Driver in Otterback Crash on Wrong Side of Street, Says Witness.

Roy Reynolds, 45, carpenter, of the 900 block of Twelfth street northwest, driver of the automobile which struck and injured fatally Maurice Otterback, 72-year-old chairman of the board of the Anacostia Bank as he rescued a young woman from its path Monday, was held for the grand jury after a coroner's inquest yesterday.

Witnesses testified that Reynolds was passing on the wrong side of the street car from which the banker and Miss Elizabeth Wayland, 23, of the 100 block of Todd place northeast, the girl whose life he saved, alighted.

The accident occurred as Mr. Otterback was on his way to the bank. As he and Miss Wayland left the car, he saw the automobile bearing down upon her, and with a thrust of his arm shoved her to safety. The effort threw him off his balance, and before he could regain it, the automobile had knocked him to the street. He died at Sibley Hospital of a skull fracture a short time later.

Mrs. Mauriel Elgin, a teacher at the Congress Heights School, who was in the machine behind the street car, testified she saw Reynolds' automobile pass the street car on the wrong side at about 35 miles per hour.

Funeral services for Mr. Otterback were held yesterday afternoon at Trinity M. E. Church. Burial was in Congressional Cemetery.

Mr. Otterback is survived by his widow, Mrs. Annie A. Otterback, and a son, Raymond Edwin Otterback.

THEY SAID HE WAS THROUGH

When Clark Griffith hired Joe Cronin as the youngest manager in baseball, his critics (and there were plenty of them) referred to his action as a "noble experiment" and "Griffith's Folly." Those critics were forced to eat their words when the youngster, Cronin, led the Nationals in 1933 to their first pennant since Bucky Harris' triumph of 1925.

And now the shifting tides of baseball have swept Joe Cronin northward into the managership of the nouveau riche Boston Red Sox. The young man who married the boss' adopted daughter and then lost his job has been kicked upstairs into a five-year contract as manager of the American League's richest ball club.

A failure in the minor leagues . . . tried and found wanting in his first big league trial . . . Cronin fought his way back to the majors and rose to a regular berth with Washington . . . then became most valuable player in the league . . . playing manager of the Nats . . . winner of the league pennant in his first year as a pilot. Then, last season, the Nats collapsed . . . the end of the season found them in seventh place . . . and the critics whispered that Cronin was through.

But yesterday he was sold to the Red Sox for the highest price ever paid for a player in the history of baseball . . . a price tag that eclipsed the $106,000 paid for Lefty Grove and the $125,000 paid for Babe Ruth.

In tomorrow's Post . . . Shirley Povich, sports editor, known to tens of thousands of fans of every sport . . . particularly baseball . . . and Cronin's personal friend for years . . . tells the dramatic story of the Irish kid from San Francisco whose up-and-down career reads like fiction.

Ritchie Assails Nice Plan to Cut Auto Tag Fees

Governor Makes Attack on Rival Before 5,000 at College Park.

The ability of Harry W. Nice, Republican Gubernatorial candidate, to conduct the business of Maryland, was challenged last night by Gov. Albert C. Ritchie before 5,000 listeners in the Ritchie Coliseum in the University of Maryland.

Before what was described as the largest political gathering in the history of Prince George's County, Gov. Ritchie attacked the proposal of his opponent to reduce motor license tags to $2.

Earlier, the standard bearer of the Democratic party in Maryland had addressed another rally at the county courthouse in Upper Marlboro. A motorcade of 3,000 automobiles escorted the Governor to the Ritchie Coliseum.

Assails $2 License Plan.

In his attack on the Nice license tag plan, the Governor said:

"I'd like to have them. We'd like to have them for $1. We'd like to have them free. The ignorance in public affairs of the gentleman who made the statement that $2 tags are possible shows what such ignorance sometimes leads them to say."

If revenue from registration fees or gasoline taxes are lowered, he said, the Government will step in and reduce Federal road aid by one-third.

"Mr. Nice knows that," Gov. Ritchie added. "He has been told if fees are reduced, revenues are reduced, that is simple subtraction. Then, under that, we would be 'docked' by the Federal Government."

Opposes "Inexperience."

Herbert R. O'Conor, candidate for attorney general, conceded that Mr. Nice had much experience in the trial of criminal cases, but asserted that the Republican candidate has had no experience in handling the great problems of the Maryland government.

"This is no time," he said, "to place the helm of the State government in the hands of inexperienced persons."

T. Howard Duckett, president of the Maryland Bar Association, presided at the meeting in the university, held under the auspices of the Young Men's Democratic Club of Prince Georges County.

Others in the group included James Young, candidate for clerk of the Court of Appeals; William S. Gordy, candidate for State comptroller, and George L. Radcliffe, candidate for United States Senator.

If a single Democratic candidate loses in the Maryland elections, November 6, the Republicans will construe it as a direct slap at President Roosevelt and the New Deal, Gov. Ritchie told a Democratic rally audience in the courthouse at Marlboro.

"If a $2 automobile license tax is put into effect in the State of Maryland, the Commonwealth will lose approximately $2,178,000," Gov. Ritchie said.

'Y' Skyline Drive Tour Planned Today

A series of scenic tours will be conducted by the Y. W. C. A. in the next few weeks. The first tour will start at 9:30 a. m. today and will be through the newly opened Skyline drive, returning by way of Swifts Gap, Rickersville and Culpeper.

A week-end trip to Natural Bridge, Va., will be held next week, giving the tourists an opportunity to visit Endless Caverns. On November 17 the tourists will visit Fredericksburg and will view battlefields of the Civil War.

Nice Bitterly Attacks Ritchie Hold on State

G. O. P. Candidate Again Makes Plea for Cut in License Costs.

Flaying the Ritchie administration for "extravagance and incompetence," Harry W. Nice, Republican gubernatorial candidate at Rockville last night reiterated his promise to reduce the cost of automobile license tags to $2 annually.

Mr. Nice made a lengthy reply to Gov. Ritchie's charges that the automobile license tag fee could not be reduced without seriously impairing the financial condition of the State. The Governor has denied he ever promised a reduction to $2 and has contended that the Federal Government would withdraw large sums of road funds if the tag fee were lowered.

Speaks at Two Meetings.

The Republican candidate spoke to a crowd of 800 which jammed the Rockville High School, and later to a meeting of colored voters nearby. Both meetings were held under the auspices of the Republican county committee and did not deal with the issues raised by the Montgomery County Fusionists.

With his arm in a sling, Mr. Nice at one point in his speech fired on E. Brooke Lee, former Democratic county leader. Referring to Mr. Lee's membership on the State Roads Commission, Mr. Nice said it might be expected that Montgomery County would have good roads.

"But the only good roads built in Montgomery County are around Brooke Lee's property, I understand," he said.

Criticize Long Term.

Mr. Nice criticized Gov. Ritchie's long continuance in office and contended that four years was sufficient for any man to be Governor.

He said that he did not desire the office for longer and that his only motive in running was to "return the State government to the people and bring order out of chaos and confusion."

He insisted this was not an ordinary political campaign but "a crusade of the citizens of Maryland striving to obtain decent government." He said he was not fighting Democrats but an organization "drunken with arrogance and power."

Leveling his attack on the banking situation in Maryland, Mr. Nice said that most banks had been honestly operated and that his criticisms were directed at what he termed the "political banks." He said if elected he was going to "probe to the bone the politically-controlled banks and let the chips fall where they may."

Assails Bank Structure.

The Republican candidate sharply assailed "the incompetent banking supervision" in Maryland which he said was responsible for the failure of a number of banks. He dwelled on the suffering of aged men and women who have lost their life savings in bank failures.

Mr. Nice contended that the cost of government in Maryland is much too high and that for political purposes the Ritchie administration had cut seven million dollars out of its present budget. He argued that much more could be saved by a Governor who wished to serve the State "instead of building up a political machine."

As an illustration, he contended that out of $12,000,000 received, the State roads commission "had spent $6,000,000 building up a political machine, $2,000,000 on roads, and I don't know what happened to the rest."

Takes Up Fee Issue.

Turning to the license fee controversy, Mr. Nice said that Gov. Ritchie in 1922 had promised Maryland motorists to reduce the tag tax, but that now he was repudiating his promise "on the theory that the Federal Government would abandon him," and he added, "this is the same Federal Government that his administration has been antagonizing until a few weeks ago when the exigencies of political contests caused him to cry aloud for help."

He said that Gov. Ritchie should know that $2 tags "are possible through the simple expedient of plugging the leaks in his administration by the elimination of waste and extravagance in his State roads commission and other departments." He cited figures to show how the loss of revnue could be made up.

Other speakers at the meeting were Joseph I. France, Republican candidate for the Senate; Fred P. Adkins, candidate for State comptroller; Harold C. Smith, county Republican leader, and George Henderson, candidate for attorney general.

The candidates spoke briefly, while Mr. Smith made a plea for the election of Frederick N. Zihlman, candidate for Congress, who could not be present. Thomas L. Dawson, chairman of the Republican county committee, presided.

Old Car Users To Pay Higher Taxes for 1935

NRA Boosts in Valuation Means Bigger Levies on Same Autos.

District owners of old automobiles are to get a taste of the operation of NRA codes in the form of increased taxes they must pay the District before they can hand over their dollar and get license tags for next year.

Taxes which must be paid in December will be higher on some old automobiles than they were on the very same cars last year, despite the fact these same automobiles have had the additional depreciation of a year of wear and tear.

This comes about through the code authority for the used car business. The code dictators have increased the specified values of all makes of automobiles. Some they have decreased. Most have been increased so that their value is higher this year than last.

The code prices are set forth in the automobile "blue book." This is the book which has been taken by the District assessor as the guide for setting the taxable value of an automobile. The assessor has set only one rule not in accord with the book. That rule is that no car which is worth running is worth less thna enough to justify payment of $1 personal tax. The personal tax on automobiles, aside from that exception, is $1.50 for each $100 assessed value.

Charles A. Russell, deputy assessor, yesterday refused to compute what the arbitrary increase in used car values would mean in the form of increased taxes for District automobile owners. So did others. It was too complicated and involved, they said. They agreed, however, it would mean many extra thousands in revenues to the District.

Fox Wins Point in Suit Over $1,000,000 Note

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—William Fox won a point today in his efforts to prove he was the victim of a conspiracy to saddle him with a $1,000 note.

Fox was granted the right to examine William E. Atkinson, now president of Fox Theaters Corporation, as to whether there was a conspiracy with the Chase National Bank and others to force Fox to pay a $1,000,000 personal guarantee on the purchase price of the Roxy Theater.

Car Sought Speeding Away With Schoolgirl

Hartford, Conn., Oct. 26.—Police tonight were seeking to trace a car in which 9-year-old Patricia Henry was taken from a boarding school here. The car left in the direction of New York.

The girl's father, Wales Henry, Chicago jewelry salesman, and the mother, Mrs. Leona Henry, of Albany, N. Y., are reportedly separated. Police said the car number was traced to an owner in Buffalo, N. Y., who admitted having lent it to the girl's father.

Clothing Ablaze, Woma Leaps 4 Floors to Death

Chicago, Oct. 26 (AP).—Mrs. John P. Becker, 63, of Louisville, died tonight of burns and injuries she received early today when cleaning fluid exploded, igniting her clothing, and she leaped from a fourth story window.

Mrs. Becker came here two weeks ago to visit her son Arthur, dean of music ta DePaul University.

Police Seek Man, 68, Feared Amnesia Victim

A search for John S. Bell, 68, of 5008 Forty-second street northwest, was started last night by police after he had been reported missing by relatives who fear he is suffering from a lapse of memory.

Liquor Control Statutes Void, Insists Cantrel

Sections of Law Quoted by Latimer Are Class Legislation, He Says.

Declaring that Charles Y. Latimer, secretary to the liquor control board of Montgomery County, Md., had entirely missed the point of his attacks on the liquor dispensary at Clarksburg, Joseph A. Cantrel, Fusion candidate for member of the House of Delegates, yesterday sent a reply to Latimer's letter citing the legislative action making legal the dispensary's opening.

"You have entirely missed the point which I raised in my speeches," Cantrel wrote. "I am thoroughly familiar with the provisions of law which you quoted and carefully read same prior to any speech made by me on the subject matter thereof. My point was and still is that the sections of law quoted by you are unconstitutional and are therefore nugatory and void."

"Class Legislation."

"The sections of law which you quoted are clearly a piece of class legislation, denying to the inhabitants of other districts in Montgomery County, as well as the 70 per cent of the voters of the Clarksburg election district, the equal protection of the laws. They are likewise highly discriminatory in that they seek to vest in 30 per cent of the voters of Clarksburg district the exercise of the will of the other 70 per cent. Said sections also constitute an arbitrary exercise of legislative authority and an abuse of discretion on the part of the liquor control board."

Mr. Cantrel declared the law intended to permit the entire population of the district to petition for a referendum to be held next spring on whether they want sale of liquors in their district. This petition is initiated by 30 per cent of the voters of the district, he declared, in order that all of the voters may express their desire.

"Usurpation" Charged.

He said establishment of the dispensary without first learning the will of the people "is clearly a usurpation by your board of the will of the people."

Latimer replied to charges by Cantrel that the dispensary had been illegally established since the law directed three sales places, Rockville, Bethesda and Silver Spring, by pointing out a section of the law which provided that such a dispensary be established when 30 per cent of the voters of the Clarksburg district petitioned for a referendum on the wet and dry question.

Plans were discussed for a dance to be held Friday, November 16.

Bar Maps Drive To Suppress Crime

gambling house so prosecution may be instituted if violations of the building regulations can be found by the building inspector's office.

The Fire Department also will be instructed to investigate to determine if any of the regulations against fire hazards have been violated.

Through the exercise of such close scrutiny of property rented to gamblers, the Commissioners hope to discourage landlords from renting to operators of lawless enterprises.

Penalty for Workers.

An attempt even will be made to penalize workmen who do jobs for gambling places if it can be found that they are unlicensed, if the task requires a license, or if they fail to obtain permits for work which must be approved by District electrical, plumbing or building inspectors.

The special committee of 40 named by the bar association has decided to use as its guide Monday night the resolution adopted by the American Bar Association some time ago in its war on crime.

The National organization decided to recommend to the Governor of each State (in the District the recommendation would be to the Commissioners) that a permanent committee on criminal justice, composed of lawyers and laymen, be established.

This committee would make a constant study of criminal statutes and work in close harmony with the United States attorney's office and the Department of Justice.

Special Invitations.

While the mass meeting will be open to the public, the committee yesterday decided to issue special invitations to the following:

Col. James A. Morse, president of the United States Flag Association; Wilbur LaRoe, of the Federation of Churches; representatives of the Catholic Welfare Association and the Jewish Community Center; Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, of the Federated Women's Clubs; James G. Yaden, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations.

Ralph G. Cornell, president of the Federal Bar Association; Judge James A. Cobb, of Municipal Court; Mrs. Edwina Avery, president of the Women's Bar Association; J. Austin Stone, president of the American Patent Law Association; J. O'Connor Roberts, American Legion commander; Robert V. Fleming, president of the Board of Trade; a representative of the Associated Charities; Thurman T. Dodson, president of the Washington Bar Association.

Frederick B. Siddons, president of the District Bankers Association; James Colliflower, president of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, and representatives of the Juvenile Protective Association, the Parent-Teacher Association, the Salvation Army, the Underwriters Association of the District, the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A.

Moves to Stop Silk Strike Up; Mill Is Stoned

Dyers Hear Reports at Paterson on Labor Board Action.

Paterson, N. J., Oct. 26 (U.P.).—Striking silk dyers were to confer with Washington representatives here at midnight to discuss possible settlement of the walkout of more than 25,000 silk workers in the metropolitan area.

Leaders who went to Washington to negotiate through the National Textile Labor Board returned to report results of conferences.

Meanwhile strike leaders claimed that all New Jersey silk dyeing and printing mills involved in the dispute were closed. They are striking for a closed shop agreement with the manufacturers.

Factory windows were smashed when more than 1,000 strikers broke picket lines at the Victory dyeing and finishing plant after they were refused permission to inspect the plant to see if strikebreakers were at work.

Rocco Nazzaro, president of the company, told the strikers:

"I might just as well let you come into my home."

Police arrived after pickets had started to stone the factory, but rain dispersed the strikers before any clash occurred.

Reports from Washington that Dr. Benjamin M. Squires, head of the Textile Labor Board, had announced settlement of the strike served to quiet strikers and prevent serious disorders.

Strikes Sanctioned If Board Is Ignored

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—The emergency board of the United Textile Workers of America agreed tonight to sanction strikes in mills where no adjustment is made by managements after settlement of differences is effected by representatives of the National Textile Labor Relations Board.

Sanction of the use of the strike weapon will be given by the United Textile Workers to unions asking such permission only after efforts at adjustment of differences between workers and employers has been made by the Labor Relations Board, it was announced.

The board said it would discuss tomorrow the dyers' strike in Paterson, N. J., and other strikes in cotton, woolen and worsted mills.

Chest Expects U. S. Employes To Boost Gifts

Partial Restoration of Pay Should Be Reflected, Says Donovan.

The partial restoration of pay of District employes is expected to be reflected in their contributions to the Community Chest in its forthcoming drive for funds, Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor and Chest campaign officer, told District department heads yesterday.

Warning of the Chest campaign commander was given at a meeting held in the board room in the District Building attended by municipal department heads and officers of the Police and Fire departments and other executives.

It was the first meeting of District officials preliminary to the Community Chest campaign. Each department head and bureau chief was made a subcaptain for the campaign, responsible for the contributions of his or her subordinates.

The Chest drive for funds will have the cooperation of the Board of Commissioners, Melvin C. Hazen, president of the board, said. Workers in the National Capital, Commissioner Hazen said, were more fortunate than residents in other cities and they should open their hearts to the appeal of the charities of the city and give as much as they could afford toward their support.

Elwood Street, director of public welfare and former head of the Community Chest, said the Chest represented numerous activities of private charities which long had had the support of the city. Public relief work, Mr. Street said, could not and would not supplant the great need for private charity and could not be expected to do the welfare work done by private organizations.

Maj. Gen. F. W. Coleman, U. S. A., head of the Government unit of the Chest campaign organization, also asked cooperation of District employes.

An Undesirable Precedent.

Taking note of the criticism aroused by the unprecedented spectacle of a First Lady actively participating in a political campaign, Mrs. Roosevelt explained to her audience in Buffalo, "I come not as the wife of the President, though I realize you think of me as that, but I come as a citizen of the State of New York, to do a thing which I believe in for the State."

This prefaced the first of the five speeches which Mrs. Roosevelt had previously announced she would make on behalf of her long-time friend and co-worker, Mrs. Caroline Goodwin O'Day, who is running as the Democratic nominee for Representative at Large.

Doubtless some of the critics are concerned merely because an ancient tradition is being shattered, while others may be classed as adherents to the woman's-place-is-in-the-home school. Mrs. Roosevelt has sought to go to the heart of the matter in saying that she appears, not as the wife of the President, but as a citizen of the State.

But can the First Lady, in fact, so easily dispose of one identity and assume another? In her own mind, perhaps she can. In the eyes of the voters she inevitably remains the First Lady. Inescapably she comes to the political stump in that role, with all the advantage and prestige it conveys. Though she may will it otherwise, she can not help bringing to the political arena an influence and power largely derived from her position as the wife of the President. To assume otherwise is casuistry.

The wife of the President is not elected. She is not an official of the Government. She holds no mandate from the electorate, yet is by her position largely immune from criticism. Even the appearance of taking political advantage of the dignity of the White House is bound to provoke the criticism of which Mrs. Roosevelt shows herself to be aware rather than fully conscious.

Render Unto Caesar—

The courageous stand taken by the pastors and congregations of the German Protestant Church against Reichsbishop Mueller appears to be ending in complete defeat for the latter. Reports indicate that Chancellor Hitler is preparing to withdraw from the conflict precipitated by the bungling efforts of his close friend and spiritual representative to destroy the dearly won independence of a church founded by that militant reformer, Martin Luther.

Der Fuehrer may repudiate his Reichsbishop, but he can not conceal the defeat implied in this first major revolt of thousands of otherwise loyal citizens against authoritative assaults upon their religious rights. If he abandons the ill-judged attempt to extend the powers of the totalitarian state over the churches as well as the political institutions of the country, it will be a major triumph for the courageous clergy and parishioners who have dared to defy the government's representatives. More than that, it will be a victory for free speech, a blow struck for liberty of thought and action, which may have far-reaching effects upon the future of Germany.

Witnessing the success of a determined and organized church opposition to attempted usurpation of cherished rights, the public will realize more fully its latent power to resist political tyranny manifesting itself in other forms. Consequently, the conflict between the Lutheran Church and the Nazi government, represented by the Reichsbishop and his aides, may well mark the turning point of the tide against a regime which has destroyed representative institutions and has to rely upon force, threats and suppression of facts to coerce public opinion.

In this case public opinion as expressed by the militant Lutheran congregations has shown itself to be stronger than the government, which is patently afraid to use the coercive powers it possesses to silence opposition. Der Fuehrer shows widsom in deciding to beat a strategic retreat, leaving his subordinates to play the role of scapegoats. In so doing, however, he has shown the German people that his position is capable of being severely modified, whenever the public will insist.

Thoroughly Discredited.

The first anniversary of the Administration's gold-purchase program is significant chiefly because it emphasizes the complete eclipse of the theories advanced in this field by Prof. George F. Warren. Certainly a year should be sufficient to test the validity of the belief that the price level is directly related to the value of gold. If corroborative evidence over a longer period is wanted, the experience of Great Britain, Sweden and Japan will all show that there is no close correspondence between changes in the price of gold and changes in the commodity price level.

When the Administration began raising the price of gold on a graduated scale the Bureau of Labor Statistics' index of commodity prices stood at 70.4. Now it stands at 76.2, the increase being about 8 per cent. During that period the price fixed by the Government for gold advanced about 12 per cent. A 50 per cent discrepancy is, therefore, immediately apparent. But numerous other factors affecting commodity prices enter into the equation in such a way as thoroughly to discredit the Warren hypothesis.

In the first place, the movements of commodity prices have been decidedly uneven. The price index for farm products in the period under survey has advanced more than 40 per cent. Prices for hides and leather products have fallen nearly 5 per cent. Textiles have also moved downward, and several other groups of commodities remain at approximately the price level which they occupied a year ago.

In other words, virtually all of the increase in the general commodity price index is represented by the higher prices for farm products. These are due primarily to the drought and to the AAA curtailment program. Certainly there is no justification for assuming that gold purchases designed to raise the general price structure were effective in the case of agriculture, coincident with complete ineffectiveness in the price of textiles, hides, &c.

When the effect of special influences upon farm products is eliminated, the price index shows a very meager change during the last year. The index figure for all commodities other than farm products and foods advanced only 1.4 per cent. That is, indeed, a small margin of accomplishment to be split between Prof. Warren, the NRA, PWA, the RFC and other agencies devoted to the task of raising commodity prices.

From recent Executive utterances it is not entirely clear whether the aim of the Administration is to get prices up, hold them down, or keep them stable. But whatever the aim, it must be realized by this time that commodity prices can not be successfully regulated by manipulating the price of gold.

A Sour Note.

In New York, on Thursday, the new head of the NRA issued a challenge to business to re-employ millions of workers or else be prepared to see the Federal Government provide employment for the idle. "If private initiative is so weak," he said, "if private capital is so timid, if management and labor are so lacking in vision that private enterprise will not march ahead to solve its own problems, then let no one criticize, but let everyone applaud a government that has the courage and strength and vision to undertake the job."

It is somewhat disheartening to have this combative note sounded immediately after the Administration and the bankers of the country had given encouraging evidence of a desire to approach a solution of the country's problems in a spirit of cooperation, without acrimony or charges of bad faith on either side. And it is especially surprising that Mr. Donald Richberg, with his logical mind and extensive knowledge of industrial problems, should hold what amounts to a threat over the head of business because it seems unable to provide jobs for the millions of idle.

These unemployed workers are not a challenge to individual employers. They are a challenge to the best minds of the Nation, to people in public and private service who are eager to find a solution for the problems of our civilization. Harsh criticism and unfounded reproaches will not supply an answer to the industrial riddle of the times.

The business men might retort that the Government, which set out so confidently 20 months ago, has not been eminently successful in all its own undertakings. Despite Mr. Richberg's assertions to the contrary, it has not provided the foundations for a new prosperity capable of supporting the great expansion required to absorb vast numbers of persons still unemployed. But bitter criticisms of the Government by business will get us no nearer recovery than the opposite method, used by Mr. Richberg.

As the President said on Wednesday night, "the time is ripe for an alliance of all forces bent upon the business of recovery." If private enterprise hesitates to go forward, if public enterprise fails to attain its objectives, the fault must be sought in impersonal causes, not in lack of willingness on either side. Time, energy and good will are dissipated by emphasizing an assumed reluctance of the people, whether business men, bankers, or laborers, to cooperate in efforts to lift themselves and their fellow citizens out of a depression which no sane man desires to perpetuate.

Renaissance.

When the Union Pacific's streamlined M-10001 slipped from Los Angeles to New York in 56 hours and 55 minutes, she broke a transcontinental speed record that has stood for 18 years. During that long interval the railroads have not been sufficiently interested in improvement of their service seriously to challenge the record set long ago by another Union Pacific train.

The fact that the M-10001 attained a speed of 120 miles per hour and averaged nearly a mile per minute, including stops, on this transcontinental run, may not be especially significant. For many years engineers have known how to build locomotives that could travel at high speeds. The important thing is that the railroads are once more applying engineering skill and ingenuity in an effort to maintain their place in the field of transportation. Regular service by trains similar to the M-10001 will soon be established between Chicago and the Pacific Coast.

During the 18 years since the last transcontinental record was set the railroads have been resting on their laurels. But competing forms of competition have been marching on. It is evident that the period when the railroads could maintain a virtual monopoly in their field has passed. A full awakening to the demands of the present age for comfort, efficiency, speed and economy seems to be imperative if the railroads are to regain their former prestige.

Both the revolutionary nature of the M-10001 and the sharp difference between the records of 1906 and 1934 (traveling time for the transcontinental run was reduced 13 hours and 5 minutes) indicate how far the railroads have lagged behind during the last two decades. Suddenly, in the midst of a grave crisis, evidence of a new epoch in railroad history appears. If the M-10001 truly represents the new spirit of the railroad industry, its future is brighter than many have been led to believe.

Self-Revealing Mr. Wells.

H. G. Wells has written his autobiography. This causes Lewis Gannett to wonder if anyone under 35 has read, does read, or ever will read Wells' books except as an adventure in research. In the course of a minor investigation Mr. Gannett, who admits to being an "old codger past 40" and who says that in the prewar days Wells was "flame to a generation," finds but one youthful person who has dipped at all deep into the Wellsian well.

Is it difficult to understand this lack of appreciation for the man who, when he was a Fabian, began writing some of the most widely read of modern English novels? There was always something rather smug about Wells, even when he most burned to present his Message to an expectant world! But behind the smugness there was, if there is not now, one of the most active minds of our time. Henry Hazlitt has perhaps best summed Wells up: a thinker by choice, an artist by chance.

If any of these younger readers who have shunned Wells ever does discover him, it will be the chance Wells, not the choice Wells, that will hold his attention. The Wells of the imaginative novels, not the Wells of the Idea and the Message, has more than an expectation of survival. It has never been quite clear just what Wells' Idea and Message really were; but there is no question that behind his blunt style there exists a great ocean of exciting writing.

But whether, either as a novelist or as a Thinker, Mr. Wells has had any great influence upon his times is a question open to discussion. Mr. Gannett, who has long been his admirer, sees him as a mirror, not as a sun. Mr. Britling was a perfect picture of the average Englishman who "saw it through." His other novels have been excellent reporting of an existing world. Although he may have added nothing to the art of novel writing, before the chaos of 1914 he gave us much else that made it possible to understand an acutely contemporary world.

If anyone is really anxious to know why Wells is no longer greatly read the clew is available in "Experiment in Autobiography." Therein he says "* * * the general reader to whom I addressed myself cared no more for finish and fundamental veracity about the secondary things of behaviour than I." That is Wells' most self-revealing sentence and, while it may be cruel to quote, we have an idea that it explains why a post-war generation passes him by.

A Pediculous Word.

One London newspaper substituted "rotten" for C. W. A. Scott's use of "lousy" as an adjective descriptive of his triumphant air race to Australia, and the good old London Times changed it to "dreadful." There is a question of ethics here, extremely delicate to approach. It not only has to do with the word involved, but with the newspaper's right to edit the characteristic remarks of newsworthy individuals.

It used to be the practice of editors to compromise. Unwilling to soften the words of those quoted, and equally unwilling to print words that might offend, they resorted to the practice of partial deletion. Thus Mr. Scott's far from original Americanism (as the Times probably held it to be) would have appeared in its chaste columns as "lsy," and those who knew the word would have recognized it and those who didn't would have soon found out.

The history of American letters is filled with emendations from the manuscripts of famous men. Sometimes the queasy editorial blue pencil did the trick. But Mark Twain's wife would not let his cuss words and healthy vulgarity even get to the editor! In that recent era when realism was supposed to consist of vulgarity there were those who felt that Mrs. Twain (and why not Mrs. Twain—she was his editor!) had helped to spoil her husband's writing. But that is beside the point.

Unquestionably, Mr. Scott said his trip was "lousy." That is one of the most abused adjectives of abuse we have. Everybody knows that it no longer is a simile for pediculous, that it is merely a tip-of-the-tongue expression of contempt. It is hardly any more shocking (more's the pity!) to American ears than the much disputed word "bloody" is to the British. And, of course, neither is in good taste.

An aviator naturally is not a pedagogue. His is a profession that is not only making new history but also new words. Its talk is as new as fuselage itself. The editor of the London Times doubtless felt that an eagle should not use the language of the gutter. But Scott said what he thought and truthful reporting should have quoted him correctly. We doubt if, even in London, the best drawing rooms would be closed to the hero of the Australian flight, if their inmates had read what he said instead of what the Times said he said.

A governmental official says the NRA will continue to function indefinitely. Well, that's the way it has been functioning.

Doctors And Birth Control.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is an article in the October 22 issue of The Post entitled "Doctors Join in Fight for Birth Control," which is misleading. Readers are led to assume that the Medical Society of the District of Columbia is joining this fight. It is not. Neither is the American Medical Association, which is the representative organized body of doctors in this country.

Dr. Willson is not the president of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia. He is one of the ex-presidents. At the time of his election to the presidency, the members of the medical society could not foresee his interest and activity in birth-control legislation. The Medical Society of the District has not indorsed birth control legislation, and Dr. Willson's activities in that direction are without the sanction or authority of the medical society.

I am sure that Dr. Willson will welcome this correction, as he would not desire to mislead the public. DR. J. A. GANNON.

Washington, Oct. 22.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On reading in this morning's Post, in news items on the sports page, "Doctors Join in Fight for Birth Control," I note a slight misstatement which I feel that it is important to correct, inasmuch as papers throughout the United States have a commendable habit of quoting freely from The Washington Post.

It is stated * * * "it was learned here that plans are under way to organize a National medical committee on State and Federal contraceptive legislation under the direction of Dr. Prentiss Willson, president of the District of Columbia Medical Society." Dr. Willson is no longer president of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia nor does he speak for that high-minded medical organization, nor in fact for any large proportion of the physicians of the District of Columbia.

I am enormously gratified at and commend Bishop Freeman's stand before the House of Bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church in convention Saturday last. It is Bishop Freeman and those other far-seeing clergymen who are the champions of the best interests of the great masses of the people, especially the poor.

Those of us who have for years worked with and among this class of society understand and know their desires and any individual who has had a wide and long experience with these good people know that it is the exceptional woman in this section of society who wishes to avoid parenthood.

I have no wish to enter into any controversial discussion on the subject of birth control. My desire in this instance was merely to correct a misstatement.

Traffic Solutions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The bottle-neck on F street, between Seventh and Ninth streets, is not caused by the arrangement of streets and buildings; it is caused by the street-car tracks and loading platforms. The city authorities purpose remedying this difficulty not by removing its cause, but by mutilating the Patent Office Building, one of the most beautiful and dignified structures in Washington. This is to facilitate traffic. As a necessary part of this improvement, 16 trees will be chopped down.

The Patent Office Building is described in Latimer's guidebook as "one of the greatest ornaments of the city." Rider's guidebook says: "The style is imposing by its severe simplicity. There are four massive porticoes. The main one, fronting on F street, opposite the termination of Eighth street, is reached by a lofty series of steps, and consists of a double row of fluted Doric columns, 16 in number, 6 feet in diameter, raised in sections and flanked by immense pilasters. It is modeled after the Pantheon at Rome."

Instead of deforming the majestic south portico, why not demolish the whole building and extend Eighth street through the middle of the area? This would add two more squares of street pavement to a city which, according to present tendencies, bids fair to become 90 per cent pavement. Thus, also, street traffic would be facilitated. The school children could then be taken only one square east and cultivate their esthetic taste by feasting their eyes on the Pension Building.

It has already been proposed to extend Sixteenth street through Lafayette Square to Pennsylvania avenue. This improvement should not stop there. By tearing down the antiquated White House, which seems always in need of repairs or additions, Sixteenth street could be extended to the Mall. This would facilitate traffic.

The old Octagon House occupies a prominent salient which might easily be eliminated and replaced by a broad stretch of pavement. This would facilitate traffic.

Let us not permit art, trees, tradition, veneration, nor any other negligible amenity to stand in the way of the facilitation of traffic.

Organized Electorate.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One reason that this depression is lasting longer than previous depressions is that the people save a smaller percentage of their earnings. For it is the savings of the people that make possible capital for new enterprises. But no one wants to lower the present standard of living, which means we must raise the earning power. One way to do this is to compel industry to pay to labor a larger share of its profit, which in the past has been exorbitant.

The glorious past has not been due to our democracy, but to our natural resources, which have in a large measure been discovered and much of which has been wasted. There are still untold treasures in the earth, but it will cost more to develop them than it did to develop those resources we found on the surface. To conserve our natural wealth for all the people, and to give to the wage earner a larger percentage of the fruits of his labor, these are our problem. They can be solved by an intelligent, organized electorate.

I propose that the citizens' associations devote more efforts to the solution of our problems and organize along State lines.

Balkan Troubles.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As the author of "Little Things Feed Rancor in Balkans," the article to which Messrs. Wolesensky and Broz objected so strenuously on October 21, may I be permitted to say a word in my own defense?

First, there was no attempt to portray the Hungarians as martyrs, much-abused people or anything else. The article was intended as a simple word-picture presented by one who has just returned from the section in question.

Then, according to Mr. Wolesensky, "whatever may be the 'annoyances' which Hungarians suffer at the hands of Czechoslovak authorities, it is certain that Hungarians receive much better treatment in Czechoslovakia than did the Slovaks under Hungarian misrule." One question will suffice for that statement: Since when do two wrongs make a right?

While abroad, like any conscientious reporter, I spoke with railroad employes, housewives, manufacturers, storekeepers, journalists, actors, all sorts of people. Many of them had been separated from parts of their families in the post war shifting of boundary lines. There was distinct "anti" feeling, particularly between Hungary and Czechoslovakia. And in the article there was no suggestion that Czechoslovakia is unfair in her treatment of minorities. HANNA FRIED.

Means And End.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The most amazing and alarming spectacle in American history is today's picture of 125,000,000 citizens waiting from day to day, in painful, paralyzing uncertainty, upon the whims of a Presidential autocrat and his horde of personally appointed subdictators controlling all business, all industry, all finance, all farming, all employment. Their unpredictable mandates are, temporarily, the only effective laws. It is an intolerable situation for a free people.

Had a Republican President and a Republican Congress done some of the things the Democratic President and Congress have done since March 4, 1933, all Democrats, this writer included, would now be denouncing them as traitors and tyrants. Had Mr. Roosevelt and the members of the Seventy-third Congress told the people in October, 1932, that they meant to do some of the things they have done, they could not have carried a single State.

The dictatorship has failed to achieve its alleged purpose—industrial recovery. It has throttled the natural forces making for recovery. Its indorsement of Sinclair's program for California strongly suggests that its real purpose was, and is, to abolish private property and enslave this people under a permanent Federal autocracy.

If the American people still value their liberties, they will prove it on November 6 by electing a Congress to end the dictatorship, to reestablish constitutional Government and to liberate individual energy and ambition to produce a natural recovery of industry and employment. If we fail to do this, if we let the dictatorship bribe us with our own money to vote it two years more of absolute authority, we shall invite the fate of other countries where dictatorships have abolished elections and now enforce their arbitrary rule with military power. FRANK PUTNAM.

A Justified Rebuke.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There are few papers that contain no injurious errors. One could read for the news alone, but your paper contains so much that is fine and also real wit that I enjoy it and believe it can be a stronger factor in forming the tastes of the young for good writing, outside the schoolroom.

The most frequent error of late has been substituting infer for imply. On page 13 of The Post for October 25, the word inculcate is used instead of infused or blended. In the sense used the word "inculcate" is absurd.

Typographical errors are bad for our generation of poor spellers, but as they are more or less mechanical, are perhaps more excusable. When one hears children quote misspelled words as used by The Post, it seems a warning is called for.

After 40 years' reading of another daily, I am now enjoying The Post and its views and the manner of their expression. Any inaccuracy really hurts.

Beasts of The Air

Postoffice, Saturday.

ARE the lower animals becoming air-conscious?

Birds are born so. Man achieved it. Now it looks as if the ape and the tiger were having air-consciousness forced upon them.

Not the ape and the tiger that, we are told, lurk malevolently deep in every human heart, but visible apes and tangible tigers—as well as much domesticated small-fry—are traveling more and more by plane. So, if there really is anything to the theory of heredity's transmission of environmentally acquired characteristics, the beasts of both hearth and jungle ought to be on their way (via airways) to air-consciousness.

According to Brother Schriftgiesser, who says he covered the event, it must have been only four or five years ago that a dog was first shipped by plane. Other dogs had been "taken for a ride"—as mascots. This one, however, was sent as live-freight, or live-express, from New York to Boston. His owners said they were afraid that, otherwise dispatched, he would arrive too tardily for appearance at the Eastern Dog Club's annual competition. Perhaps they wanted to publicize him: the feat did put him onto the first-page of sentimental Schrift's newspaper.

But since then such shipments have become common enough. You can see that demonstrated if you will drop into the Washington Airport when next the revolving year brings around the Capital's dog-show season.

Dogs, therefore, are always humdrum. Not so the wilder beasts. And yet:

"We often carry them," an official of the British Imperial Airways said the other day. "Mostly they are consigned to circuses.

"A while ago a fully-grown lion flew to London from Paris. We were afraid it might become—ah—upset, but, as a matter of fact, it was so quiet when it reached Croydon that the keeper led it out of its traveling-cage with a chain attached to its collar, just as if it had been a Great Dane.

"Why, we've brought tigers over the Channel; and once we carried a performing horse—had to build a special compartment for him. Then, too, there was that chimpanzee; we brought him here for a film-play—a cinema, you know—and, really, he enjoyed the voyage so much that, when he left the plane, he insisted on shaking hands with the pilot."

It will be suspected that the science of the press-agent is not neglected by the British. Indeed, this same corporation avers that its air-craft have from time to time given racing-pigeons a lift—though, to be sure, they were only being taken abroad for a race back home—and live crocodiles and (in tanks) tropical fish.

Why not these last? Other aquatic creatures travel by plane. Some months since, there were regular air-consignments of sea-horses from the Bay of Biscay to replenish the supply at London's zoo. They were transported in jars of their native water; their containers had a sort of bicycle-pump attached to them, and, every hour or two during the journey, a member of the crew would man this pump to keep the water aerated.

You might suppose that, quite as well as a racing-pigeon, a locust could do its own flying. Not always:

"Early this month when a plane came into London from Africa, it brought a big crate full of live locusts. They'd been sent to England for scientists to try the effects of certain chemicals on them—experiments for locust-plagues.

"It was Africa also that sent mosquitoes. They came in a special box; live ones, you know. They were for experimentation, too. They'd been kept alive during the trip by regular meals of stagnant African swamp-water."

Let's let another African air-drama end the morning's run:

Tanganyika coffee-plantations suffer from periodic attacks by the mealy-bug. What the mealy-bug is we don't precisely know, but it is fatal to the coffee-plant, mocks all chemical sprays except the prohibitively expensive and has only one natural enemy: the lady-bird. Unfortunately, there are no more lady-birds in Tanganyika than there are snakes in the Irish Free State. More unfortunately, the mealy-bug recently descended in unprecedented numbers upon the Tanganyika plantations—the year's entire crop was threatened.

Immediate action was imperative. A telegram was dispatched to the Union of South Africa's government entomologist at Port Elizabeth, where lady-birds are plentiful. The G. E. promptly loaded a fleet of air-transports with an expeditionary force of lady-birds and dispatched them to the sore-stricken plantations. Within three days there was not one live mealy-bug left in the rejoicing coffee-fields of Tanganyika.

The government of the Union of South Africa is authority for this history. However, on our part, and in return we feel it our duty to warn the government of the Union of South Africa that it should be extremely careful about giving its lady-birds too many air-rides. Air-travel is habit-forming. If the lady-birds of the Union of South Africa once become air-conscious, they will refuse to travel even the shortest distance by any other conveyance than airplane.

Poor Man's Court Here Lives Up to Its Name

Has Advantages New York's Tribunal Lacks and Keeps Crowded Docket Clear.

By C. H. Wetmore.

WASHINGTON has a poor man's court even as has New York and other large communities. Moreover, it has been in existence many years, and has several advantages not enjoyed by the newly organized New York institution, concerning which much recently has been written.

New York boasts that a plaintiff whose claims are not in excess of $100, may, upon depositing $1.25, appear without counsel, but if an attorney is employed he must be paid a fee. There it is open one day a week, presided over by one judge.

In Washington's poor man's court the filing fee also is $1.25, but if the plaintiff is unable to advance that amount, then the cause goes forward just the same. Here the maximum amount for which suit may be entered is $1,000. The court is open every day except Sundays and holidays. Five judges are present to hear cases. If the plaintiff is unable to proceed or to engage a lawyer, then through the Legal Aid Society counsel acts without fee.

Since 1921 the court has disposed of 220,806 cases.

The District's poor man's court is legally known as the Municipal Court of the District of Columbia. It is a credit and a discredit to the Nation's Capital—a credit because of the personnel of the judges, the amount of work done, the good it has rendered the city; a discredit because of the manner in which it is housed and the way, figuratively speaking, it has been kicked from pillar to post, by the Congress and by the District Commissioners.

Hon. George C. Aukam is presiding judge of this court. Associated with him are the Hons. Robert E. Mattingly, Mary O'Toole, James A. Cobb and Nathan Carton.

THIS court came into existence in 1909, as the result of many months' endeavor by Senator Hoke Smith, Senator Walsh, Judge William J. Latimer, P. G. Burleson, George C. Aukam, Col. Robert M. Harper, Floyd C. Davis, August Browne and Chapin Brown, who prevailed upon Congress to enact a law which would do away with the justices of the peace, 17 of whom, at one time, held court in various parts of the city. Since passage of the bill, Mr. Aukam has continued to guide the court's destinies.

First sessions of the court were held in the former residence of Senator Morgan, in historic John Marshall place. At that time the maximum amount for which suit could be filed was $500. In 1913 the court was moved into more dingy quarters, at 312 John Marshall place, a few doors distant from the senatorial house.

But when the move was made there was jubilation. It was said that the lease was only temporary. Congress had appropriated a large sum of money for a civic center, of which the Municipal Court was to be the central jewel.

The District Commissioners, who had obtained a million without much struggle, decided, however, that they wanted $13,000,000 for a civic center. At this the Congress balked, and the original $1,000,000 went for something else. Several months of uncertainty passed and it seemed as if the Municipal Court might be compelled to hold sessions in a vacant lot under canvas, because No. 312 must be razed.

The question, where to go next, was finally answered. To explain how the answer was found one must travel back several years in the history of Washington, to the days when a then famous proprietary medicine was being manufactured. Known as "Brane Fude," it was widely advertised as a sure cure for headaches. It made a fortune for its originator, Col. Robert M. Harper, the man who helped Judge Aukam and the others create this court.

The first case under the pure food and drug act to be heard in the District Court was that of the United States vs. Robert M. Harper et al, the charge being that "Brane Fude" contained a coal tar product which was injurious to the heart. A conviction was obtained and a light fine imposed. After this court action he quit its manufacture and his factory, a four-story brick, at 467 C street northwest, was abandoned. Judges, marshals and clerks moved in.

ON the north and the east side a brick-paved court approximately 30 feet wide, bounded by police headquarters on the north and a wholesale drug warehouse on the east; and hounded during all daylight hours by patrol wagons, delivery trucks and other vehicles with exhausts which roar, horns which toot and drivers who are none too careful when yelling for rights of way.

Through this noisy Municipal Court passes 94 per cent of all litigation involving money demands and property rights in the District. It is the only court in the District which is self-sustaining. Every year it turns in a balance above expenses to the Treasury. Since 1921, when it became a court of record and the maximum for which suit may be brought was increased to $1,000, it has disposed of 613,812 cases, including the poor man's claims.

In 1932-33, of the 60,892 cases heard, only 91 applications for appeal were filed, of which only 26 were granted. In these the lower court was affirmed in six cases and reversed in seven; ten were dismissed and three are pending. Seven reversals of verdict in approximately 70,000 cases is a good record!

JUDGE AUKAM doubts if any other court in the land can shows such a clean balance sheet. "We turned $25,000 back into the Treasury last year," he said recently. "Then what happened? This year we asked for $725 with which to pay the jurors. It was cut out of the budget and we had to borrow $600 from the insane asylum fund and get $125 from somewhere else.

"But we should worry about a little thing like that. We have a clean slate and always keep up with the docket. Can any other court say as much? A Congressional committee looked us over once and said, 'They are doing good work down there.' Then the hard-boiled Committee on Appropriations added $300 a year to my salary, a compliment of which I am very proud."

Nearly all laws enacted by the Congress and affecting financial payments and property rights pass the test of constitutionality in the Municipal Court. For instance, the Bacon-Davis act, which provided that laborers employed by contractors on Federal jobs must be paid the same wages as the standard wages paid other workers in that community. Judge Cobb held the law constitutional and his ruling has not been reversed.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Memories of 1929.

This month marks the fifth anniversary of the big wind. It is five years since we were interrupted in our counting of paper profits by the storm that blew away our slates and slate pencils, and twisted our plus signs into a mass of wreckage.

• • • •

It is 60 months since we came out of the orgy of rapid calculation and landed at the bottom of an abandoned well with nothing to show for the trip except a battered dream book.

• • • •

It is nearly 2,000 days since we were catapulted from the atmosphere of mergers, split-ups, stock dividends, dollar cigars and six-million share days to the atmosphere of nickel stogies, run-over heels, SOS signals and the sidewalk apple industry.

• • • •

Nobody has offered to let us in on the ground floor in so many years that we have almost forgotten what it meant.

• • • •

It was in October, 1929, that we were tumbling down the collapsible stairway with a margin call in one hand and a lily in the other, listening to the rescue squad tell us it was just a technical reaction.

• • • •

Five years, brothers and sisters, since we crawled out from under the debris, shirtless and suffering, only to be set up again in the other alley by the soothing assurances of the men with the pulmotor that it was improving our technical position!

• • • •

It seems like yesterday that we were listening gravely to cracks like, "You never can lose money in a stock like United States Steel," "You don't think A. T. & T. is worth less than $200, do you?" and "Grab all the General Motors you can on this reaction! Why, its value is $126 a share!"

• • • •

Fresh is the recollection of the big blizzard, the crashing walls, the flying skylights, the falling temperatures and the unforgettable admonition, "Buy 'em now! They'll never be cheaper!"

• • • •

Keen is the memory of those harrowing days at the bottom of the snowdrift with the broker digging us out with a paper shovel and telling us it was an April shower caused by the Federal Reserve Board, a little nervousness in the animal cracker business and something Mr. Hoover ate.

• • • •

Where's the fellow who "made half a million last month" with a start of $126?

• • • •

What's become of these three big figures of yesterday: (1) the fellow who'd just made a big killing in General Electric and Con. Gas; (2) the neighbor who was close to the insiders; (3) the fellow who always bought when everybody else was selling?

Football Talk.

Along the Potomac

With

Carlisle Bargeron

Authoritarian State

IN the hasty drawing up of the pact that ended the Revolution a lot of matters were necessarily left for later solution. Manifestly every detail could not be worked out. We would have been years in preparing the pact.

BARGERON

None of the remaining problems is looked upon as insoluble but some of them will require most painstaking and high-minded work on the part of the arbitrators. There are, for example, the many authorities which the Roosevelt Revolution set up, the Tennessee Valley Authority, the Housing Authority, the local Alley Authority and, oh, countless others.

I should not want the revolution to continue until these are eliminated but I do believe that the arbitrators who are now to clean up the details should get to them as quickly as possible. Because as long as they exist there will be the danger, in my opinion, of the Authoritarian State which we Tories most fear.

• • • •

They suggest the Revolutionists' leaning that way. As long as they remain it will be proof to me that, regardless of peace pacts, the Revolutionists still have an Authoritarian State in mind.

Take the current origin of Authority. Of course, it has been in the dictionary for a long time, but who was the first to use it for a governmental agency? Mr. Roosevelt and his accociates! They first applied it to the water power regulatory agency in New York. The New York Power Authority, that is what they call it.

And certainly the spread of the word to denote governmental agencies shows their penchant for it. They didn't call it the Tennessee Valley Agency or the Tennessee Valley Commission. It's the Tennessee Valley Authority and the District of Columbia Alley Authority.

It's idle to say we are free from the threat of the authoritarian state as long as these little authorities hang over us.

• • • •

Admitterly, they do no harm in their present heterogeneous development, but they have affinities which sooner or later may bring them into one homogeneous mass. Where would the celebrated peace pact be then? The great ceremony in Constitution Hall Wednesday of Mr. Roosevelt and the bankers would mean not a thing in the world. The authoritarian state would be upon us.

No, there is no escape from it. As long as those things are dangled over our heads we will not be able to feel that lasting security which is essential to our recovery, without which, in fact, we simply refuse to recover. A bunch of authorities hanging over the country like a cluster of bombs carries, to my mind, the threat of a Damocles' sword, and a lot of other comparisons I could think of, if I felt better.

• • • •

The arbitrators unquestionably should find another name for them. Under the circumstances this will be difficult, but if they apply themselves seriously to the task and approach it in the proper spirit of give and take there is no reason why they shouldn't come to a happy result.

We can not insist that Mr. Roosevelt call them Commissions, because that would be a return to the old order. And it is his political trademark or slogan that he will not do this.

But in the spirit of compromise which now seems to be animating both sides it should be possible to work out a half-way point at which the disciples of the old order and the New Dealers could meet. Maybe they could agree upon the word agency. Ah, that's it! Neither Commissions denoting the old order nor Authorities so symbolical of the Revolutionists—but Agency. Hot dog! It looks like an enduring peace.

Fascist Militia Band To Play in Capital

La Banda di Chieti, one of Italy's foremost musical organizations, will make a two-day stop in Washington November 1 and 2 on its good will tour of the United States. Concerts will be presented both evenings in Washington Auditorium.

The band numbers 75 musicians and is known as the Fascist Militia Band. It arrived in New York aboard the Italian liner Roma August 22, and since that time has been touring the country.

JOHN PATRICK McMAHON, Judge District Police Court. Holds respect of the citizenry. Is known as fearless and capable. Brisk in walk and speech, he is strictly businesslike on the bench and cordial outside the courtroom. Keeps all within room toeing the mark. A veteran of local courts, he has long waged a fight to enforce traffic regulations and has frequently charged that police spend too much time on petty offenses and too little in arresting those guilty of gross infractions of the traffic rules. Mentioned as a candidate for District Attorney. Member of the Board of Trade. Cleancut, an executive type, he is regarded as one of the best "law" judges in Police Court. Tells inebriates who come into court: "It wasn't the last drink that hurt you, it was the first." He is a lover of books.

Such a large proportion of those who have been pictured by Mr. Robles have asked for the originals that The Washington Post is saving all these drawings to honor the requests of any future members of "The National Gallery."

Aid to Mueller Deserts Hitler Church Regime

Nation's Backing Needed for Success, Dr. Jaeger Tells Reichsbishop.

Berlin, Oct. 26 (AP).—Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller's hard-fisted second in command, Dr. August Jaeger, quit today, leaving the Reichsbishop to hold the lines against the many bitter foes of his church program.

A letter which Dr. Jaeger sent to his superior conveyed his resignation as Nazi Commissioner for Protestant churches in Prussia, and proposed that Dr. Mueller call "an inner council of bishops to assist you in this reconstruction work, with prospect of true pacification."

It was the second blow to Reichsbishop Mueller, dictatorial overlord of the Reich's churches, in two days.

Yesterday Adolf Hitler decided at the last minute not to receive Dr. Mueller and the two dozen Nazi bishops he had appointed to take an oath of loyalty, after minute preparations for the ceremony had been made.

Save for the single word "pacification," there was no hint in Dr. Jaeger's letter of hostility that has swirled about him since he was appointed in June, 1933.

"It is my conviction that the process of reconstructing the church, which has now commenced with the employment of all forces, can only be based on the active cooperation of the country," he wrote.

Informed circles tonight believed Dr. Jaeger's resignation might help clear the air and serve as one step toward peace between Dr. Mueller and his adversaries, who resent his announced purpose of forcing all Germany's Protestant churches into one national church.

The bishop's office announced this evening that the bishops gathered here met yesterday and today at the Reich's church government offices, with the Reichbishop presiding, and that they discussed church questions in complete unanimity.

A council of bishops, as Dr. Jaeger's letter suggested, subsequently was called to deal with church and political questions, the announcement stated.

AAA Prepares To Boost Corn Yield for 1935

Halves Production Slash to Make Up Ravages of Drought.

(Associated Press.)

The Farm Administration prepared yesterday to increase corn production under its 1935 contract, which will ask farmers to hold production at 10 to 15 per cent less than 1933 instead of the 20 to 30 per cent slash required this year.

The move was an effort of the AAA to compensate partially for the effect of last summer's drought, which cut the corn supply for the coming year to 1,742,450,000 bushels, about 750,550,000 bushels under normal domestic requirements.

Officials sought in a series of conferences with field advisers during the last ten days to arrive at a balance between overproduction on one hand, with resulting lower prices and stimulated hog production and scarcity with the adverse political and economic effects which would result.

They believe the 10 to 15 per cent cut under the base period figure of 105,550,000 acres will accomplish this. If the number of contract signers in 1935 exceeds this year's figure they predict that acreage will be reduced to between 90,000,000 and 94,600,000 acres and production to between 2,340,000,000 and 2,210,000,000 bushels.

Either total would be less than the 2,493,000,000 bushels normal yearly consumption, but officials declare there will be about 15,000,000 fewer hogs and 10,000,000 fewer cattle at the beginning of next year, making a normal corn output unnecessary.

If the percentage relationships of this year's corn-hog program hold true for next year contract signers are expected to reduce acreage about 12 or 13 per cent and all producers about 6 per cent, bringing the total acreage down to 99,220,000 and production to about 2,480,000,000 bushels.

Benefit payments under the program are expected to approximate this year's total of $300,000,000.

Second Cousin

By

Wm. Lyon Phelps

TODAY is Theodore Roosevelt's birthday. He was born in New York City, October 27, 1858, and died January 6, 1919, 60 years old.

When one remembers that Roosevelt was primarily a man of action, the number of books he wrote is astounding. His original works fill more than 30 volumes; in addition to which he wrote an innumerable number of articles for magazines. When it was announced, before he left the White House, that he would become contributing editor to a periodical called The Outlook, the New York Sun, which at that time did not love him, said that the name should be changed to the "Look Out."

Very few persons felt any neutrality toward Roosevelt. He was adored and he was hated. I remember when he was President, a railway president saying in a rage, "He ought to be put behind the bars!"

It is interesting to remember that this man of tremendous vigor, always associated in the public mind with outdoor athletic activities and with violent utterances, was a sickly city boy; even while he was at Harvard he suffered from delicate health. His political enemies, who insisted that he was trying to change the Constitution of the United States, ought to have remembered that he changed his own constitution first. By long, carefully planned periods in primitive surroundings, backed by tremendous determination, he transformed his body from weakness to astonishing vigor and endurance. It is amusing, when one remembers his impatience with any form of effeminacy or affectation, that the early cartoons of Roosevelt in politics represented him as an over-refined and rather affected "dude." But in this respect he changed public opinion.

The people like to see a public man enjoy office. Roosevelt had a "bully time" in the Presidency, and at the end of an arduous campaign for the third term, being asked how he felt, he replied that he felt like a Bull Moose—a term quickly applied to his supporters. His undisguised enjoyment of high office and immense responsibilities endeared him to millions.

No one ever lived with more gusto, or took a more intense interest in a larger variety of things. He was interested in everything from a bumblebee to a battleship; and this interest enabled him to live ten times as fully as most men.

His heartiness, while a tremendous factor in his success as a politician, was never assumed for ulterior motives. He was just that kind of a man; big-hearted, exuberant, abounding in irrepressible vitality. I talked with him on various occasions, and he was always the same. When he came to take his Yale degree, a few weeks after he had become President, following the death of McKinley, I had the position of chief introducer at the public reception; and whenever a famous football player came along, I mentioned this to Mr. Roosevelt. He put his arm around the young man's neck and said: "It's a darn shame I can't shake hands with you!"

I do not believe any public man ever had a larger number of intimate friends. His death brought a sense of personal loss to innumerable households.

Americans Leaving Islands to the Natives

Governor General Murphy Replacing Outsiders With Filipinos at a Rapid Rate.

By Vincente Albano Pacis
(Special Correspondent of The Post).

MANILA (By Mail).—Gov. Gen. Murphy is Filipinizing the Government personnel so fast that by the time the commonwealth is inaugurated probably next year, this phase of the transition intended to be accomplished under the commonwealth will have been completed. During the chief executive's administration of a year and three months, he has Filipinized the Government-owned corporations, two of the five American-directed bureaus which he found upon his inauguration, and the trial courts.

The only American personnel in the government remaining is found in Malacanang Palace, the bureaus of audits, education, and public works, and the supreme court. But at the rate at which he is replacing American officials with Filipinos, the Governor General is likely to complete the work before the year ends.

Filipinization of the government personnel started with Taft who adopted the policy of preferring natives whenever they were qualified. It remained for Francis Burton Harrison, who came to enforce the Jones Law, to make the Taft policy really effective. During his administration the legislative branch was completely Filipinized with the replacement of the Washington-picked Commission by the elective senate. Most of the bureaus and most of the trial courts were similarly transformed.

During the regimes of Governors General Wood, Stimson, Davis and Roosevelt, the work of Filipinization was at a standstill. When Murphy arrived in Manila in June, 1933, he found Malacanang, five government bureaus, the Manila trial courts, the supreme court and the government corporations manned or directed by American officials. He immediately began to Filipinize them.

Thus, several months ago, Murphy replaced the American director of agriculture by splitting his bureau into two independent bureaus and placing natives at the head of each. Then, only last week, the bureau of science, which even Harrison left preponderantly American in higher personnel, was also Filipinized with the appointment of Angel S. Arguelles, an alumnus of the University of Illinois, as its first Filipino director. While a number of Americans continue to be connected with the bureau in the capacity of division chiefs or research scientists, it is expected that they will all step out of the government service just as soon as either Congress or the Philippine Legislature provides for a sort of pension or gratuity for Americans.

THE three leading government corporations, the Manila Railroad Co., the Philippine National Bank, and the National Development Co., have also been Filipinized by Murphy. When Joseph Mills, the Detroit transit man whom Murphy had made president of the railroad, died a Filipino, Jose Paez, was appointed in his place. Likewise, a Filipino former secretary of finance, Miguel Unson, has recently been appointed president of the National Development Co., an entity which the administration intends to develop into a Philippine NRA. The board of directors of these two firms, as well as that of the National Bank, have also been overhauled to make the majority Filipino.

When Judges Vickers and Goddard were appointed to the supreme court recently, the trial courts in the Philippines were completely Filipinized. The supreme court, however, with a membership of 11, remains with a majority of American justices, although the chief justice is a native.

The remaining American personnel in the government are the governor general with his secretaries and technical advisers, six of the 11 justices of the supreme court, the vice governor who is also secretary of public instruction, the directors of the bureau of audits, bureau of education, and the bureau of public works, and a number of experts or technical men such as school superintendents or principals, teachers, engineers and scientists. With the exception of the governor general and his staff, all the other American officials will probably step out before the inauguration of the Commonwealth. Under the Commonwealth, the governor general will be replaced by an American high commissioner, but the chief executive will be a Filipino.

Both the Commonwealth and the republic governments will probably avail themselves of the services of some American and foreign experts and technicians, although on their own terms.

Hastings Is Asked To Debate Rankin

Delaware Senator Called for New Deal Attack.

Senator Hastings (Republican), Delaware, outspoken critic of the Roosevelt Administration, was challenged by Representative Rankin (Democrat), Mississippi, last night to a public debate in Hastings' home State on the New Deal, the Associated Press reports.

"Since this is a contest between the New Deal and the old, and you persist in your criticisms of the Roosevelt Administration, carrying it so far as to attack the President himself, I make bold to take issue with you and hereby challenge you to meet me in joint debate," the Mississippian wrote Hastings.

Rankin said he had canceled speaking engagements in Ohio and Indiana so he might meet Hastings. He designated John Biggs, jr., Delaware Democratic chairman, to represent him in making arrangements.

Marine Memorial Dedication Put Off

Rites Are Postponed Until Next Year.

Representative Sol Bloom, of New York, announced yesterday that, at the suggestion of President Roosevelt, the dedication of the aluminum memorial to the Navy and the merchant marine had been postponed to Memorial Day, 1935.

The memorial, consisting of seven sea gulls poised over a huge aluminum wave, has been erected on the Mount Vernon boulevard in honor of "strong men . . . who upon the waters of the world have given life and still are offering it in the performance of heroic deeds."

Representative Bloom said that the President's suggested postponement of the dedication would afford time for the completion of the landscaping and other improvements at the base of the memorial.

Albert F. Fox Rites Planned By Lutherans

Services Tomorrow Honor Memory of Financier, Church Leader.

Memorial services for Albert F. Fox, former president of the Columbia National Bank and the National Union Insurance Co., will be held tomorrow at 11 a. m. in St. Paul's Lutheran Church. Mr. Fox, who died July 27, 1933, was a member of the church for 70 years.

A feature of the service will be the blessing of a processional cross presented to the church in memory of Mr. Fox by his daughter, Miss Margaret R. Fox.

The Rev. Henry W. Snyder, D. D., the pastor, will officiate at the service and preach a sermon entitled, "Glorying in the Cross." The Rev. John T. Huddle, D. D., pastor emeritus, will assist in the service. A special detail of Knights Templar from Washington Commandery, No. 1, in uniform, will participate in the procession and service of consecration. Representatives of organizations, with which Mr. Fox was affiliated, will attend the service, including the Grand Lodge, F. A. A. M. of the District of Columbia; Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons, Lafayette Chapter, No. 5; Columbia National Bank, Washington Loan & Trust Co., National Union Insurance Co. and the Oldest Inhabitants Association of the District of Columbia.

Mr. Fox, who came to Washington immediately after the Battle of Gettysburg, joined St. Paul's Sunday School the Sunday after his arrival, July 15, 1863, and remained an active member until his death two years ago. He served 41 years on the church council, was its treasurer for 16 years, president for 25 years and, on his retirement in 1927, was made president emeritus for life. For 60 years he was treasurer of the Sunday School, holding the office until his death. For 12 years he was a member of the Lutheran Board of Home Missions, 17 years a director of the Lutheran Theological Seminary at Gettysburg, and was the first treasurer of the National Lutheran Home for the Aged, serving for ten years.

At the service at 8 p. m., the pastor will preach on "Babel and the Bible."

Reformation Lutheran.

Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, pastor, has returned from the biennial convention of the United Lutheran Church in America, held in Savannah, Ga., and will preach tomorrow morning on "The Prince of Peace." Pending completion of the new auditorium, church and Sunday School services are held in the downstairs of the new building on East Capitol street, opposite the Folger Library.

Grace Lutheran.

Special services commemorating the Protestant Reformation and the 400th anniversary of the translation of the Bible, by Martin Luther, will be conducted tomorrow by the pastor, the Rev. Gerhard E. Lenski. He will preach on "Martin Luther and the Bible." At 7 p. m. he will conduct his Sunday evening confirmation class. The pastor will assist in the installation service of the Rev. George Greivnow, new pastor of the Faith Lutheran Church in Clarendon, Va., at 3 p. m. tomorrow.

St. Mark's Lutheran.

"Sowing and Reaping" will be the theme of the sermon by the Rev. J. Luther Frantz at the 11 a. m. service tomorrow. The Luther League, led by Wendell Leishear, will discuss "The Translation of the Bible by Martin Luther." The forty-fifth anniversary of the church will be observed November 4 when the Rev. John C. Bowers, D. D., of Baltimore, will speak.

Volunteers of America.

"God's Harvest" will be the subject of a sermon by the Rev. George W. Raines tomorrow in the relief mission at 471 Pennsylvania avenue southwest. The musical program will be directed by Capt. Paul Kelley.

Old Teachings Still Stand

By William T. Ellis.

This is a militant lesson. It savors of the greatest of all conflicts now under way among mankind. It shows the battle lines that are clearly drawn between the new notions that have swept the world and the explicit teachings of Scripture concerning standards of life. On one side are arrayed the "emancipated" generation, with their war cry, "Everybody's Doing It!" Definitely opposite them are the Bible-believing Christians, whose charter of conduct is "Thus saith the Lord," and whose slogan is that of the Crusaders, "God wills it."

There is no use in taking refuge in vague phraseology or in shutting one's eyes to the issue. The fight is on. The most spectacular fronts are in Russia and in Germany; but there is activity along the whole line of Christendom. The issue is really simple, though often beclouded by gas attacks of many words. That issue is whether life is to be lived according to explicit Christian teachings or whether it is to be dominated by the "do-as-you-please" philosophy of the new paganism. The future nature of civilization is at stake.

Are Bible Morals Outgrown?

Since the war there have been several widely publicized attacks upon the Ten Commandments and the Christian precepts of life. I recall at least three new decalogues that have been offered as substitutes for the law given by Moses—though I warrant that none of my readers can remember, any more than myself, what these "new" ten commandments had to say. Simply to read them was to realize their inadequacy and absurdity.

Attackers of the Bible have been legion throughout the ages; but their names have passed into oblivion, while the old Book remains, not only the best-selling publication on earth, but also increasingly the accepted rule of conduct by mankind. The newest and most impressive conceptions of a revised social order find their genesis in the Bible, and they seek to approximate its ancient standards of justice and brotherhood. Instead of having been outgrown, the Scriptures are today newly coming into their own.

"Don't Be a Heathen!"

In modern language, the exact paraphrase of Paul's first admonition to the Ephesian Christians, in our present lesson, would be "Don't be a heathen!" His words were, "That ye no longer walk as the Gentiles also walk."

Persons of deliberative mind, and possessed of some historical knowledge, perceive that the "liberal" and "modern" code of conduct, which has swept myriad of both young and older persons away from their traditional moorings, is nothing more nor less than a reversion to the paganism of the world into which Christianity came. Unbridled self-indulgence, the consuming pursuit of pleasure, the apotheosis of sensuality, the reign of greed, the vogue of gambling, the prevalence of superstitution—these were characteristics of the Graeco-Roman civilization.

Into this putrid mass of decadence Christianity came, with its clear and unequivocal teachings of chastity, charity, justice, kindliness and brotherliness. The recipients of Paul's letter, who dwelt at Ephesus and at other centers of city "culture," had no doubt as to what he was writing about. Against the black background of prevailing paganism he drew a plain picture of Christian character and conduct. His friends, disciples of Jesus, were to be utterly different from their heathen neighbors.

A Program for Living.

Let us quote fragments from this Christian counsel, which constitutes the present lesson, bearing ever in mind how sharply it contrasts with the "modern" mode that we have been witnessing of late, in strange recrudescence:

"This I say therefore, and testify in the Lord, that ye no longer walk as the gentiles also walk, in the vanity of their mind, being darkened in their understanding, alienated from the life of God, because of the ignorance that is in them, because of the hardening of their heart; who, being past feeling, gave themselves up to lasciviousness, to work all uncleanness with greediness. But ye did not so learn Christ; if so be that ye heard him, and were taught in him, even as truth is in Jesus, that ye put away, as concerning your former manner of life, the old man, that waxeth corrupt after the lusts of deceit; and that ye be renewed in the spirit of your mind, and put on the new man, that after God hath been created in righteousness and holiness of truth * * * Let him that stole, steal no more; but rather let him labor, working with his hands the thing that is good, that he may have whereof to give to him that hath need. Let no corrupt speech proceed out of your mouth, but such as is good for edifying as the need may be, that it may give grace to them that hear * * * Let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamor, and railing, be put away from you, with all malice; and be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving each other, even as God also in Christ, forgave you * * * And be not drunken with wine, wherein is riot, but be filled with the spirit."

A "Different" Generation.

Those pregnant phrases of Paul will be analyzed in thousands of Sunday school classes—which, by the way, are the most prevalent and powerful forums for the consideration of human behavior to be found anywhere on earth today. Their radical nature, in the light of their background will be made clear. Many teachers will look up the cult of Diana, which prevailed in Ephesus at the time the letter was received; and they will point out the sort of orgies which their worship connoted. They will explain that the real lure of the paganism license which many "emancipated" persons are trying to impose upon the life of today. Also, these students of the Bible and its background will call attention to the hideous cruelties of class distinction and slavery which prevailed; and they will not omit the singular significance of the linking of sensuality and greed, a phenomenon that has concerned contemporary psychologists.

In sensational contrast, we find that the believers were summoned to live a white life amidst this dark background. "Saints in Ephesus!"—what a phrase of contradictions If Christians could follow the Jesus Way in the Ephesus of Paul's time, they could do so anywhere!

Oyster Roast Is Attended By Hundreds

Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Hosts at Gay Party at Stone Ridge.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

The opening of the oyster season gives a good excuse for parties among members of Capital society, for there is no place where finer bivalves can be obtained. Washingtonians are connoisseurs of the delectable shellfish.

The oyster roast and supper party given Thursday evening by Mr. and Mrs. George E. Hamilton, at Stone Ridge, their home near Bethesda, Md., was a gathering of the clans, for not only did the several hundred guests include friends of Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton, but those of their sons and daughter-in-laws, Mr. and Mrs. George E. Hamilton, jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Hamilton, whose marriage took place recently; their daughter, Mrs. Nelson N. Alexander, of New York, the former Miss Mary Emily Hamilton, and Mrs. William F. Tompkins, wife of Maj. Tompkins, now stationed in Washington, who was the former Miss Betty Hamilton.

Home Is Showplace.

Stone Ridge is one of the showplaces near Washington. The huge Georgian house standing on a high elevation dominates the rolling lawns and farmlands beyond. Thursday night hundreds of cars rolled up the drive under the maple trees which gleamed bright yellow and red in the lights from the house and from the motors. Mrs. Hamilton, assisted by Mrs. Frederick Hamilton, the former Miss, Nora McIntyre, daughter of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Frank McIntyre received the guests in the huge living room, where built-in bookcases, chintz-covered chairs, soft lights and a crackling fire made a cheery setting. Mrs. Hamilton wore a gown of dark green crepe trimmed with white, and young Mrs. Hamilton was in a boucle suit of the same shade of green.

The guests, who were bundled in heavy topcoats, tweeds and knitted suits, continued from the living room out on the terrace and thence to a grove of trees where ovens had been built for the roasting of the oysters. The glow of the fire made strange shadows among the tall trees surrounding the group and everybody laughed and talked, principally about the problem they had struggled with as to what they should wear. Apparently, there had been great consternation among the guests, for an oyster roast in the evening was a novel affair, and evening clothes certainly were not appropriate and tweeds seemed a little too informal for the supper which followed. However, most of them decided to be comfortable.

Tables Stacked With Condiments.

Severel dozen men were kept busy piling the oysters in the ovens and several more were there to open them and hand them to guests as fast as they were able. Tables near the fires were stocked with condiments for the oysters and two huge kegs of beer were placed nearby.

Supreme Court Justices, diplomats and veteran members of the bar mingled with debutantes and young married couples in one of the most informal and gayest parties of the year.

Mrs. Tompkins, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton, who wore a smart suit of bright blue boucle, with a scarf of red, made herself more than useful as she adeptly opened oysters for a large group of her friends. Mrs. Alexander, who had been busy seeing that everybody was satisfied, finally dashed to the house to see that things were ready in the dining room, where the guests gathered around a long buffet that fairly groaned with delicious things. Whole turkeys, roast suckling pigs, country ham, joints of lamb and a great variety of salads, hot biscuits and rolls and at one end, coffee.

Guests Include Two Justices.

Associate Justice Harlan Fisk Stone and Associate Justice Pierce Butler were there as carefree as any of the guests; the Minister of Panama and Senora de Alfaro, whose son, Dr. Victor Alfaro, is married to the former Miss Nancy Hamilton, grandniece of the hosts; Mr. and Mrs. William P. MacCracken, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Frederick D. McKenney, the Solicitor General and Mrs. J. Crawford Biggs, Mr. and Mrs. John Spalding Flannery, Justice and Mrs. Lawrence Groner, all were glimpsed in the crowds.

Others of the hundreds there were Mrs. D. C. Stapleton and her debutante daughter, Miss Stellita Stapleton, wearing a sports suit of black and white checks and a Tyrolean hat of black with a pert red quill; Miss Marie Ryan, of New York, who has been visiting Gen. and Mrs. McIntyre since the wedding in which she was a bridesmaid. Miss Ryan was with Miss Marie McIntyre, sister of Mrs. Frederick Hamilton, and both wore green sports suits, the former of smart plaids with beige and brown, and the latter in tweed.

Helen Brandt Is Married to Thomas Smith

Washington Girl Is Wedded to Former Resident of Glasgow.

The wedding of Miss Helen Cecilia Brandt, daughter of Mrs. Louise Brandt and the late Mr. George Brandt, of Washington, to Mr. Thomas Henry Smith, of Washington, formerly of Glasgow, Scotland, was solemnized at the Nativity Catholic Church yesterday by the Rev. Lawrence McGlone.

A wedding breakfast at the Shoreham Hotel followed the ceremony, and later a reception was held at the home of the bride's mother. The bride wore white satin, fashioned with long sleeves and high neck, and a train, and her veil was arranged in cap fashion, with a braid effect. She carried white roses and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. James Wendell Beall, the matron of honor, wore a long frock of peach-colored velvet, with a small hat of the same material, and carried talisman roses. The bridesmaids, gowned in garnet and sapphire blue velvet, respectively, were Mrs. Roy H. Ross and Mrs. Earl Roberts. They also carried talisman roses. Betty Friedman was the flower girl.

Mr. Smith's attendants were Mr. Roy H. Ross, best man, and Mr. Charles H. Mayer and Mr. Manley E. Brizendine, ushers. The bride was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Harry F. Wilson, of Norfolk. Mrs. Mary Dowling was the organist, and Miss Maud Miller, soloist. The church was decorated with palms and ferns.

Old Furniture On View Today In Alexandria

17th and 18th Century Furnishings Will Be Shown at Gadsby's.

Sponsored by the Alexandria Association, Col. A. D. Rorex, president, a tea and exhibit of early American and colonial furniture and furnishings in use in this country in seventeenth and eighteenth century homes will be held in Gadsby's Tavern, Alexandria, today from 2 to 6 o'clock. All proceeds will be given to American Legion Post 24 to assist in its indebtedness on the historic building, purchased in 1928, to preserve and restore this landmark, which was the scene of many important events in the early history of the country.

The Henderson collection, formerly at Michie Tavern, Charlottesville, is now housed at Gadsby's. It is one of the most complete in the United States and has been rated as absolutely authentic in a recent survey conducted by the University of Virginia. Included are many historic articles.

Lafayette's room, a small downstairs room overlooking the cobbled courtyard, where rests an eighteenth century coach said to have been the property of James Madison, contains the two oldest pieces in the tavern. The painted chest of drawers, faded and worn to soft colors, is dated 1640, and a small lacquer mirror is approximately the same date.

It is alone worth a trip to Gadsby's to view the early American bar and the famous pine Sunday sideboard. In pioneer days no food was prepared on Sunday, so on Saturday the cooked meals, breads, sweets, &c., were stored in this combination cupboard, desk-like piece of furniture.

Cupboard Dated 1763.

The parlor and state dining room are furnished in Chippendale and Hepplewhite and contain many rare and beautiful pieces of glass and silver. In one corner of the dining room stands a corner cupboard dated 1763, with a fine collection of old bell glass and rare blue sandwich glass.

In the kitchen at Gadsby's Tavern is a candle dip, sought by Henry Ford, which Mrs. Henderson obtained, and the most complete equipment and furnishing which could be purchased by the colonial housewife for her kitchen. A winnowing board and a cheese drip are rarely encountered.

The bedroom of the mistress of the house and the nurseries on the top floor complete the picture of the manner of life of colonial days. Patronesses for this event are Mrs. George H. Dern, Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, Mrs. Henry G. Pollard and Mrs. Julia Grant Cantacuzene.

Mrs. Peek Hostess Chairman.

Mrs. W. L. Peek is chairman of hostess committee, and Mrs. A. D. Rorex has chairge of arrangements for tea. Alternates at the tea table will be Mrs. T. Q. Ashburn, Mrs. A. L. Luhring, Mrs. Bowman MacArthur, L. Littlefield, Mrs. Joseph Crockett, Mrs. John Dunn, Mrs. A. M. Roth, Mrs. Eugene Dooman, Mrs. Sydney Thomas, Mrs. Joseph Weller, Miss Ellen Ticer, Mrs. Charles Moore, Mrs. Douglas MacArthur, Mrs. Robert E. Lee, Mrs. Adkins Briggs, Mrs. Harvey Cootes, Mrs. H. Oliver and Mrs. Charles Beatty Moore.

Miss Helen Norris Cummings is chairman of the hostess committee for the exhibit of furniture and announces the following members of Colonial Dames and the D. A. R. who will assist: Mrs. Thomas Sebrill, Mrs. Selden Washington, Mrs. William J. Boothe, Miss Mary Lindsay, Mrs. Malcolm Matheson, Mrs. Percy Quinn, Mrs. Everett Todd, president of Colonial Dame Club of Washington; Mrs. John T. Ashton, Mrs. Gardner L. Boothe, Mrs. Thomas C. Cochran, Mrs. John Leadbeater, Mrs. William J. Morton, Mrs. Mauchlin Niven, Mrs. Llewellyn Powell, Mrs. Robert M. Reese, Mrs. C. A. S. Sinclair, Mrs. Charles Calvert Smoot, Mrs. Henry B. Soule and Mrs. William B. McIlwaine.

The Cameron Club will be represented by the members of the club and by the executive board, Mrs. E. S. W. Howard, Miss Constance Boush, Mrs. James Sherier, Mrs. Cooper Dawson, Mrs. Charles S. Sentz, Miss Esther H. Green and Miss Helen C. Calvert.

General chairmen are Mrs. Ward Brown, Mr. John Dunn and Mr. A. M. Roth. Weather permitting, the Sixth Reserve Marine Band will play in the old courtyard, while a stringed orchestra from the same group will furnish a program of eighteenth century music in the tea room.

Mr. and Mrs. Fox Are Parents of Boy

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Fox are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son, Wednesday, in Montgomery Hospital. He was named Thomas Craig.

Mr. Fox is United States Consul in Havana, Cuba, and has already left for his post, to be joined early in December by Mrs. Fox, their small daughter, Shirley Jean, and their new son.

The Fox family returned to this country in the spring, after having spent three years in Java, Arabia, and Germany.

Mrs. Fox will be remembered as Miss Elizabeth Danridge Bowman, and is a graduate of Central High School and George Washington University. She has been spending several months in Sandy Spring.

Ambassador Long's Wife Due Back Nov. 7

Mrs. S. M. Breckenridge Long, wife of the United States Ambassador to Italy, and her debutante daughter, Miss Christine Long, will arrive in New York November 7 from Europe and will come direct to the Capital. The ambassador will return to Washington later.

The Ambassador and Mrs. Long will entertain at tea December 2 to present their daughter to society. They will entertain again December 5 at a dance in honor of Miss Long.

PILLAR to POST

CASTILLIAN chicken was the "piece de resistance" at a dinner given recently by Col. and Mrs. Consuelo A. Seoane for a Spanish official connected with the embassy. When the honor guest tasted the chicken he turned to his hostess, his dark eyes agleam, and said with an emotion-filled voice:

"You pay me a great compliment, madame. This dish is superb. Not since I have left Madrid have I tasted anything so good."

Mrs. Seoane felt quite repaid for all the trouble she had taken to purchase the proper ingredients in Washington for this recipe that she had obtained while sojourning in Spain. She and her husband, an outstanding member of the Army Signal Corps (he has invented many of the devices used), have lived in many parts of the world and have had close association with diplomats in many capitals. Naturally, in Washington they entertain and are entertained a great deal by the members of the Diplomatic Corps.

* * * *

Her cook demurred at first at putting jam in with chicken, mushrooms, onion and laurel leaves, but the result was so delicious that she was eager to experiment again when the guest of honor might be from some other country. Served with the Castillian chicken was a fine imported sherry from Amontillado. A coconut dessert called "Blessed Mother," as a centerpiece, a compote filled with luscious grapes that had come packed in cork from a sunny Spanish vineyard, and mints in the national colors completed the dinner.

* * * *

MOST successful hostesses are not lazy and certainly Mrs. Seoane would never be guilty of carelessly ordering a cook or chef to have a "Dinner at 8 for 8." She believes catering to the tastes of guests goes far toward promoting the sympathetic understanding that is the object of entertaining in diplomatic society.

* * * *

Food is one of the most important considerations in life, and isn't it logical to assume that if a diplomat is satisfied and well-fed he will write a much more favorable report to his country than if his American hostess had been less thoughtful in planning his entertainment? When Mrs. Seoane entertains the British attaches she is almost certain to have rare roast beef on the menu. If the Turkish minister is to be her guest she provides Turkish coffee. She says they always seem to appreciate the compliment so much that it is worth all the trouble of trying to procure the proper ingredients. And that is less difficult in Washington than in any other place in which she has lived. Even for her favorite dish of Indian curry she was able to find the ten necessary condiments in Washington stores. She has found, too, that chefs and cooks are nearly always thrilled and eager to cooperate. She recalls an amusing circumstance when planning a hallowe'en supper dance last year at one of the hotels when she called in the French chef and his Italian and German assistants. All three vied with each other in suggesting their own national dishes for the supper, becoming very excited. They presided proudly at the fete, wearing their tall chef hats.

* * * *

OUT in California not very long ago she and her husband were entertained by the wealthy motion picture actor, Sessue Hayakawa in his Beverly Hill home. In repaying their obligation, the Seoanes entertained the Japanese with a dinner at which the favorite dish of Japan was served—Sukiyaki. This was prepared at the table as in Japan, but an electric grill instead of a charcoal brazier. The principal ingredients were strips of steak, bamboo shoots, herbs, soy sauce and sake.

Chinese Minister Tenders Dinner

The Minister of China and Mme. Sze entertained at a farewell dinner yesterday at the legation in honor of the United States Consul General at Large and Mrs. Joseph E. Jacobs. The guests numbered 12.

The Minister and Mme. Sze will leave Sunday to attend a reception at the Women's Medical College, Pennsylvania, and that afternoon will go to Bryn Mawr College to be the guests of honor at a reception, which will be followed by a supper. They will return Monday.

Dinner Party Given by Wiggin For King-Hall

British Writer to Make Radio Talk Tomorrow on New Deal.

The First Secretary of the British Embassy, Mr. A. F. H. Wiggin, entertained at dinner last night in honor of Commander Stephenson King-Hall, of London, who has been spending several days here before sailing from New York Monday.

Commander King-Hall, a writer, playwright, economist, and radio broadcaster, will talk over an international hook-up tomorrow on phases of the New Deal which will be of interest to those abroad, particularly in England.

There have been a number of dinners given during the week in honor of Commander King-Hall, among them being a dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja, which the host was unable to attend as he was called to Minnesota on business. Following the dinner, Commander King-Hall did several of his famous impersonations of British and European notables.

Commander King-Hall's sister is the author of the "Diary of a Young Lady of Fashion," which caused a great deal of interest both in this country and abroad, and created a furore as to its authenticity.

Princess to Ride In Horse Show

Daughter of Belgian Diplomat to Take Part.

Princess Yolande de Ligne, daughter of the Charge d'Affaires of Belgium and Princess de Ligne, will ride in the Maryland Parkway-Meadowbrook Horse Show today. Among others who will exhibit their horses are Lieut. Col. George S. Patton, Maj. L. B. Kramer and Mr. F. Larmour Oyster.

The hound show will be well filled with entries from the following packs: Mr. D. N. Sands, Middleburg Hunt, the Riding and Hunt Club, the Redland Hunt and the Leesburg Hunt.

There also are many farmers in nearby Maryland who raise and hunt hounds. They will make entries particularly in the hound drag race. Many flat racers and steeplechasers are being tuned up for the races.

The horse show committee is desirous of having as many children as possible see the hound exhibit and the children's hunt teams in colors ride their ponies over the course of jumps. The dance hall in the Meadowbrook Club is being decorated in farm style for the Halloween tea dance following the horse show.

Daughter of Traylor Nathan Swift Engaged

Chicago, Oct. 26 (AP).—Miss Nanch Traylor, daughter of the late Melvin Traylor, former president of the First National Bank, and Nathan Swift, member of the wealthy Swift packing family, are engaged, the Chicago Evening American said today. The wedding is expected to take place during the Christmas holidays.

Society Girls To Aid on Plans For V. F. W. Ball

Debutantes Are to Serve on Committee for Event November 10.

Capital debutantes have set aside time to aid the annual benefit ball of the Veterans of Foreign Wars to be held November 10 in the ballroom of the Willard Hotel. Following the custom of other years, a large number of the most popular and attractive young women who will be formally presented this winter will serve on the debutante committee.

Miss Mary Katharine Spinks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Spinks, who will be presented at a luncheon November 9, has been selected as chairman of the committee and will have with her as cochairman Miss Silvine Clagett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Contee Bowie Clagett, who will make her bow in Baltimore at the first Monday german. Others on the committee are Miss Margaret McMullen, daughter of the Director of Public Health and Mrs. John H. McMullen; Miss Margaret Speir, Miss Betty Marsh, Miss Mary Petterson, Miss Randolph Richardson and Miss Julie Koester.

Miss Mary Senate Howes, daughter of the First Assistant Postmaster General and Mrs. W. W. Howes, heads the subdebutante committee for the benefit. Miss Katharine Friant, Miss Bette Hartz, Miss Betty Cremen, Miss Mary Ellen Cremen and others will assist her. Debutantes of last year are also serving on a committee of members of the younger set, including Miss Katharine Pearson and Miss Mildred English.

The ball has for its leading patrons the President and Mrs. Roosevelt. Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, wife of the Secretary of Commerce, chairman of the box and patroness committee, has serving with her the wives of members of the Cabinet.

Pretzel Firm Here Puts Out Fine Product

A Swedish Type Muffin Makes Appearance in Local Markets.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

THOSE WHO believe there is nothing much to pretzels but their shape have only to try those made by a certain enterprising Washington firm in order to realize what delicacies they can be.

They are prepared by an old Pennsylvania Dutch recipe popular in Colonial days and brought to this country by one of the early settlers from Holland. The pretzels are unrivaled in flavor and crispness. They do not need even a beer accompaniment to bring out their full flavor. All who have tried them agree they are delicious whenever or however they are munched.

Those who believe that potato chips are dry and uninteresting things at best will change their minds when they taste those produced by the same firm. They have more real flavor than you'd ever think a mere potato could. Given a bag full to begin with, you can't leave off until the last chip is gone.

Those interested in luncheons, Dutch suppers or buffets will find these pretzels and chips a valuable aid.

Swedish-Type Muffin.

To people who say, "I'll do or diet," and find that the spirit is willing but the flesh is weak, comes the good news of a Swedish-type muffin, crisp and toasted, which has just appeared in local markets. The new muffin-crisps are said to contain less than half the starch in white, whole wheat or in any of the Swedish-type breads, and are more than half cereal-protein, an ingredient in which most reducing diets are deficient. The product is the result of five years' scientific research.

This wafer-thin, delicately flavored wheat muffin is news because while it "takes the starch out" of the weight-watchers, the high protein content increases general health and satisfies hunger. Those who have tried them report that the new crisps are the first truly palatable food of such low starch, high protein content.

They are a boon to the dieters who usually fall by the wayside through the "nothing to eat between meals" edict. The crisps, strengthening, but nonfattening, may be eaten to satisfy hunger without adding those excess pounds so fatal to lovely ladies who would look well, feel well and are well.

The versatile little wafer is also becoming popular with those who would keep slim because it makes a dainty accompaniment to the soup or salad as well as the correct foundation for canapes and the like.

Food Suggestions.

Worse than washing dishes, sweeping and dusting is that housewifely duty of thinking up some new edible. When the same old things day by day begin to pall, it's time to visit a certain little shop on Seventeenth street where the shelves are filled with unusual dainties, all of highest quality and all priced to suit a housekeeper's budget.

One very interesting suggestion you'll find in the way of desserts is canned mangoes, a choice Mexican variety. This delicate tropical fruit with that particular and indescribable flavor is put up in a crystalline white, pure cane syrup. Ice these for 20 or 30 minutes and serve "as is" and you'll have a delicious dessert. Or they're splendid if served with ice cream. Some hostesses put the fruit in the ice cream and serve with the syrup poured over the top.

Here also are some ideal cocktail pickles put up in wine of vinegar. They add a spicy and unusual touch that will distinguish your refreshments from the usual run.

If you want something for hors d'oeures that your guests will truly relish try the calamares en sutinta, delectable Spanish fish, rich in flavor.

Attractive Serving Dishes.

Ways and means for enabling the hostess to serve in an ever more attractive fashion are constantly appearing in the local shops.

On display now in a Connecticut avenue store are sandwich trays, candy dishes, fruit bowls, and even punch bowls made from a new metal.

Aluminum and other elements have been combined on an alloy base to produce this new material. It has a new luster, new color and has altogether new characteristics. One of its greatest advantages is its proof against fingerprinting. No matter how bright and shiny most metal is spruced up to be there are usually the tell-tale traces of hands. But no so with this. It neither rusts, peels nor tarnishes, and is not lacquered nor superficially plated.

Three Afternoon Events.

A horse and hound show, a race meet, and a style show will be a few of the features of interest to Washingtonians who drive out to a nearby saddle club this afternoon.

The man in charge of the entertainment has had years of experience with such shows and never fails to provide the onlookers with dozens of thrills.

The style show is sponsored by a local shop and put on by a stylist who has set a recrod in the number of shows she's held this year—and every one a success.

This Design Is a Smart Uniform or Housedress

Pattern No. 696.

EQUALLY trim and efficient is this design—whether it be of white broadcloth in the hospital or of gay print in the home. Uniform or housedress—it is smart as either.

The skirt is in two pieces. Those buttons have no work to do; they are merely decorative, for the front closing is only simulated. A narrow shoulder-yoke tops the front blouse gatherings, and the long sleeves have double-linked cuffs.

Cut in sizes 14 to 44. Size 20 (38), with long sleeves requires 4¼ yards 35-inch fabric; with short sleeves 3⅞ yards.

Child Chats

By Alice Fox Pitts.

EDUCATORS know that children derive the greatest pleasure from constructive toys; that a doll whose face is recognizable as a member of the human family, and whose clothes can be taken off and buttoned on, gives the greatest happiness to a small girl. Then why do the shops display so many mechanical toys that soon lose their lure, and dolls that present the height of grotesquerie in appearance?

Because, says the toy buyer in a Washington department store, adults buy toys to please themselves, not the children! Not all of them, of course, and never intentionally. But an aunt who sets out to choose a birthday present for a young niece demands "something different," forgetting that a homely rag doll, a replica of the one she cuddled when she was a child, will please the little girl more than one that is modern and fantastic. Father is so charmed with a clown that winds up and walks that he takes it home without stopping to think whether it will hold a small boy's interest after its newness has worn off.

Since these types of toys sell, the stores supply them. Yet in addition to meeting this demand, modern toy departments are giving more space than ever before to toys that provide both education and entertainment, toys that will engage the child's attention not for a few hours, but day in and day out for months at a time. The wise mother will turn to a kindergarten teacher, to an authoritative book, or she will study her own child, to discover what toys serve their purpose best. And when she goes out to select toys, she will choose them not from her own but from the child's point of view.

(Tuesday: Plan a Halloween Party Now.)

For suggestions on toys for children, write Alice Fox Pitts, in care of The Washington Post, stating age and sex of child for whom they are intended.

Worry Is Found Cause of Ulcers

That a person can worry himself into having ulcers of the stomach has been proved by recent X-ray pictures. These pictures, according to Drs. A. C. Ivy and Henry James Spencer, show the insides of the stomachs of nervous patients to be so highly agitated that they look like a "sock filled with billiard balls."

Dr. Ivy, who teaches at Northwestern University, says:

"I have had sufficient contact with peptic ulcer patients to realize the rather important rôle played by sustained anxiety, and the associated unhygienic habits in the causing of ulcer."

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Phlebitis.

PHLEBITIS can scarcely be considered a definite disease. It is a symptom of inflammation of a vein and is usually followed by the clotting of blood within a portion of the vein.

Until recently it was considered bad practice to permit newly operated cases to move even a finger. Usually the patient desires to be let alone and to remain perfectly quiet, as movement may cause pain. It is now recognized that prolonged quiet tends to slow the return flow of blood from the extremities to the heart. For this reason many surgeons instruct their patients to begin exercises within the first 24 to 48 hours following important surgical procedures. The exercises prescribed are, of course, not strenuous, and consist of twisting the leg, moving the knee, and moving the thigh. If the arms are free they may be exercised.

Some writers have advocated the use of light massage in lieu of asking the patient to perform the exercise himself. The objection to the massage treatment is that most patients, subsequent to surgical procedures, suffer from pain, and massage may be annoying.

How much infection has to do with phlebitis seems to be questionable. It is clear that if bacteria are present in the blood stream, veins injured by previous illnesses may serve as favorable culture beds. Normal blood in a normal vein does not clot, hence whenever clots form the trouble must lie in the vein itself or in the blood. It would seem that in the presence of infection, such as gangrenous appendix, exercise of even the lightest character should be prohibited for a much longer period than is indicated in the preceding paragraphs.

Phlebitis is usually quickly recognized because of the resulting swelling of the part affected, the clot in the vein preventing the normal return flow of blood. Once phlebitis has developed and been recognized the leg should be placed completely at rest. Certain authorities advocate the use of a tight bandage to prevent the upward extension of the clot. This procedure usually gives great relief to the patient. The bandage is retained for from two to six weeks, and is readjusted only in case it tends to loosen.

Years ago phlebitis in women subsequent to confinement was much more common than it is today. It was called "milk leg" and was thought to be due to infection.

As a rule phlebitis is not dangerous if the condition is carefully managed. On the other hand clots may break away from the coagulated mass and reach the right side of the heart and hence the lungs, resulting in either death or serious illness. A fairly recent report of 12,615 major surgical operations in a New York hospital records but one fatality due to phlebitis.

Recipe Contest Judges Award Prize to Man

Liver en Casserole Wins; Spinach and Cabbage Are Runners-Up.

By Dorothea Duncan.

FOR the first time a man is the winner in The Post's recipe contest. The first prize this week goes to John M. Chamberlin, 1230 New Hampshire avenue, for his recipe for liver en casserole. This was one of the many recipes for left-overs submitted in the contest. Mr. Chamberlin's success should encourage other men to compete.

Second prize, $2, was awarded Miss Lucile Laude, 238 Willow avenue, Takoma Park, Md., for her recipe for rejuvenated spinach, and third prize, $1, to Mrs. Mary Long, 82 Shepherd street, Hyattsville, Md., for her recipe for glorified cabbage.

Their recipes appear in order.

Liver En Casserole.

Cut cold left-over liver into strips of 1 inch or less. Crisp several slices of bacon, remove from the skillet to drain, and fry slowly in the bacon grease until soft and translucent, one cup of chopped onions, thinly sliced, and two tablespoons each, finely chopped celery and green pepper. Then stir in one-fourth cup flour, salt and pepper to taste, and bring to a medium thin gravy with water. Break the bacon into about a cup and a half of toast crumbs. Put a layer of liver in a casserole, cover with gravy, and top with toast crumbs and bacon. Repeat till full, finishing with toast crumbs. Bake in a moderate oven (350° Fahrenheit) about 45 minutes.

Rejuvenated Spinach.

Place left-over spinach in a wire strainer, which will serve simultaneously as a container for steaming and a mold. Steam over boiling water, and freshen with a little lemon juice and cider vinegar, using half and half. When thoroughly heated, place spinach in the center of a vegetable platter. Surround, sunflower fashion, with asparagus tips (salad points), preheated in the can. Pour a white sauce, with a suspicion of nutmeg in it, over the asparagus tips, and top the spinach mold with rounds or strips of hard-boiled egg.

Glorified Cabbage.

1 large head of cabbage
Left-over bacon or ham
Left-over rice, spaghetti or macaroni
Left-over tomatoes, fresh, stewed or soup
Minced onion or celery or both
Salt and pepper
6 strips of bacon

Select a large, solid head of cabbage. Scoop out the center to form a nice bowl. Wrap the cabbage in cheese cloth, plunge in boiling salted water and cook about 10 minutes. In the meantime make a stuffing of the left-overs. Put some fat in a frying pan and fry the onion and celery about 5 minutes, then add the left-over rice or spaghetti, minced ham or bacon, cook a few minutes, then add enough tomatoes or soup to moisten. Heat thoroughly, season well, and stuff the cabbage bowl. Cover with the uncooked bacon and place in oven until bacon is crisp and attractive. Scooped-out cabbage may be used for salad for another meal.

Fudge Recipes To Be Awarded Three Prizes

ARE YOU one of those persons whose chocolate fudge always turns out all right? If so, you have an opportunity to win a prize in The Post's recipe contest.

Fudge is the Nation's favorite candy and everyone makes it, but alas few make it well. Why is it that fudge is so seldom a success? Why is it often too soft or too hard or too grainy or too this or too that?

If you have a recipe that will unfailingly produce delicious, smooth, creamy fudge that is always the right consistency, now is the time to tell the secret.

The Post's recipe contest next week will be devoted entirely to chocolate fudge. For the best recipe submitted, $3 will be awarded; for the second best, $2 and for the third best, $1.

Address all communications to Dorothea Duncan, Home Economics Editor, The Washington Post. Recipes should be typed if possible. If not, the writing should be clear and in pen and ink. Recipes should be checked carefully for omissions. The full name and address of the sender should appear on each separate sheet.

Contributions should be received on or before Thursday of next week.

Jennifer Hale

By Rob Eden

Suspected of the murder of David Corey, Jennifer Hale changes her name to Mary Dixon and flees to Seattle; although innocent, she can not face the notoriety involved. Parker Ives, friend of the dead man, knows her whereabouts and sends her $1,000 and urges her to go still further away. Meanwhile, she has met Kent Severn, who falls in love with her and gives her a job in his father's office. Among her new friends is Andy Young, a private detective. Kent Severn's mother, disapproving her son's interest in Mary, retains Andy to discover anything detrimental to Mary's character in her past; but she invites her to a house party to seem to be nice to her.

MARY went directly to the kitchenet as she always did these evenings when she entered her flat. First she put down the few bundles that contained her dinner, then without removing her hat or coat she approached the cupboard, and taking a piece of paper from one of the drawers spread it out on the shelf. Next, she took the lid off the flour cannister, and emptied the flour out onto the paper.

The money was there! She never failed to be relieved when she saw it, wrapped in brown paper, wedged into the cannister. It was only a minute before she had the flour back in the can, and the cover on. The paper, she emptied first into the sink, and then crumpled up and put in the wastebasket.

After that she could take off her things, which she did promptly, unlocking the door of the bedcloset to hang up her coat and hat. The closet she left locked when she was out of the apartment. She didn't want Mrs. Bennett prowling in and discovering how few and inadequate her clothes were. There were more, of course, than when she had taken the flat, but still not enough for a girl who was working and earning her own money. Nita's closet was full and bulging. Hers was not. Only a few things hung on the hooks.

She Grew Panicky.

In half an hour her dinner was ready, and she was eating it on the little table at one end of the kitchenet, not heartily because she had too much on her mind.

Her phone rang, but although she jumped to her feet, she didn't go to it to answer it. Kent probably. He had said he would call and see if she could get out of her date for tonight. She didn't have a date, but it was the easiest way to avoid going out with him.

Bell Frightened Her.

Four more times the bell pealed through the apartment, and then was silent. Each time it rang a quiver of physical pain ran through her body. When it stopped, she still heard the echo of it while she was doing her few dishes.

Kent! Something had to be done about him soon, or else she didn't know what would happen. He couldn't understand, he wouldn't understand, why she couldn't go out with him every night. Why she couldn't keep some evenings free for him.

Mary sighed deeply as she went into the living room and sat down on the couch. She tried to read a magazine, but she couldn't. She couldn't do anything but sit, and stare, and think, and wish. Wish that she weren't either Jennifer Hale or Mary Dixon. Wish she were someone else entirely. Some other girl who was fit for Kent to love, and who was fit herself to love him. For she loved him. She had known that for some time. At first she had brushed the discovery aside as too impossible. Now she didn't dare to do that, for her whole being longed for him, ached for him.

The men in her life had been few because Cornelia Hale didn't approve of romance and kept strict track of her niece. Her friendship with David Corey had blossomed because of David's insistence and because it offered her an outlet she had never had before—a chance to do the things she had been missing for years.

Only Loved Kent.

Kent was the first man she had ever really loved, and yet the love she had for him was terrifying to her. Her knowledge of it made her miserable. Instead of sweetness, it was pain, as much pain as if she had been wounded physically.

There was the house party at Bainbridge Island tomorrow. She was going over with Kent and Larry at one in Kent's boat.

"I shouldn't have accepted," she told herself aloud. She had tried pleading that relatives were coming, that she must meet their train, but it did no good. Mrs. Severn would not have it. Kent wouldn't have it. Nothing would do but that she come to the house party.

"Your cousin from Tacoma can meet them!" Kent insisted. "Let her do it for once. You've got to come, Mary. It means so much to me—I want you to meet my family, I want you to know them, and them to know you!"

Mrs. Severn had added more persuasions, which weren't persuasions at all, but commands. Mary saw that she had to go—or else have them suspicious.

As Far as Possible.

The house party was going to be the last time she would go out with Kent. She said that aloud, too. Tomorrow was the last day she would work for the Severn Lumber Co. That was final. There was no turning back from it. Some way, she had to arrange matters so that it would seem natural for her not to return to the office. Some way, so no suspicion should arise until she was out of Seattle.

Again she silently thanked Ives for his gift of the thousand dollars. Without it, she would be lost, for to travel one had to have money. She had money, plenty of it, but her plans weren't straightened out yet. All she knew was that as soon as she could, preferably Sunday night, she had to start away—as far away from Seattle as she could.

If she could go tonight! She shook her head disconsolately. She couldn't. Too risky. The plans had to be smooth. No rushing off.

For half an hour she sat very still, her head cupped in her hands, her elbows on her knees, her shoulders hunched forward. Mary Dixon had to leave quietly as Mary Dixon. There must be no linking her up with Jennifer Hale.

Would Not Go.

Could she—yes, she could! Her shoulders straightened abruptly and her hands dropped to the shabby couch. Tomorrow on the way over to Bainbridge, she could tell Kent that her aunt and uncle weren't coming this week-end after all.

Her aunt was ill, very ill. She had had a telegram that morning, in which her uncle had asked her to be ready to come at a moment's notice if they needed her.

That way Kent would be prepared for her absence. Only natural that she should go to her aunt's bedside. Sunday evening after he brought her home from Bainbridge, she could call him at home and tell him she had found a telegram under her door, and she was leaving for—Spokane? Could it be Spokane? Spokane was as good as any other place. Spokane it would be.

Not only would she prepare Kent for her aunt's illness, she would prepare Nita in the morning, so nobody would be surprised when she didn't show up for work Monday.

The train to New York went through Spokane. From the train she could mail a letter to Kent telling him that her aunt was much worse than she expected, and that she had to stay on for a month. He had better get another girl for her place.

Horrible Lies.

Lies, horrible lies. She had done nothing else but lie since she had left Los Angeles. How much longer was she going to have to lie? The tales she told Kent hurt her. She had a headache already thinking of what she had to tell him on the morrow. Wearily, she walked into the kitchen to get a drink of water. She hadn't turned on the tap when the bell rang. With her hand raised to the faucet, she waited for it to ring again. It did. Then the third time. Was it Kent?

It wasn't Kent. It was Andy Young, and after trying the bell for the fourth time, he went downstairs and knocked on the door marked, "Manager."

"I wonder if Miss Dixon's home?" he asked. "I've been ringing her bell, and there seems to be a light under her door——"

Mrs. Bennett was all smiles. "I couldn't say, I'm sure, but I think she does leave her light on when she goes out. Often I've gone up in the evening and rung, and she's been out and a light's been under her door. Can I give her a message?"

"Just tell her Mr. Young called."

"Glad to, Mr. Young."

He went on out, but didn't get in his car, which was parked in front of the Thornley Arms. Instead, he circled the building on foot and finally went down the alley. The building across the alley was an apartment house, too, three stories, whereas the Thornley Arms was four. In ten minutes Andy was on the roof of the Camden Court, looking over at the lighted window of Mary's flat.

A shadow crept across the blind. So she was there then!

Toy Balloon Soars 500 Miles to Set Record

A toy balloon released in England recently made a flight record when it traveled 500 miles to Stuttgart, Germany. This is a world distance record for a balloon without passengers or cargo.

The balloon won in a competition in which 120 bags were sent up, each bearing an addressed card. Seven reached the Continent.

Solar Cooker Invented By Smithsonian Savant

A solar cooker, which boils, stews, preserves and bakes, has been invented by Dr. C. C. Abbot, secretary of the Smithsonian Institution and one of the country's leading physicists.

The heater, which is built on the principle of a bathroom heater, is filled with oil, which is heated by the sun's rays, and stays at a high temperature, even at night.

Dark Gray Cassimere Coat Assures That 'Well-Dressed' Look

Peaked Lapels Roll Smartly In This Model

By M. A. Weiss.

DRESSED UP and going somewhere—that's the impression the chap in the illustration conveys. His coat is a soft finished dark gray cassimere, carrying a self pattern. The lapels are peaked and roll smartly. The fly front prevents unsightly button gaps, and the "guards" pockets, set on a diagonal, add an individual touch usually found in the finest custom made coats. Note the maroon carnation . . . a bit of swagger . . . but it takes one out of the rank and file.

Men who like derbies find that this type of coat sets that hat off perfectly. There's just enough semi-formality to the two to give the impression of "high finance" and "big deals." Cuffless trousers are coming into their own again in a big way. Make sure yours are taped at the back to prevent friction fraying. And another tip—with this outfit don't wear dark gloves . . . the light shades of pig, chamois or buck add the "finishing" touch . . . and a very important one too.

His shirt came all the way from the hill country of northern India (or at least the fabric did). It's a soft and beautifully woven material known as cashmere. The particularly soft and silk-like wool of native sheep contributes no small part of its good looks. The Prince of Wales popularized this fabric when he took it up for his shirtings a few years ago.

Today American mills are turning out shirts of this material, less costly and quite as good looking as the original in patterns and colorings that find ready acceptance among well-dressed men.

Definite Weaves Popular.

Definite weaves and twills have made their appearance, together with new stripings and solid colors. These are admirable for sports wear. The chap above has indulged in the newest wrinkle of having the short-pointed, tabless tab collar pinned.

Possibly you're not the type to wear this particular outfit. But there's no need to weep over it. Most of us are types, and "what to wear and when to wear it" is a problem. Here are a few keen outfits seen no later than last week:

A shortish, stout chap neatly dressed in a two-button, double-breasted, gray worsted-flannel suit with yellow chalk stripes. He wore the jacket buttoned to the lowest button . . . had a blue Chambray shirt with white pique collar and cuffs attached. A narrow blue tie with a spaced yellow figure . . . cream buck gloves, gray Homburg with a black band and English toe-cap black calf shoes.

Wears Green Cheviot Suit.

A lean, lithe chap looked extremely well in a double-breasted lovat green cheviot suit with a blue overplaid. A British striped shirt with self-tab collar, a green rep regimental tie with light blue stripes, buff pigskin slip-on gloves, a narrowish derby. He carried an ash stick.

One well-dressed individual had Bond street and Saville Row written on his kit with a skilled designer's needle. His suit was the smart three-button peaked lapel, navy blue with white chalk stripe model. His weskit was double-breasted. He wore a pin-striped shirt with a starched white Prince of Wales widespread collar.

His tie was solid black charve set off with a pink pearl pin. His handkerchief was blue with a red dotted pattern. His gloves were of chamois. His hat was a black Homburg. He carried a rattan stick with a pipestem handle, and his shoes were black and straight tipped. Draped over his arm was a covert cloth fly-front coat . . . his entire ensemble was in keeping here as it would be in London.

Tweed on Upgrade.

Forecast:

Tweeds are still on the upgrade.

The French shape . . . that narrowish cut . . is the now accepted style of neckwear.

The university man is going in for "rabbits' hair" sox and ties in a big way. Especially in Argyle and striped patterns.

The shawl collar is the smart note for this season's dinner jacket. Unfortunately many of us can't wear it.

If you want to know where to find such clothes, phone National 4200 or write to the Men's Fashion Editor, Washington Post. He'll gladly answer all questions concerning hobbies, habits and habiliments of the man.

This outfit may look New Yorkish, but the bowler, the slant pocket and the maroon carnation are Londonese. Note the cuffless trousers, a smart style this season. The weskit at upper right is blue-gray, with a blue-gray necktie, the ground almost matching, and carrying a diagonal treble stripe in a darker tone of blue. Below is a fawn waistcoat with a fawn jasper ground tie having a motif in red and black.

Sunday School Enrolls Midland, Tex., Cowboys

Because they believe it is bad enough to "cuss" and go to Sunday School but worse to "cuss" and not go, several cowboys who have seen the error of their ways, have joined a Sunday School class in Midland, Tex.

Occasionally, according to the Associated Press, as many as 500 attend the meeting. A fifteen-minute song service follows the morning lecture. Until the class was organized as "strictly stag" four years ago, only about 10 per cent of the men attended Sunday School.

Romance of Constitution Told To Junior Republican Women

Hon. William Tyler Page Says Grounding in Principles of Good Government Is Acquired by Study of Its Origin and Development.

TALKING on "The Romance of the Constitution," Hon. William Tyler Page, author of "The American's Creed," traced the Constitution from its beginning and through its development for members of the Junior League of Republican Women at a meeting yesterday at the Republican Club.

The Junior League of Republican Women, Mr. Page pointed out, was organized so younger women could have an opportunity to become well grounded in the principles of good government.

A basis for learning these principles, he said, is a thorough knowledge of the Constitution; and since it is staken for granted that most young women are romantically inclined and also have a desire to grasp the principles of government, he proposed to show how the body of laws on which government is based has a romance of its own.

Genesis of Constitution.

"When George Washington as a boy of 16 started out to survey the domain of Lord Fairfax, the Constitution had its genesis," he said.

"Even though this country then was only a colony, the boy, George, who was later to be the first President, conceived of the need of a separate set of laws for people living on this side of the Atlantic."

From then on, Mr. Page pointed out, the Constitution, which had its inception in the mind of George Washington, and its foundation were later developed and built step by step by him and his contemporaries. After that it was a matter of adding additional laws as they were needed in order that the Government might have a definite and suitable background against which to function.

Committee Chairmen Report.

In addition to Mr. Page's talk, a number of reports were given by committee chairmen. At the close of the meeting, tea was served, with Mrs. William Fitch Kelley, president of the League of Republican Women, presiding at the table. She was assisted by Mrs. Harry E. Hull, vice president of the League of Republican Women; Mrs. Thomas P. Littlepage, jr., chairman of the Junior Club credential committee, and Mrs. Edward E. Calladay, treasurer of the junior club.

What's Puzzling You?

TO BE correctly dressed for the occasion without being foppish is the mark of the gentleman. There is a modern etiquette in dress as important as the etiquette governing conduct. The men's fashion editor of The Post is prepared to answer queries on the what, when and why of sartorial good taste. Put your questions to him.

Cold Weather Wear.

MEN'S FASHION EDITOR: With cold weather approaching, my enjoyment of football games is dimmed by frozen feet and hands. Is there any type of footwear or gloves to overcome this? FRIGID.

• • • •

SIR: There is an overshoe, fleece-lined and good looking, that should solve the pedal difficulties. For the hands I can recommend string gloves, fleece-lined, and that new gadget which resembles a cigarette case. You fill it with water and the chemical it contains transforms the instrument into a pocket heater. Send me a self-addressed envelope and I'll tell you where to buy them.

Controlling Dress Shirt.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: A stranger both to the city and to your paper, I am inspired by the interesting comment I happened upon in this morning's Post to make certain heretical remarks concerning my own—the less gentle—sex.

We men are accustomed to look with an attitude of sceptical, if tolerant, indulgence on women's claim to be our intellectual peer. If the argument waxes hot and indignant we grow more majectically oratorical and finally administer the inevitable crushing coup de grace, namely:

• • • •

What has woman produced of a creative character? Where is her contribution to art, science, philosophy, music, &c.?

In vain does woman reply she has been the victim of restricted education and limited opportunities; that, to use Virginia Woolf's phrase, she has not had "a room of her own." We men listen with polite spepticism to these protests and the discussion comes to an inconclusive close with the challenge: "Just wait and see."

• • • •

What our fair sisters fail to see is that we are pulling the wool over their eyes and making them the victims of a magnificent and venerable hoax. We say we are superior to women because they have not equaled us in the production of the aforementioned art, science, philosophy, &c. Since these happen to be things we men excel in, we create an entirely false issue. We cite those things in which we happen to be especially good and subtly suggest they are the only proper criteria by which to judge relative worth. Naturally we make a better showing than do women, judged by these one-sided standards.

• • • •

This false attitude has had serious results. It inculcates in woman an attitude of inferiority — tacitly accepted by us — which leaves her under perpetual necessity of "showing us." Something of a handicap when we consider men have a few thousand years' head-start. More serious still: in her determination to "catch up," woman's attention is deflected from the real issue, namely: What are the possible qualities she may have as a woman, unique to herself, at which we men would make a poor showing?

• • • •

What are such unique qualities? Primarily, woman's greatest interest is in individuals. (At this point, my already stumbling typing fingers stumble still more. I fear a deluge of brickbats from both sides. But that again is part of the great masculine hoax.) Men have made it appear that an interest in the personal is small, petty and narrow—not to be compared with the lofty and noble conceptions upon which man is wont to mediate constructively.

• • • •

Yet what are some of these noble achievements of man? The various systems which rule our present-day world: the business systems, the political systems, the legal systems, &c. This is, so far, a man-made world, and the best brains and greatest genius of man throughout the ages has gone into it's making. Yet, to paraphrase a telling remark of Stuart Chase's about New York City: "Just look at the damn thing."

• • • •

Hear! Hear! you may exclaim. He is forgetting his theme is women. Not at all. I have now come to the very heart of my subject.

If we men have made such a mess of organizing the world, may it not be that our only way out is by trying to incorporate more of what I have called "woman's unique quality:" the capacity to see individuals as whole entities and not as insignificant units in abstract thought systems of one kind and another?

The theme has endless possibilities, but my struggle with the typewriter is getting to be too much for me. Yours, S. R. R.

DEAR S. R. R.: Your championship of woman's intellect, your arraignment of man as perpetrator of a timeless hoax upon her, and the exigencies of space, alike leave me speechless. But it's nice to have heard such a refreshing point of view. M. H.

Good Posture Is Preventive Of Two Chins

Formula Also Includes Steps to Improve Circulation.

By Frances Mangum.

TWIN CHINS are not to be blamed on Father Time. They are the result of bad posture and sluggish circulation.

Few women, even the overweights, would have this beauty detriment to contend with if they held their heads up instead of habitually inclining them toward the chest. This drooping forces the muscles to sag until gradually they lose their power to support properly the underchin flesh.

Bad Reading Posture.

Bad reading posture is often to be blamed. Young women in college who study for two or three hours at one stretch fall into the bad habit of slumping over, which results not infrequently in double chins. And so with women who read half sitting up and half reclining in bed. Unless they have a book rack, or build a support for their book by piling up pillows, they are frequently in a position which forces an extra chin to the fore.

The first step toward warding away or working off twin chins lies in correct posture—sitting, standing and walking.

The next step is promoting better circulation. A few minutes of patting and molding, and a few simple chin and neck exercises will urge the blood stream to keep its normal pace.

Apply Good Skin Food.

After you have cleansed your face and neck with either soap and water or a cleansing cream, apply a good skin food. This should be patted on with rhythmic, quick, short movements so that the circulation is forced to pick up, and the muscles contract. It is far more effective to use the back of your hand for patting, holding the fingers tight pressed together and bending them from the knuckles to give more spring to each pat. Better yet, of course, is a rubber patter for just such purposes.

Now the skin should be tingling if you have patted well for several minutes. Put some astringent on a cotton pad and pat this on over the cream. The combination of skin food and astringent will lubricate and tighten.

Miss Dewson Sees Mrs. James Wolfe

Party Leader Leaves After White House Visit.

Miss Mary Dewson, director of the women's division of the Democratic National Committee, has returned to New York after a two-day visit at the White House. Miss Dewson, who has been vacationing for several months in New England, is generally credited with having played a silent, though effective hand in the Maine election. Noted as a shrewd organizer, she is now expected to put some last-minute touches on the campaign plans of Mrs. Caroline O'Day, Democratic candidate for Representative-at-large from New York.

Mrs. Dewson conferred here with Mrs. James H. Wolfe, educational director of the women's division. A program of future plans to be followed by the women's division in its campaign in the various States was discussed.

Razing of Houses On Farms Advised

One out of every six farmhouses in the United States should be torn down and replaced, Wallace Ashby, of the United States Bureau of Agricultural Engineering, declares.

At least half of the 6,250,000 farmhouses in the country are structually sound except for minor repairs, Mr. Ashby pointed out. These structures can be improved greatly by intelligent remodeling and the installation of modern equipment.

With the changes in location of roads and surfacings, and with the shift from horse drawn to motor traffic, new principles of farm arrangement enter the farm picture, he said. And in many instances the old farmstead might profitably be abandoned in favor of a new location, he added.

Falls Church Presbyterians Will Celebrate

Ceremonies Open Tomorrow, Marking 50th Anniversary of Dedication.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST,
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 126-J.

Ceremonies in connection with the golden jubilee celebration of the dedication of the Presbyterian Church at Falls Church, Va., will open tomorrow and continue through the week. It will also be the sixty-eighth anniversary of the founding of the congregation.

Special services of recollection and reconsecration will be held tomorrow at 11 a. m., when Dr. Albert J. McCartney, pastor of Covenant-First Church of Washington, will speak.

The fiftieth anniversary of the dedication of the present stone building will be on October 30, but the history of the church extends back to the time of its separation from the mother church at Lewinsville. Since that time only five pastors have occupied the pulpit. The Rev. Alton P. Altfather recently completed his tenth year in charge of the church.

The week's program will open Monday with a musicale under the direction of Mrs. J. W. Brown at 8 p. m. and a rededication service will follow Tuesday evening, with greetings from the Washington City Presbytery and an address by the Rev. Charles J. Allen, pastor of the Parkville Congregational Church, of Brooklyn, N. Y. On Wednesday evening there will be an old-time Halloween party; Thursday, an anniversary dinner at 6:30 p. m.; Friday, a dinner and social for the young people; Saturday afternoon ivy will be planted around the church building, and November 4 a golden jubilee communion service will close the ceremonies.

Friendly Society Meets.

The annual diocesan convention of the Girls Friendly Society of Virginia opened yesterday at Pohick Church, on the Washington-Richmond highway, at Pohick. The convention will continue through today with the members of the local branch and the Rev. and Mrs. C. A. Langston as hosts.

Preceding breakfast at the rectory this morning, Holy Communion will be observed in the church with the Rev. C. A. Langston officiating. Mrs. C. P. Sheldon, of Montross, diocesan president, will be the principal speaker at the meeting today. Miss Margaret Williams, of Woodlawn, heads the committee on housing and transportation, and Miss Dorothy Smith, of Newington, is in charge of entertainment and general program.

Sunday School Meeting.

The fall meeting of the Dranesville District Sunday School Association will be held in the Methodist Episcopal Church North on Sunday, beginning at 2 p. m.

The association was organized in 1897, with Ernest L. Howard as president. Other presidents were James F. Pearson, the Rev. J. F. Cummings, William Eads Miller, Maurice A. Yount, Dr. F. W. Huddleson, A. F. Burgess, W. G. Mills, J. A. Wheeler, the Rev. H. H. Hoyt, James Meyers, Barbour Chamblin, Arthur Robb, Albert Adrian, Austin Wagstaff, Howard Armfield and Mrs. Leslie Lanham.

The address of welcome will be given by James Myers, and devotional exercises will be in charge of the Rev. R. F. Shell, pastor. The guest speaker will be C. Morgan Compher.

Other speakers will be William S. Blanchard, Dr. F. W. Huddleson, Maurice Yount, Arthur Robb, Albert Adrian, of Clarendon; Howard Armfield, of Middleburg, and Mrs. Leslie Lanham, of Forestville.

Eggleston Advises Liquor Profit Split

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 26 (AP).—Salvation of the present liquor control system in Virginia was seen today by State Senator J. W. Eggleston, chairman of the commission which drafted the A. B. C. act, as lying in distribution of more of its profits to localities.

Referring to the fight which he made in the general assembly for such a provision, Senator Eggleston said: "My purpose in urging that the localities share substantially in this business was not primarily to give them money for itself alone, but to give them an interest and a definite share in the business so that they could see that the laws were enforced and should combat attacks on the system itself.

"In many instances they are not doing this and the system is confronted with serious danger."

P.-T. A. Urges Caution To Press and Radio

Lynchburg, Va., Oct. 26 (AP).—Motion pictures, radio and the press were called upon to consider responsibility to coming generations in materials given publicity, and to adapt their programs and news to young as well as mature persons, in resolutions adopted today by the Virginia branch of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers in final session in Lynchburg.

Resolutions called for a State-wide program of child welfare, with emphasis placed upon health. Recommendations that prenatal care be given expectant mothers, that State survey be made of social diseases, and that adequate beds be provided at State sanataria were among those indorsed by the convention in final session.

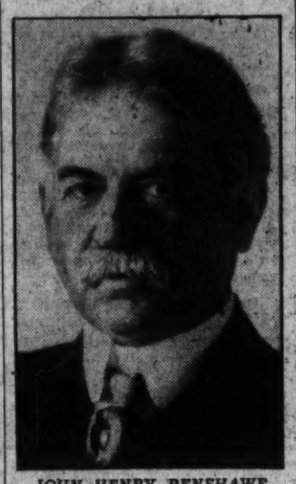
House Being Remodeled For Maternity Home

Chambersburg, Pa., Oct. 26 (Spl.). Work has been begun on remodeling of the Barclay G. Orr home, looking toward the establishment of the Chambersburg Maternity Home.

The home will be operated by Miss Belle Maxheimer and Miss Sarah Small, registered nurses, and Miss Ruth Simons, dietitian. It will have a capacity of seven beds.

Death of Renshawe Recalls American Desert Exploration

Former U. S. Cartographer Accompanied Powell Expedition.



JOHN HENRY RENSHAWE.

Memories of one of the great adventures in United States exploration history were stirred with the death in Brentwood, Md., at Cedarcroft Sanitarium Thursday, of John Henry Renshawe, noted former Government cartographer.

In the days when Utah, Nevada and Arizona were grimly described as the Great American Desert, Renshawe accompanied J. W. Powell on the famous surveying expedition that mapped the then unknown area. Twice, from 1872 to 1878, Maj. Powell in a battered wooden boat shot down the swift Colorado River between the jutting walls of the Grand Canyon.

In country inhabited only by Indians, hundreds of miles from the friendly tracks of the first transcontinental railroad, Renshawe was working on the land, mapping its features.

He followed this exploit with an appointment as topographer on the first staff of the United States Geological Survey in 1879.

Renshawe was born in a log cabin at Pattensburg, Ill. He spent two years as a country school teacher, and his career as a cartographer took him all over the United States studying land contours. Deftly working in light and dark tints, he perfected a system of relief sketching, and his general relief maps of the United States, the various States, and Alaska, rank high in modern cartography. He retired as Government cartographic artist in 1925.

Renshawe also painted water-color landscapes, some of which were shown in the Corcoran Gallery. Twelve were purchased by the Cosmos Club, of which he was a member.

Renshawe was 83 years old. A son, C. Winslow Renshawe, of Garrett Park, Md., and three sisters, Miss Mary P. Renshawe, of Garrett Park; Mrs. Ella Newingham, of Pembine, Wis., and Mrs. Jennie Wollard, of Burke, Idaho, survive.

Maryland Pay Increases Taken Back After Nice's Attack.

Baltimore, Oct. 26 (AP).—Eighty-four employes of the State department of motor vehicles received semimonthly pay checks October 15 which averaged $3.16 more than those they received October 1. They learned today they will be docked the exact amount of the raise November 1. The gubernatorial campaign was directly responsible.

Harry W. Nice, Republican nominee, gave considerable stress this week to the report the employes under Motor Vehicle Commissioner E. Austin Baughman had received the increases and shortly afterward were solicited for campaign contributions. He acused Baughman of thus indirectly obtaining part of the Democratic campaign fund from the State funds.

Gov. Ritchie, Democratic candidate, answered that he knew nothing about the raises, but would investigate. He announced late last night he had found the raises were made without proper approval and would not be allowed. Comptroller William S. Gordy said today that not only would the increased checks be stopped, but that the amount of the increase would be recovered.

Driver's Death HeldAccidental

Autopsy Fails to Reveal Foul Play in Auto Burning.

Woodstock, Va., Oct. 26 (Spl.).—An autopsy held here today by Coroner William C. Ford on the body of Leland Stanford Sutherland, who died last night when he was trapped in his burning automobile six miles north of here, failed to give any indications that the victim had met with foul play, it was reported.

It was determined that the fire was caused by a cigarette which ignited the upholstering.

Sutherland, who had been visiting his mother, Mrs. Benjamin Sutherland, who lives here, was found slumped over the wheel of the automobile. The car was identified by his son, Leland, jr., a member of the Woodstock Fire Co. which was summoned to the blazing machine.

Sutherland, a former resident of Woodstock, left home two years ago to work for the Northeast Motor Co., of Washington, as manager of the used-car department. He lived in the 1400 block of Trinidad avenue northeast.

County Democrats Hold Rally Tonight

Frederick Candidates Will Be Guests.

Emmitsburg, Md., Oct. 26 (Spl.). All Frederick County Democratic candidates will be guests at a rally here tomorrow night.

Speakers will be Sherman P. Bowers, of Frederick, candidate for State's attorney, and H. Dorsey Etchinson, Frederick, who is running for State Senator, and Daniel S. Sullivan, of Baltimore, chairman of the speakers' committee, of the Maryland Democratic Advisory Campaign committee.

Mrs. Andrew A. Annan, chairman of the local district central committee, will head the reception committee.

Port Authority Policy Is Upheld by Peery

Richmond, Oct. 26 (AP).—After a three-hour hearing this afternoon on a petition criticizing the policy of the State port authority in regard to public hearings, Gov. Peery said that he saw no justification for his taking any action against the authority.

He suggested that 13 petitioners, representing Norfolk shipping interests, taks up their grievance with the port authority itself and that since it seemed there was only a slight difference in viewpoint the matter should be adjusted satisfactorily to all concerned.

BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 500. Clarendon, Va.

In an effort to devise ways and means to avoid confusion such as resulted at the last county election when 52 candidates sought the five posts on the county board, the special committee of the Arlington County Civic Federation met last night at the courthouse.

Continuing its plan inaugurated at its first meeting some weeks ago, the committee received the views of the candidates at the last election, but no solution of the problem was reached.

The next meeting of the committee will be held November 8.

G. O. P. Names Vice Chairman.

Mrs. A. Lane Cricher, of Arlington Ridge, Arlington County, was elected vice chairman of the County Republican Committee last night at a meeting held in the offices of Chairman Grayson A. Ahalt.

Plans were completed for the final rally of the campaign for Congress to be held in the Odd Fellows Hall at Clarendon November 1. John Locke Green, Republican nominee for Congress from the Eighth Congressional District, will be the principal speaker.

Addressing the meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association of the Stonewall Jackson School at Mulhall last night, Fletcher Kemp, Superintendent of Schools, warned parents to know who are the companions of their children, if they would prevent future complications. He said wrong companionship among children led to many difficulties of adolescence.

The erection of school safety signs along Wilson boulevard near the school was declared by the association as a victory in its long fight for protection of children from motorists.

It is announced that the program committee will meet at the school Monday night and the annual school carnival will be held the night of November 6.

Will Purchase Ambulance.

Having had a number of conferences with the county fire chiefs on the question of the purchase of an ambulance for the county, County Manager Roy S. Braden last night stated he hopes to be able to make the purchase within the next month.

There is an item of $2,000 in the budget for the purchase of an ambulance and it is expected it will be placed at the Clarendon firehouse.

The Lyon Park Community Center will meet this afternoon at the Community Hall at 3 o'clock. Arrangements have been made for a special program and all members are requested to attend.

Statement on Deposits Amended by Prescott

Stedman Prescott, State's attorney of Montgomery County, yesterday stated that in his speech Thursday night he had intended to say that the deposits in the Silver Spring Bank total more than those in the Takoma Park bank. He did not intend to convey the impression that the Silver Spring deposits were $300,000 more than in Takoma, he said last night.

The county deposits in the Takoma Park bank total $328,426.20, while those in the Silver Spring bank are $355,960.84.

Brentwood's Firemen Plan Oyster Supper

The Brentwood (Md.) Volunteer Fire Department will hold an oyster supper Friday evening in the basement of the Brentwood Methodist Church, Wells avenue and Campbell street.

A. M. Wolfinger, chairman of the arrangements committee, is being assisted by Jesse Brotherton and Edward M. Brown. The firemen are conducting a drive for funds to build a new fire house.

Director Hails Garden Relief In Alexandria

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

The program of subsistence carried on in Alexandria has been a great asset in food production and conservation, as well as in education and recreation, according to a report submitted by Miss Mary Lindsey, garden director, to A. W. Boehringer, public welfare director.

Miss Lindsey reports the total number of gardens cultivated as 194; there were 12 canning demonstrations given; 864 visits were paid to gardens; 78 dozen jars were distributed, with 120 dozen used tops and 173 dozen rubbers; 3,267 quarts of vegetables, and 320 quarts of fruit were canned, the total value of which was $636.25. This does not include vegetables which were dried or stored raw, nor the fresh vegetables used on the tables of the gardeners.

Very few vegetables were obtained from early plantings, due to the extended dry spell, but those gardeners who put in late crops were amply rewarded.

With very few exceptions, the families having these subsistence gardens were on the work relief rolls.

Results Held Gratifying.

The program of subsistence gardens was the first organized plan of community gardening tried in Alexandria, and the results show it to have been definitely of value. Comparatively few of the men had ever done any gardening previously, and but few of the women had done any canning. A number of out-of-door brick ovens were constructed and used for canning purposes, thus preventing the homes from becoming unbearably hot during the canning season.

The recent order of the Virginia A. B. C. Board reducing the hours during which the two liquor stores in Alexandria will keep open, has been rescinded by the board, and the former hours restored, according to E. E. Lawler, jr., local manager. Under the revised order one furloughed employe will be taken back and no employe will be permitted to work more than 48 hours a week.

The hours of the stores, beginning yesterday, are: 9 a. m. to 9 p. m., for Store No. 119, at 423 King street, and 10 a. m. to 10 p. m. for Store No. 120, at 1222 King street, daily, except Saturday. On Saturdays the former store will remain open until 11 p. m., and the latter will open at 9 a. m. and close at 11 p. m.

Scout Meeting Tonight.

The regular life-saving Scout meeting will be conducted in the Salvation Army hall, 319 King street, Alexandria, at 7 o'clock tonight.

Capt. McMullen, of the Salvation Army, states there has been increasing interest in Scout work shown both by the boys attending and by business men and women in the city. Any boy, regardless of church affiliations, between the ages of 11 and 18 years, is eligible to membership in the Scouts, Capt. McMullen announces.

Admiral Joseph K. Taussig, assistant chief of naval operations, who will be the principal speaker at the Navy Day exercises to be held at 7:30 o'clock tonight in Gadsby's Tavern, Alexandria, will be welcomed by Mayor E. C. Davison. Admiral Taussig, who is at present the highest ranking naval officer in the United States, will be accompanied by Admiral Claude C. Bloch, judge advocate general of the Navy; Commander Spencer S. Lewis, of the bureau of operations, and Lieut. Commander Forrest B. Royal.

This celebration is under the auspices of Alexandria Post, No. 24, American Legion, which has extended an invitation to the public to attend.

Democratic Group Giving Card Party

Prince Georges Women to Hold Event Tonight.

The Democratic Women's Club of the Seventeenth District, Prince Georges County, Md., will hold a card party in Star Hall, Rhode Island avenue near Thirty-fourth street, at 8 o'clock tonight. Many Democratic county candidates are expected to be present.

Mrs. Daniel A. Campbell has arranged the party, assisted by Mrs. Karl A. Young, Mrs. Daisy LaCoppidan, club president; Mrs. Arthur W. Hepburn, Mrs. Ruth E. Martin, Mrs. Marguerite Roberts Miller, Mrs. Arthur M. McFadden, Mrs. John Bartoline, Mrs. Charles Reichelt, Mrs. Gordon Ray, Mrs. Josephine O'Leary, Mrs. Bernard V. Moffett, Mrs. Irene Meitzler, Miss Bernadine Hunft, Mrs. L. B. Gordon, Mrs. T. J. Camfield, Mrs. John Williams, Mrs. Frank Sloan and Mrs. Ella Q. Nalley.

Bridge, five hundred and pitch will be played.

Girl Autoist Hurt When Car Skids

Miss Beiberbach Taken to Emergency Hospital.

Driving to her office in Upper Marlboro yesterday morning, Miss Anna Beiberbach, 18, of Brandywine, Md., was injured when her car skidded and overturned near Rosaryville, Md.

After first aid treatment by Dr. W. H. Gibbons of Croome, Md., she was removed to Emergency Hospital in Washington where she was said to have injuries to the back and knee and a severely lacerated hand.

Miss Beiberbach is secretary to Frank Hall, Home Owners Loan Corporation attorney at Upper Marlboro. The accident occurred on the Crain highway during yesterday's rain.

APPLE MARY

Lovable New Character in the Comic World

FIVE YEARS AGO: Wealth . . . mansions . . . limousines . . . servants . . . security.

TODAY: Poverty . . . a room, one flight up . . . an apple cart . . . a crippled grandson . . . uncertainty.

As the pendulum of Life swings between these two extremities the epochal story of Apple Mary begins . . . an apple cart now her only means of livelihood.

Undismayed by swift changes in fortune, Apple Mary becomes inured to her circumstances; spurred by the tender love for her, crippled grandson, Dennie, she radiates an optimism that warms your heart.

Young and old will thrill as this touching and always entertaining story unfolds itself . . . the story of Apple Mary and Dennie . . . pals of six and sixty.

On the Air Today

By George M. Adams, Jr.

CLOSEST cooperation of engineers and elaborate precision switching of various program portions from every one of its studios will enable WMAL to stage at 8:30 o'clock tonight a variety show featuring the greatest number of individual artists ever presented in a Washington radio offering.

Ninety-seven persons employed at the Department of Agriculture, comprising a 25-piece orchestra, a colored chorus of 15 voices, an Hawaiian orchestra of 10 players, a white chorus of 40 voices, a dramatic group of 4 and a novelty act of 3, will make up the show under the direction of George W. Field, Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

WMAL attaches have planned to distribute participants among every studio in the building, which includes several floors. But the audience will receive the program as though it were coming from one large studio. This will be accomplished by synchronizing each part of the program through rapid "pick ups" by control engineers who will mold the whole together.

Originally scheduled as "The Triple A Revue," the program, however, includes employes from several branches of the department, Concert and Hawaiian orchestras, directed by Dr. W. E. Bauer and Ralph Erskine, the choruses under the direction of R. F. Freund and a one-act play will be featured. Emily Lannan, Edward Calkins, S. J. Klein and W. H. Redit comprise the cast. Special numbers will be offered by Harry Kobert, of the Secretary's office, and Robert Campbell, division of Agricultural Engineering.

WHEN a radio program receives congratulation for not going on . . . it's news! That's what transpired the other night at WMAL. A superb example of appreciation well conceived, here's what happened:

Ogden Mills' speech ran ten minutes over the time and into the spot reserved for Harris B. Hull, the Postilion, who was due on at 10 p. m. Studio officials asked Hull to fill in 20 minutes with recordings to carry the station to 10:30 p. m., when the network came in.

But another program—we shall call it the Cavalcade—was scheduled at 10:15 p. m., and when its artists showed up they declined to go on and packed their bags and went home. Meanwhile, Hull carried the time through to 10:30 p. m. A few moments later the telephone rang and the announcer received congratulations on the Cavalcade program, stating that it should go on each night. Then a telegram, signed by a Rev. Somebody, arrived saying he forwarded his heartfelt appreciation for the lovely artistry of the Cavalcade program. Which, you will agree, is rather flattering.

A "PICK-UP" broadcast from the dirigible Macon hovering over San Francisco and addresses by Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt and Admiral Joseph K. Taussig, acting chief of naval operations, head the features planned today by N. B. C. and C. B. S. for observance of Navy Day.

Assistant Secretary Roosevelt speaks on WRC at 10:30 p. m. Earlier in the evening, at 7:15 p. m., on WMAL, Charles Francis Coe, noted writer, will discuss "A Treaty Fully Manned, With Adequate Merchant Marine," while a tribute to the merchant marine will be voiced by R. J. Baker, president of the American Steamship Owners Association, at 12 noon on WMAL.

C. B. S. Navy Day features open in Washington at 5 p. m., on WJSV, with Admiral Taussig reading a special message from President Roosevelt on policies affecting the fleet. A quick switch will be made to the Macon, with Commander Herbert V. Wiley speaking briefly. The concluding portion of the program will come from Washington, with Admiral Taussig discussing the purpose of Navy Day.

INTIMATE and old friends of the late President Theodore Roosevelt, including the judge who swore him in as Chief Executive, will present brief reminiscences of the beloved Rough Rider as they knew him in war, peace and politics, today—the seventy-sixth anniversary of his birth—on WRC at 5 p. m.

Speaking from the library of the Wilcox home in Buffalo, N. Y., where "T. R." took the oath as President of the United States after the assassination of President McKinley, will be Federal Judge John R. Hazel; Col. Charles H. Morrow commandant at Fort Niagara; Representative James M. Mead, chairman of the House Postal Affairs Committee; John Lord O'Brian, former assistant United States Attorney General, and Chauncey J. Hamlin, noted Buffalo scientist.

W. R. BEATTIE, who broadcasts weekly over WRC his timely garden suggestions under the auspices of the Bureau of Plant Industries of the Department of Agriculture, and who is frequently heard on the National Farm and Home Hour, received a striking demonstration of radio's "small world."

Yesterday his wife, answering the telephone, heard a strange voice ask whether her husband was the same Mr. Beattie who was married 40 years ago at a certain church in Ohio. The voice was that of the minister who had married Mr. and Mrs. Beattie. He had been listening to the Farm and Home Hour.

Plans Mapped For Halloween

All Available Police Will Be on Duty During Parade.

Preparations for Washington's Halloween celebration and parade Wednesday night were completed yesterday at the final luncheon meeting of the celebration committee in the Harrington Hotel.

During the parade, which will start at 7:30 p. m., Maj. Ernest Brown, superintendent of the Metropolitan Police, will have every available man on duty, he announced.

All parade participants will be notified today of their places and the order of march will be announced Sunday by Col. John W. Oehmann, chairman of the parade committee.

Orders also were issued detailing and assigning for duty officers of the District National Guard, who will direct the parade. Lieut. Col. P. G. Nevitt will be the executive officer, assisted by Maj. R. S. Childs, in charge of formation and movement; Maj. Sidney Morgan, in charge of disbanding; Maj. William T. Roy, in charge of headquarters section; Capt. C. E. Smithson, adjutant, and Lieut. M. D. Reich, assistant adjutant.

8 Who Gave Lives Among 39 Winning Carnegie Awards

Pittsburgh, Oct. 26 (AP).—Awards of a silver medal, 38 bronze medals and a number of pensions or cash payments were announced today by the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission is recognizing 39 acts of heroism in the United States and Canada.

In eight of the cases the heroes lost their lives, and dependents of two were given monthly pensions.

The silver medal went to Dr. Miley B. Wesson, of the Olympic Club, San Francisco, for saving an X-ray technician from death by electric shock.

The technician, Gertrude Quinn, while in an operating room, touched a wire carrying 30,000 volts. She was hurled unconscious to the floor, still grasping the wire. Realizing the wire was highly charged and that if it came in contact with metal an explosion of chemicals in the room would occur, the surgeon reached for the wire.

The shock threw him against the wall, but he broke the contact. Dr. Wesson received a fractured veterbra and other injuries from which he recovered. Miss Quinn was slightly burned.

Robinson's Father Fights Kidnap Case

Says He Acted Solely for Mrs. Stoll's Safety.

Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 26 (AP). Fighting the Government's efforts to remove him to Louisville for trial in the Stoll kidnaping case, Thomas H. Robinson, sr., today detailed his part in ransom negotiations. He testified that he had withheld information from authorities "in behalf of Mrs. Stoll's safety."

Appearing before U. S. Commissioner Julian Campbell at a preliminary inquiry into charges involving him in the kidnaping, Robinson told of events which followed the abduction of Mrs. Berry V. Stoll from her Louisville home. Thomas H. Robinson, jr., Robinson's son, has been accused as the kidnaper, but has not been apprehended.

Robinson testified he received the $50,000 ransom for Mrs. Stoll and sent it to his son at Indianapolis by his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Frances Robinson, because relatives of Mrs. Stoll had insisted that he do it.

Paris-to-Buenos Aires Air Service Is Planned

Paris, Oct. 26 (AP).—Gen. Victor Denain, minister of aviation, told the Chamber of Deputies' air committee today that a weekly all-air service from Paris to Buenos Aires would begin in January.

He said the schedule would be two and a half days westward and three days eastward, compared with the present operating schedule of seven days and seven and a half days.

Kep Leaves to Return Runaway Daughter

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 26 (AP).—Stanley Kep, whose runaway daughter, Stella, is held by juvenile authorities in San Francisco, left today to bring the girl home. Stella disappeared a week ago with $2,258 from a postal savings account.

Charity officials here said Kep had been asked to explain why he and his family have been on the city's relief rolls.

$200,000 Is Given For Negro Homes

Three Communities to Be Set Up in Alabama.

Negroes were given a place yesterday in the Government's back-to-the-land movement, according to the Associated Press.

The sum of $200,000 has been allotted to develop three subsistence homesteads for Negroes in Alabama, Interior Department officials announced. They are forerunners of a series of communities which will be built for Negro homesteaders at a cost of $1,500,000.

Seventy-five families will get an opportunity to buy modern homes and farm tracts in the three Alabama communities.

Rockne Shaft Being Erected.

Libby Holman to Return To Stage in Quaker City

Philadelphia, Oct. 26 (AP).—Libby Holman Reynolds, once the "moanin' low" girl of Broadway fame, returns to the musical stage November 6 as co-star in "Revenge With Music," described as a play based on the story of "The Three-Cornered Hat." The premiere will take place at Philadelphia's Forrest Theater.

The male lead will be played by Charles Winninger, the Captain Andy of "Show Boat."

Heart Stopped, Man Kept Alive 16 Hours

Chicago, Oct. 26 (AP).—Death won the battle in the end, but medical science kept Harold D. Weil, 26, alive for 16 hours.

Dr. William S. Bolkan said Weil's heart had been still at least a minute by the time he arrived to treat him for a sudden illness. He revived the patient by artificial respiration and rushed him to a hospital oxygen tent.

Driver Gets 5 Years In Death of Girl

Baltimorean PleadedGuilty to Manslaughter.

Baltimore, Oct. 26 (AP).—William F. Smith, local garage mechanic, today was sentenced to five years in the Maryland Penitentiary after he pleaded guilty to charges of manslaughter in connection with the death of an 11-year-old girl who was run down by his automobile last August.

Smith is the second local motorist within four days to receive a prison sentence on manslaughter charges rising out of an automobile accident.

Last Tuesday, Carroll H. Hollingshead was sentenced to five years in the Maryland House of Correction on a similar charge.

School Issue Is Described As Autocracy

Maryland Teachers Hear Durant Today at 67th Convention.

Baltimore, Oct. 26 (AP).—Maryland teachers today were told they are "trying to teach democracy in the most autocratic institutions in the world.".

The statement was made by Dr. D. Montford Melchoir, of the history faculty of Girard College, one of the several speakers at the opening session of the sixty-seventh annual convention of the Maryland State Teachers Association. Nearly 5,000 teachers are here for the two-day meeting.

Discussing the lack of democracy in public schools, a condition which he said should be remedied, Dr. Melchior reminded the teachers that in most instances the pupils were afraid of the teachers, the teachers were afraid of principals and superintendents who, in turn, were afraid of the members of the school board of commissioners, and the commissioners were afraid of the politician. The best work can not be done under such conditions, he said.

Dangerous Child Traits.

Judge Fay L. Bentley, of the Washington Juvenile Court, discussed dangerous child traits with one section of the convention. The tendency to withdraw from social contacts was the most dangerous trait a child may exhibit, she said. She placed it even ahead of traits of dishonesty and immorality, although admitting these, too, were danger signs, and that many teachers put them first on the list.

Dr. James T. Shotwell, director of economics and history of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, spoke at a general session on peace and disarmament. The only way to achieve these ends, he said, is through the usual methods of practical politics.

Political Approach.

"Disarmament has never been, nor can it ever be an idealistic scheme," Dr. Shotwell said. "It has been involved in politics since 1914, and that is the only way to approach it now."

Group meetings, where professional and technical questions were discussed by experts in the fields of education, were held over the city. It is in these meetings that the individual teacher gets most out of the annual conventions, the association leaders said.

A Maryland Tercentenary program was featured at the teachers' annual banquet.

Will Durant, philosopher and author, will speak at a general session tomorrow on "The Roosevelt Revolution."

Gas Code Meeting Inactive on 'War'

Probe Hinted in Case of Sales Under Cost.

Baltimore, Oct. 26 (AP).—The Maryland State Petroleum Code Committee today held what John R. Sherwood, chairman, described as one of "its regular monthly meetings."

The meeting came in the midst of a price war which has seen the price of gasoline pulled down more than 5½ cents a gallon within two weeks. Sherwood said there was nothing directly the committee could do about the price war.

He added, however, that if complaints were made that some dealers were selling the fuel under cost, an investigation might be made from this angle.

Game Preserve In Virginia County

Sanctuary Is Established in Northampton.

Cape Charles, Va., Oct. 26 (AP).—A game sanctuary has been established in Northampton County, E. J. Doughty, jr., county game warden, announced yesterday.

Ten farms have been stocked with pheasant and the season on this game will remain closed for three years.

Farmers signing the agreement permitting their land to be used as a sanctuary are L. W. Brockenborough, G. L. Webster, H. F. Nottingham, S. T. Nottingham, H. S. Thomas, Dr W. W. Wilkins, Chester Wise, Rufus Mapp, Ben Mapp and Mrs. Anne Spady.

Clinic for Crippled Is Set at Staunton

Staunton, Va., Oct. 26 (Spl.).—A free clinic for crippled children in this community will be held here at the county dispensary on Monday.

Dr. Robert V. Funsten, orthopedic surgeon at the University of Virginia, will be in charge, assisted by Dr. Harry M. Wallace, Augusta's health officer, and members of his staff. While primarily intended for children, adults also will be examined and given free advice.

It's springtime in St. Marys County, Md.

One of our friends reports that the pear, apple and cherry trees are blooming. Violets and spring flowers also are reported in bloom in a number of gardens, and residents observe that the sun is hot and the winds warm.

Tomorrow, it may be a different story.

While Dr. J. F. Knaub and Dr. D. M. Edwards, Chambersburg dentists, were at lunch one day this week, thieves entered their offices and stole dental gold valued at $159.

Down in Bristol, Va., there is a little baby boy just 4 days old who has not had a living parent since birth.

Several months ago the infant's father, Robert G. Nicholson, was drowned at Miami, Fla., and Wednesday his mother died just a few minutes before the child was born.

But the heart of humanity has poured out for the little one and numerous offers have been made, many by childless homes, to take the youngster and bring him up as their own.

The story of springtime in St. Marys County, Md., has nothing on a tale that comes from Somerset County, Md. Down there they are actually gathering tomatoes off peach trees.

It happened this way: Mrs. Samuel Ward planted tomatoes beneath a peach tree. The tomato vines fastened themselves around the tree and eventually grew to the top of the tree. Tomatoes ripened all along the vines.

Police Divulge Plot in Slaying Of Man on Road

Suspect Confesses, but Blames Another as the Instigator of Crime.

Leonardtown, Md., Oct. 26 (Spl.).—Charles Morgan, 24-year-old farm hand who has been held in the Leonardtown jail in connection with the murder of John Thomas, 56-year-old colored worker of the same farm, confessed after several hours of questioning last night, police said, that he killed Thomas and also accused another white man George E. Joy, as the instigator of the crime.

Thomas' body was found last Monday on Pincushion road near Loveville by his son who searched for him when the horse he had ridden to Loveville returned riderless.

A shotgun shell found near the body tallied with the firing chamber of a gun found in Morgan's home, State Officer Rogers stated.

Morgan declared, police said, that he had been forced to shoot Thomas by Joy, "boss farmer" where Morgan and Thomas were employed, who threatened him with death if he did not obey. Joy then took Morgan down the road where Thomas was to pass later in the night and gave him detailed instructions, Morgan charged, according to the authorities.

State's Attorney John T. Briscoe, handling the case, said that Joy was to have relinquished his place to Thomas, who had proved himself a superior farmer.

Green Hill Farm, located six miles north of here, where the three men were employed, is owned by P. H. Dorsey, jr., Leonardtown lawyer.

Crime Is Reenacted.

Morgan today visited the scene of the murder on Pincushion road and reenacted the crime before State's Attorney John T. Briscoe and State and county police.

Morgan, according to Briscoe, took the party of officers to the scene of the killing and demonstrated how he hid behind a tree until Thomas, who was on horseback, came within range and then shot him down.

Morgan was quoted by Briscoe as saying he and Joy cut down a tree and blocked the road so Thomas would have to stop when he came along on horseback. He is said to have confessed he shot Thomas in the back, and when the victim fell fired another charge into his neck at close range.

Bicentennial Parley Set in Hagerstown

Event to Be Greatest in Washington County History.

Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 26 (Spl.).—A meeting has been called for Monday night by the chamber of commerce as a preliminary step to arranging for the greatest celebration in the history of this section—Washington County's bicentennial, which will be observed in 1935.

In the spring of 1735 a group of pioneers, forging their way Westward, reached the top of South Mountain. History relates that they gazed upon one of the most unusual sights—a valley with grass 5 feet tall and great forests, with streams winding through it. Descending the western slope a few days later, they entered what was to be called the Cumberland Valley and into the county afterward to be named for the first President.

Based on County History.

The chamber plans to stage a celebration extending over a week, with pageants based on the early history of the county.

It also is proposed to have the schools take a prominent part, to the end that a comprehensive history of the county may be obtained which can be incorporated into the curriculum of the schools. All towns in the county will be asked to cooperate.

The chamber wants to have restored by that time the Jonathan Hager house near the city park. The founder of Hagerstown and his family lived in this residence for a number of years. The home also would be furnished in the period prior to the Revolutionary War, converting it into a historical shrine.

Two other historical spots also will have been restored by next summer—the Washington monument at Boonsboro, first monument ever erected to the first President, and old Fort Frederick, one of the few fortresses of pre-Revolutionary War days still in a good state of preservation. Work is now being done under Federal and State supervision. The Washington monument was built by the people of Boonsboro in 1826.

Mrs. Wilson Makes Study.

Mrs. Marshall Wilson, daughter of the late Gov. William T. Hamilton, of Maryland, has made an intensive study of the county's history and with her in arranging for the historical section of the celebration will be John S. Kausler, a descendant of one of the early settlers.

Other representatives will be: Education, Byron J. Grimes, superintendant of education; music, Peter Buy, leader of the municipal band; museum, Mrs. William T. Hamilton; library, William T. Hamilton; city administration, Mayor I. M. Wertz; theaters, Frank Boucher; retailers, Roy Leiter; industry, Park W. T. Loy; communications, Harry Boyle; transportation, W. D. Peddicord, superintendant of the Western Maryland Railroad; churches, the Rev. Dr. F. Berry Plummer; old timer, George Updegraff, sr.; chamber of commerce, John B. Ferguson, and newspapers, S. E. Phillips.

As Horse and Rider Vied for Honors at Montpelier

William du Pont, jr., forging to the front with his mount, Hut, to win the Bellevue Purse from a stablemate, Aladdin's Dream, and Mrs. Thomas W. Durant's Little Woman, which finished third, in the fourth event of the Montpelier races, held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Somerville, near Orange, Va., yesterday.

Montpelier Cup Won by Mrs. Somerville's Entry Before 5,000.

Orange, Va., Oct. 26 (AP).—The Montpelier Challenge Cup, prized event of the annual Montpelier races, held at the home of Mrs. Thomas H. Somerville, near here, was won by Mrs. Somerville's Oliver C., with Noel Laing up. A crowd of 5,000 people witnessed the event.

The event was hotly contested from the start, with Leguna and Secca, holding second place, making a futile battle to overtake the flying Oliver C.

The Orange Steeplechase, 2 miles over brush, had 4 starters from 16 entries. It developed into a battle between The Chiseler, with Jockey Bellhouse up; Mrs. T. W. Durant's Highland Dan and Mrs. W. P. Wear's Ghost Dancer. Ghost Danceh crossed the finish line two lengths ahead of The Chiseler, who was two lengths ahead of Highland Dan.

The Virginia, one mile on the flat, went easily to Mrs. Somerville's Sable Muff, Jockey Jennings riding. There were six starters in this and the winner outclassed her field, 12 lengths in front of Mrs. A. S. Bowman's Schley B, Mergler up, who was 6 lengths ahead of Sid Hirst on Larry Damm.

The Bellevue, another flat race of one and three-quarter miles, was won by William du Pont's Hut, with Bobby Young up. Mr. du Pont was second on his own Aladdin's Dream and Charlie White on Mrs. T. W. Durant's Little Woman was third.

The Albemarle, the big brush race of the day at a distance of three miles, was easily won by Mrs. Thomas Somerville's well-known Annapolis, Jockey Jennings riding. Bobby Young on Bill Street's Melita, was a distant second in this two-horse race. Annapolis started moving away from Melita as soon as the flag was dropped and continued to lengthen his lead throughout the journey.

Another brush race, Manton Manor, closed the card. This was at a distance of 2 miles, with eight horses competing. Mrs. Somerville's Brigade Rose, Jockey Jennings up, went to the front and Jockey Mergler, on J. P. Jones' Capstan, followed closely, along with Sid Hirst on Mrs. D. B. Wentz, jr.'s, Purple Dust.

Two jockeys who flew down to Montpelier to ride today, Burly Cocks and Louis Stoddard, obviously got lost, for their plane arrived just as the races were over. When they discovered they were too late, they circled the field and flew away.

Beer Revenues Top Estimates

License Receipts Bring in $67,360 Against an Anticipated $62,000.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 26 (AP).—State revenue from the Virginia beverage license tax from September 4, 1933, when beer became legal in the Commonwealth, until June 30, 1934, the end of the fiscal year, exceeded estimates by $5,360.03, C. L. Pettis, auditor for the State department of taxation, reported today.

The license receipts for that period totaled $67,360.03. The estimate was $62,000. The figures included the licenses paid by retailers, bottlers, wholesalers, chain store distributing places and manufacturers for the period from September 4 until December 31, 1933, and the amount paid in by these licensees from January 1, 1934, when new licenses were due, until June 30 this year.

More than half of the license receipts were paid by retailers. It cost licensees under this classification $48,798.20 to sell the alcoholic beverages.

Wholesalers paid $18,294.33. Chain store distributing places paid $192.50. Bottlers paid $75. No manufacturer was licensed.

Addresses were made by Emmipp Dorsey, grand architect, Baltimore; George Miller, grand secretary, Baltimore; William Wellinger, past supreme ruler, Baltimore; Orville Bohn, grand outer guard, Westminister; Clyde Taylor, vice grand architect, and the Rev. C. O. Sullivan, Westminster. Music for the occasion was furnished by the I. O. M. orchestra.

Return of Hart Called Certain

Marylander Faces Parole in Illinois to Complete Life Sentence.

Baltimore, Oct. 26 (AP).—State's Attorney Herbert R. O'Conor said today the early return to Baltimore of Jack Hart, Maryland's best known jail breaker, was "absolutely assured."

O'Conor based his statement on a dispatch from Chicago that State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney, of that city, had formally recommended to the Joliet Pardon Board that Hart be granted a parole and turned over to Maryland.

Hart, who under the alias of "Red" Kelly, is serving time at Joliet for a shooting at Cicero, Ill., a year ago, is wanted in this State to complete a life term, imposed in the murder of William B. Norris here in 1922.

He was arrested in Illinois after he had scaled the walls of the Maryland Penitentiary and escaped. He had escaped once before, and was recaptured. Two other attempted escapes were frustrated.

Byrd Assails Ban on Jews At Old Point

Indignant Over 'Insult' to Patriotic Citizens on Military Tract.

Senator Byrd (Democrat), Virginia, said yesterday he felt that "Virginia should be the last State in the Union to offer a gratuitious insult to worthy and patriotic citizens because of their religious faith," according to the Associated Press.

His remark was made in connection with his protest to President Roosevelt against signs advertising the exclusion of Jews from the Chamberlain-Vanderbilt Hotel at Old Point Comfort, Va. The hotel is located on the Fort Monroe Federal military reservation.

Virginia's background as a haven of religious and political freedom, Byrd said, "makes continuance of this offensive practice inconceivable."

Byrd was awaiting a reply from the White House.

"I called this matter to the attention of the President," he said, "because I knew such a procedure would be very distasteful to him and that he would act if it were within his power."

If such power is lacking, he said, he would propose at the next Congress a law prohibiting such discrimination on Government property.

Byrd pointed out that Virginia granted the Fort Monroe property to the United States for National defense purposes. "Now," he said, "it is being used in such a way as to bring discredit to the State."

Weyers Cave Wins Prize at Staunton

Takes Achievement Day Award in Augusta.

Staunton, Va., Oct. 26 (Spl.).—Weyers Cave took first honors in the achievement day rewards this week, when more than 300 members of home demonstration clubs in Augusta County met here to celebrate and report on the year's program. Middlebrook claimed second honors.

In the thrift campaign, Weyers Cave also was first, and Churchville second. In the poultry contest the winner was Mrs. Roy Earhart, of Spottswood, while in the formal table service contest, Waynesboro took first place, Fisherville second, and Weyers Cave third. In the informal table competition, Middlebrook placed first, New Hope scond, and Churchville third.

The annual report of Miss Ruth Jamison, Augusta's home demonstration agent, was a high light. One of the speakers was Charles K. Brown, Staunton's vice mayor, whose subject was "Life as Seen from the Sidelines." Mrs. F. F. Jones, president of the advisory council of the Augusta Club Federation, presided.

Josef von Sternberg Runs Riot in a Mass of Enormously Spectacular Effects

Dietrich Film Reveals Great Lust for Color

By Nelson B. Bell.

"THE SCARLET EMPRESS," Paramount picturization of an adaptation of "A Diary of Catherine the Great," by Manuel Komroff, starring Marlene Dietrich, with John Lodge, C. Aubrey Smith, Louise Dresser, Sam Jaffe, Ruthelma Stevens, Olive Tell, Gavin Gordon, Jameson Thomas and Davison Clark. Directed by Josef von Sternberg. Reviewed Friday afternoon.

Director Herr von Sternberg, by his prodigious addiction to an incessant and, at times, offensive symbolism, has made of his story of the court life of one of Russia's greatest empresses a mammoth of spectacle and a midget of drama.

So completely and grotesquely has Herr von Sternberg stylized his story of Spohia Frederica, to become known to fame and the history books as Catherine the Great of Russia, that his story of a famous mesalliance has been pitifully dwarfed by an insatiable urge to create a phantasmagoria of spectacular effects the like of which the screen never has seen before.

The marriage of Sophia and Grand Duke Peter, for example, resolves itself into a bewildering panorama of bearded Russian priests, ikons, candelabra, censers, effigies, crucifixes and massed humanity that is given a tremendous swell of sound and emotionalism by the utilization of voices, orchestra and organ in an overwhelming rendition of the "Kamennoi-Ostrow" and the coalition of all the elements of drama that may be made to impress themselves upon the subjective consciousness of the lay theaterman.

Superlatives Are Needed.

The profundity of this colossal effect—and these superlative adjectives are not out of keeping with the enormous climaxes of sentimental and spectacular fervor at which Von Sternberg has aimed—is even surpassed by the magnificent combination of visual grandeur, auricular appeal and the cacaphony of voice, instrument and carillon that characterizes the final scene of the play, when Catherine succeeds to the throne of all the Russias, after having led a cavalcade of revolutionary cavalry through the marble corridors of the imperial palace.

These are the high points of the picture. Their very height, as a matter of fact, makes inconsequential any individual effort of any member of the cast to assert a dramatic command of situations always dominated by von Sternberg's lust for pictorial splendor and an abstruse use of symbols to point his scenes.

There is nothing especially interesting, nor yet edifying, in the counterpointing of repulsive images against the reasonably clarified intentions of the principal figures in a story that already is known as a part of authentic history and to amusement seekers from the simpler excellences of "Catherine the Great," the British-made film dealing with the same characters and events.

Comparisons Are Inevitable.

Comparisons between "Catherine the Great," starring Elisabeth Bergner and featuring Douglas Fairbanks, jr., and "The Scarlet Empress" are inevitable. We have foretold them for many months in these columns. To sum it up, then, I should say that "The Scarlet Empress" is four times as big and one-fourth as good as its English predecessor.

It smothers itself with grandeur and vitiates its drama with fantastic embellishment. It will be horrendously above the comprehension of those who seek simple entertainment at the cinema. It confounds itself with a confusion of artistries that, whatever else may be said of them, reflect tremendous credit upon the creative genius of the man who conceived them.

Marlene Dietrich, of course, is alluring, exotic and expressive. Opportunity still is found to display her matchless legs, but that was not essential to the signal success of her performance as Catherine. In the opposite role, John Lodge, scion of an aristocratic New England family, acquits himself with fine credit in a role that did not exist in the English picture. Sam Jaffe, the Kringelein of the stage version of "Grand Hotel," offers an impersonation of Grand Duke Peter that in every way transcends the fastidious interpretation of an obnoxious role offered by the junior Fairbanks. Louise Dresser is a thoroughly American woman of the soil as the Empress Elizabeth and C. Aubrey Smith is a thoroughgoing Englishman in the role of Prince August.

The Stage Excels.

On the stage, first honors, of course, go to J. Harold Murray, musical comedy barytone, who still is singing the same songs that have made his earlier appearances here successful, and Gomez and Winona, two of the better of the ballroom and "Bolero" dancers.

The Sara Mildred Strauss dancers add much to the variety bill, as do, also, Carter and Holmes, two of the best of the acrobatic dancers and comedians.

Charlie Hill and Lora Hoffman, a standard act that can not be beaten in pianoing and songstressing, are up with the others for top honors.

Loew's Fox

"THE LAST GENTLEMAN," United Artists picturization of a play by Katherine Clugston, adapted to the screen by Leonard Praskins, starring George Arliss, with Edna May Oliver, Janet Beecher, Charlotte Henry, Frank Albertson, Ralph Morgan, Donald Meek, Joseph Cawthorn and Rafaelo Ottiano. Directed by Sidney Lanfield. Reviewed Friday afternoon.

Many years ago, Clyde Fitch, I think it was, had the temerity to begin a play with a scene at the funeral of theh usband of the leading faminine character of his charade. It was deemed an extraordinary bit of daring, mortuary activities being looked upon in that remote day as something slightly alien to the movements of sprightly comedy.

Precisely the same thing is being made the basis of an hilarious comic study at Loew's Fox this week, where George Arliss is occupying the screen in the stellar, title role of "The Last Gentleman," a closes crutiny of New England life and manners, in which a crabid old man works out the destinies of those who will succeed to his title and estates.

The preliminary situation in this amusing cinema is predicated upon the holding of a memorial service for a sister of the family who presumably has perished in a flood in China where she has been serving as a missionary. The real purpose of the family assemblage—and all are "on the outs" and about as amenable to a loving family spirit as a couple, or more, of strange bulldogs—is to enable Cabot Barr, eldest of the house, to work out some feasible plan for apportioning his wealth and deciding the variant desserts of his antagonistic and intensively beliggerent family.

Heirs Are a Surprise.

He does this after a fashion all his own, adopting his least liked grandchild as the major object of his bequests. The manner in which her romance is fostered is a deft touch of comedy that concerns the trees, the flowers, the bees, the birds and the other inarticulate exponents of one of Nature's primary laws.

A novel twist is lent the plot by virtue of a post-mortem activity of the gentlemanly patriarch which, enables him to parcel out his goods as he seets fit. He sees fit in a manner that meets with the audience's complete acquiescence. He was a pretty good scout, after all.

As a matter of plain fact, George Arliss in this subject merely is presenting a carbon copy of much that he has done in previous pictures. He is a crotchety old man, justas he was in "Old English," "Disraeli," "A Succesful Calamity" and "The Working Man." This is by no means his greatest picture, but I should hesitate to say that Arliss does not do some of his most effective and most skillful work in it.

There is the artist showing through every inch of film that is exposed with his image on it in "The Last Gentleman."

Charlotte Henry Makes Good.

In support, Charlotte Henry does the best work she has to so far brought to the screen, as the granddaughter who has the courage to defy an elder who craves defiance. Frank Albertson is sufficiently able as the juvenile opposite Miss Henry, and Donald Meek, Edna May Olver, Janet Beecher, Ralph Morgan and a long list of others, do their full share to make this picture well worth the time of anyone with a comedy bent.

Bob Murphy, more than a little bulwarked by the precociousness of his daughter and son, Dorothy and Dick, headlines the current stage show at the Fox and does it with his customary indifference to the delicacies of his profession. This, however, is an act that makes good whenever and wherever shown and who are we to quibble if the senior Mr. Murphy's antics do not wholly coincide with our idea of the proprieties? We are nobody, so it is a great act.

Joe Fejer Scores.

Sharing headline honors are Joe Fejer and his orchestra, assisted by Carolyn Rich and Janice Williams, two who know how to dance and sing—or maybe it is vice versa. Joe Fejer has always had a first-flight band and this one is perhaps the best he has ever brought to the Capital.

Shepherd, Carleton and Pritchard open the bill with a dance revue that is well above the ordinary, and Phil Lampkin adds to the merit of the entertainment with an overture number that takes on the candid colors of a "plug" for "The Merry Widow," at the Palace next week.

The Fox Movietone News completes a lively and likeable bill.

Columbia

"PURSUED," Fox picturization of the story, "The Painted Lady," by Larry Evans, adapted to the screen by Lester Cole and Stuart Anthony, starring Rosemary Ames and Victor Jory, with Pert Kelton, Russell Hardie, George Irving and Torben Meyer. Directed by Louis King. Reviewed Friday morning by Isabel Herraman Mangum.

Life is sordid and sinister on Tilo, a small island off the northeast coast of Borneo, and with such a background it can hardly be expected that the theme "Pursued" will be one of sweetness and light and unadulterated happiness.

In fact, the story begins with the tombstone of one Planter Landeen who has been disposed of by half-caste Planter Beauregard, an unpleasant individual of few morals, who coveted Planter Landeen's plantation and made it his own.

Unfortunately the deceased has a nephew in the States. When David Landeen, the nephew, lands at the island, he is met by Beauregard, who contrives to give him a nice welcome by hiring two natives to tap him on the head, stab him in the heart, steal his money and passport and leave him for dead under the window of Mona, a cafe entertainer and lady of the town. Mona nurses him back to health and they fall in love with each other.

Lacks Originality.

Without any degree of originality the story portrays Mona's reluctance to let David know of her past, her attempted flight to "some place where she can 'find herself'" and the complicating factor of Beauregard's pursuit of the blonde entertainer.

It is all rather melodramatic, dull and slow-moving and the participants seem to find not one spark of animation in the stilted dialogue. Rosemary Ames, as Mona, does the best she can with the role alloted her and pleasantly sings a monotonous little song entitled "Wanted." Victor Jory as Beauregard is convincingly villainish in the best 10-20-30 manner, and Russell Hardie is the ill-fated hero who finally comes into his own. Pert Kelton, who started out with such promise a year or so ago, has consistently slumped and is extremely amateurish as Mona's friend. And don't ask us why the title is "Pursued"—it's just one of those Hollywood ideas.

The supplementary bill includes an interesting newsreel interpreted by Edwin C. Hill, a not very funny comedy, in an elaborate setting, entitled "Club Continental," featuring George Givot and Leon Belasco's orchestra.

Metropolitan

"ONE NIGHT OF LOVE," Columbia picturization of a story by Dorothy Speare and Charles Beahan, starring Grace Moore, with Tullio Carminati, Lyle Talbot, Mona Barrie and Louis Alibrni. Directed by Victor Schertzinger. Reviewed (return engagement, second week) by W. A. Whitney.

Joshua caused the sun to stop in its course for a few hours, but Grace Moore is making "One Night of Love" last for at least three weeks!

Some 70,000 people have already seen this magnificent work.

In our enthusiasm for Miss Moore and the picture, we, like so many others, have somehow overlooked the extraordinarily fine performances turned in by other members of the cast, notably Tullio Carminati, as the Milanese voice teacher. Were it not for the towering genius of his "pupil," Signor Carminati would have been the star of the picture. His sincere, thoughtful and reserved interpretation, coupled with a soothing and earnestly appealing voice, makes his work here one of the finest delineations of the season.

Then there is Louis Alberni, cast as Monteverdi's pianist, whose explosive Latin temperament forms the basis of much of the delightful comedy by-play. Jessie Ralph is the maternal housekeeper for Monteverdi and watches over the songbird after she has left the maestro's wing. Mona Barrie, the menace, and Lyle Talbot, the transient love interest, contribute commendable performances.

An organ musicalette with Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Crawford, a cartoon and the combined Universal and Paramount newsreels round out a program of superior excellence.

RKO-Keith's

"THE GAY DIVORCEE," RKO-Radio picturisation of "The Gay Divorce," by Dwight Taylor, costarring Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, with Edward Everett Horton, Alice Brady, Erik Rhodes and Eric Blore. Directed by Mark Sandrich. Reviewed (second week) by W. A. Whitney.

After having made such an outstanding success with their memorable dance in "Flying Down to Rio," the reappearance of Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers as dancing leads has been anticipated with pleasure. It is accordingly gratifying to report, as the second week of that event opens, that "The Gay Divorcee" will not diminish one iota the public esteem in which these two stars are held. They come through again.

While the picture is to be enjoyed by almost every one, two principal parts are outstanding. Indeed, these two parts made the show. First and, quite naturally, foremost, are the dance numbers of Mr. Astaire alone and with Miss Rogers, not forgetting, of course, the ensemble magnitude of the "Continental" routine, a conception which, while lacking some of the passion of the carioca, is more highly technical, graceful and fluid.

In the second part is the frothy story, a yarn built to amuse and portrayed by actors of the first rank. It is a charmingly pictured story, but on paper it seems sort of ridiculous.

The music of the pieces, part of which was penned by Gordon and Ravel, is not particularly noteworthy, nor, as a matter of fact, are the dance numbers, routined by Dave Gould, but both are more than adequate for the occasion.

In the supporting program there is one of the series of "Dumb-Bell Letters" and a release of the Pathe News.

Palace

"JUDGE PRIEST," Fox picturisation of the stories by Irvin S. Cobb, starring Will Rogers, with Tom Brown, Anita Louise, Berton Churchill, Henry B. Walthall, David Landau, Stepin Fetchit, Rochelle Hudson, Frank Melton, Roger Imhoff, Charles Grapewin and Brenda Fowler. Directed by John Ford. Reviewed (second week) by W. A. Whitney.

One of the curious things about "Judge Priest," which yesterday opened its second week at Loew's Palace Theater, is that, although Will Rogers is billed as the star, this honor should go to whomsoever happens to be in the center of the picture at any given moment. It is probably this fact that lends so much charm to this picturized Irvin S. Cobb story of a small Kentucky community.

It may be, and probably is, presumptuous on our part to say so, but there is no other screen actor who has made such great strides forward as Will Rogers. At first he was a current events commentator, photographed as the center of a draggy, attenuated story. Now that is all changed and Mr. Rogers is an actor playing a part, submerging his personality beneath that of his character.

And out of the unusual star treatment here displayed Mr. Rogers emerges a far, far greater actor, setting a standard that will now be difficult to equal.

One need not further recount the story of young love, depicted by Tom Brown and Anita Louise; the thrilling tale of war-time heroism, related by Henry B. Walthall as it pertained to David Landau, or of the political intrigue headed by Berton Churchill. Nor need one tell of the brilliant touches of homely humor added by Charles Grapewin, Stepin Fetchit and "Juror No. 12."

A Mickey Mouse cartoon and an issue of the Metrotone News are among the subsidiaries.

A Blonde Actress Who Can Act

It was not so long ago that Verree Teasdale, the present Mrs. Adolphe Menjou, was looked upon more or less as a mere decoration of the celluloid drama of which nothing much was expected in the way of character delineation. All that now is changed. Miss Teasdale is an actress whose efforts before the cameras and microphones may not lightly be ignored. This was conclusively proved by the excellence of her performance in "Desirable," the recent picture that demonstrated for the first time that Jean Muir also can act.

Apple Thieves Create Racket

Officers in Shenandoah Valley Kept Busy Trying to Track Robbers Who Haul Fruit Away by Truckloads.

Harrisonburg, Va., Oct 26 (Spl.). Apple thieves—a new variety of racketeers—are hauling away apples by the truckload from Shenandoah Valley orchards.

Their activities are far more profitable than chicken stealing, and the chances of detection are much less.

Officers are kept on the run trying to run down clews leading to the identity of the thieves. The officers say the apples are no carried away in small quantities for home consumption, but are trucked away for sale.

A truck backed up to the Stanley Hoover orchard, near Timberville, last night and loaded with 75 bushels of apples which were picked too late for trucking to the packing shed before dark. Hoover told Sheriff Charles R. Fawley picked apples frequently were left on the crates overnight because of the rush at the packing plant. The loot was valued at between $50 and $75.

Forty bushels were stolen from the Bader orchard near McGaheysville. These apples also were ready to be trucked to the packing house.

At the Dingledine orchard east of Harrisonburg, it was discovered that thieves had gone to the trouble of picking a truck load of apples at the rear of the orchard and packed them for loading. The planned theft was discovered when pickers went to the area and found all the trees bare.

Mattress Factory To Open Next Week

West Virginia Aid Project to Employ 100 Women.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Oct. 26 (Spl.).—Operation of the first mattress factory in this section next week as a relief project with possibly as many as 100 women on Berkeley County relief rolls working, was announced today.

Special machinery required has arrived, including a cotton picking and blowing machine and special tables required for the cutting and sewing. Galvanized roofing is being used to partition off places necessary for employes' safety.

About 1,500 yards of mattress "ticking" has arrived and 6,500 pounds of the cotton for filling. The factory here is the only one in the eastern end of West Virginia. Mattresses made here will be "sold" to those on relief rolls in the Eastern district.

Officers to Watch Virginia Cars for Inspection Stickers

Richmond, Va., Oct. 26 (AP).—John Q. Rhodes, director of the division of motor vehicles, today said officers of the division have been instructed to see that all Virginia cars on the highways on and after next Thursday have received their semiannual inspection and bear State stickers in the proper windshield places certifying that the inspection has been passed.

"Attention is called to the fact that only four more days remain in which motor vehicles may receive their semiannual inspection," Director Rhodes said.

"The semiannual inspection regulation is one of the most sensible and reasonable safeguards ever set up by the State to eliminate some of the many dangers which surround the operators of automobiles of ever-increasing speed."

Sale Of Steel Plant In Merger Is Voted

Corrigan McKinney Board Authorized to Transfer Shares to Republic.

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—Stockholders of the McKinney Steel Holding Co., which holds approximately 55 per cent of the voting shares of Corrigan McKinney Steel Co., passed a resolution at a special meeting today, directing officers to vote in favor of the sale of the steel company's business to the Republic Steel Co.

Oscar L. Cox, president of the holding company, stated that of the 72,500 shares of preferred stock outstanding, about 57,600 shares were represented at the meeting, of which 57,166 shares voted in favor of the sale.

Earlier in the day T. M. Girdler, chairman of the Republic company, announced that the special stockholders' meeting called for October 30 to vote on the proposed merger with Corrigan McKinney had been postponed owing to inability of the management and auditors to finish the registration statement by that time. Another meeting has been called for December 17.

Point of Rocks Bridge Improvement Is Voted

Leesburg, Va., Oct. 26 (Spl.).—The State Highway Commission of Virginia and the State Roads Commission of Maryland have agreed to an expenditure of $35,000 on the Point of Rocks Bridge in the near future, according to word reaching here tonight. The expenditure will be used to increase the capacity of the bridge to 12 tons. They hope to make an improvement on the Brunswick Bridge in the near future.

The tolls were lifted on these bridges October 5. An increase in motor traffic through Leesburg has been observed since the lifting of the tolls, and with an increase in the ton capacity, the span will further facilitate business interests in Loudoun County and adjacent Maryland.

SERIOUS inroads on the ranks of the competitive service under the present Administration were denied last night by Civil Service Commisioner Lucille Foster McMillin in an address in St. Louis in connection with the Federal services series of the school and community program.

BAKER.

Confidence that the emergency agencies, filled by patronage, will be brought under the Civil Service as soon as those agencies become permanent was expressed by Mrs. McMillin.

"No President since 1883 has failed to indorse the merit system in Federal employment," Mrs. McMillin said, "and no President has failed to extend the scope of the competitive service."

Then the Civil Service executive denied charges of spoilsmanship.

"There has been a good deal of talk about serious inroads having been made on the ranks of the competitive service under the present Administration. That is not true. The figures do not bear out these assertions. The fact is that in the past year and a half the positions brought within the competitive classified service of Executive orders outnumber by more than 6,000 the comparatively few which have been taken out of the competitive class.

"It is true that most of the new emergency agencies, regarded in the beginning at least, as of a temporary nature, have been staffed without regard to the provisions of the civil service law, as provided in the acts of Congress which created these emergency bureaus.

"I have not the least doubt, however, that when we reach the point where it can be determined which of the new branches will become more or less permanent bureaus of our Government, steps will be taken to extend the competitive system to those branches."

The fundamental purpose of our public conservation policies is to make our forest lands contribute to the support of a fair share of the Nation's population, F. A. Silcox, chief of Forest Service, told the Conference on City, Regional, State and National Planning this week in St. Louis. The conference is being held jointly with the American Civic Association and the National Conference on Civic Planning.

Longs for the G. P. O.

I miss the G. P. O.,
And many there miss me
While I am sick, although,
I also feel quite free.

No worry on my mind
Of how the work is done;
I left machines behind
For other boys to run.

I know they carry on Work that I started;
Wishing it be not long
That we thus are parted.

I love the G. P. O.,
With all its busy noise.
I long—and how—to go
Back there among the boys.

Griffith Declares He Will Spend Bulk of His $200,000 for Talent

Colonials Stage 84-Yard March to Score, Beating Wake Forest, 6-2

Drive Ended By 9-Yard Heave

Tuffy Leemans Tosses to Benefield Over Goal Line.

WHILE Vanderbilt scouts crouched in the press box, George Washington came through with one decisive 84-yard march in the second period last night to squeeze out a 6-to-2 victory over Wake Forest at Griffith Stadium.

A crowd of 8,000 saw a surprisingly strong Wake Forest eleven threaten seriously to become the first team to cross the G. W. goal line this season. Though failing in that objective, the North Carolinians became the first G. W. opponent to score on the Colonials in their 1934 campaign.

Score Early in Game.

The Deacons, victors three weeks ago over Hunk Anderson's North Carolina State outfit, caught the Colonials more or less by surprise three minutes after the start of the game. A quick kick by Tuffy Leemans from his own 25-yard line set the visitors back on their own 22 directly after the opening kickoff, but in half a dozen plays, they had swept down the field to G. W.'s 24.

A 25-yard run by Vince Edens, Wake Forest half back, started it off and a long pass, which netted 35 yards shortly afterward from Walt Kitchin, quarter back, to Edens, ended up with the G. W. stands in consternation.

Fumble Recovered.

But the G. W. line held and Kitchin threw a pass intended for his right end, Swing, but the alert Leemans intercepted it on his 1-yard line. Leemans fumbled the ball on the play, and Ray Hanken, G. W. half back, recovered on the 1-foot line. Leemans punted out and Wake Forest's most serious touchdown threat had passed.

Kitchin fumbled Leemans' punt and Hanken recovered on his own 47. Leemans' pass to Bill Parrish was incomplete and Leemans punted, but G. W. was given the ball at midfield for Wake Forest's roughing the kicker. Frank Kavalier fumbled on the next play and Bullard, Wake Forest center, recovered on the 41.

Takes 2-to-0 Lead.

After little gain, Wake Forest kicked and Leemans ran it back to the 20. On the first play, Reds Rathgen, G. W. center, snapped the ball wide of Leemans who was back to kick and it sailed in the end zone where Leemans flopped on it, averting a Wake Forest touchdown as the big Deacon line swarmed on him. It was a safety and Wake Forest led, 2 to 0.

After an exchange of kicks in the second period, the Colonials began their scoring march. Taking the ball on his own 16-yard line, Leemans went off left tackle 32 yards to his own 48. Prather and Leemans made first down and then Leemans fell back and passed to Arnold Benefield, who was downed on the Wake Forest 28-yard line. Leemans ripped off another first down on the 12-yard line and Prather ripped through to the 9-yard line.

Pass Nets Score.

The G. W. strategy caught the Wake Forest secondary flat-footed with a fast pass over the goal line on second down, Leemans to Benefield, for the touchdown. Harry Deming, G. W.'s place-kicking tackle, missed the extra point.

A 28-yard pass, Kichin to T. Edens, took Wake Forest to G. W.'s 38-yard line before the half ended, but the G. W. secondary knocked down three passes in a row and Edens kicked over the goal line, ending the threat.

Mrs. Scott Wins Golf Club Title

Mrs. Dowdall Bows, 3-2, at Congressional.

Mrs. Jack Scott, former Colorado State champion, became the queen of the links at the Congressional Country Club yesterday by defeating Mrs. J. S. Dowdall, 3 and 2, in the finals of the club's annual women's tournament. Mrs. Scott, who came to Washington seven months ago, annexed her first local title in a hard-fought match. The rivals were all even at the end of 12 holes. Mrs. Scott won the thirteenth and held the lead from that point to the finish. She shot the last nine in 40 to record an 86 for the round.

Mrs. F. J. Awalt defeated Mrs. William Bush 1 up, on the thirtieth hole to win the second flight. Mrs. F. M. Yager won the third flight from Mrs. C. W. Penn, 4 and 2. The fourth flight went to Mrs. Burke, who defeated Mrs. Taylor, 4 and 3.

Upsets Lurk In Today's Grid Card

Yale Perils Army's Fine Record; Gophers, Navy in Stern Tests.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26 (AP).—One of the dizziest campaigns on record reaches the half-way mark tomorrow with an amazing number of football's blue bloods cooling their heels on the second row mourners' bench.

An epidemic of startling early season upsets finds such top flight elevens as Columbia, Pittsburgh, Southern California, Michigan and Notre Dame defeated and removed from National consideration so far. If the form reversals continue, they may have to move back tomorrow night to make room for company.

Anything can and may happen in a dozen headline attractions scheduled for stadia, ball parks and other arenas from one end of the country to the other.

Cadets in First Real Test.

In the East they are wondering if Army can maintain the class it showed in four starts against inferior opponents against a Yale team which is coming along with every game. The Cadets are favorites but may be lucky to win.

Holy Cross, conqueror of Harvard, fears it may be headed for one of those let-downs when it meets Colgate's Red Raiders, aroused by a defeat at the hands of Ohio State. This is another toss-up.

Navy, which rose magnificently to defeat Columbia's Rose Bowl victors, has been warned against overconfidence and told to keep both eye and mind on Pennsylvania's sophomore half backs.

Dartmouth Favored.

Dartmouth's Big Green machine is favored over Harvard. Pittsburgh, trimmed by Minnesota, will regain its breath against Westminster. Cornell hardly figures to give Princeton more than a test. Columbia has no set-up in Penn State.

Midwestern interest centers around the Minnesota-Iowa tussle. The Hawkeyes are geared up for the contest, but not even a group of select plays, contrived especially for Ozzie Simmons, Iowa's vanishing Negro back, is expected to offset the crushing offensive of the Gophers, now headed for National honors.

Illinois, with a chance at its first Big Ten title in years, goes against Michigan still in the doldrums, but threatening to get started any minute.

Notre Dame, back in stride once more, should beat Wisconsin. Ohio

Other Big-Money Deals in Baseball

New York, Oct. 26 (U.P.).—The deal which brought Joe Cronin to the Boston Red Sox was characterized as "the biggest money deal in baseball history." A popular guess was that $200,000 was involved. Other big deals:

The $125,000 project which sent Chuck Klein to the Chicago Cubs from the Phillies. Other players and cash were involved and the value was popularly placed as $125,000 on each side.

The $125,000 trade made last winter which transferred Lefty Grove from the Athletics to the Red Sox. In this deal, too, players as well as cash were involved.

The $100,500 paid by the Yankees to the Red Sox for Babe Ruth.

Terps, 'Gators To Rely on Passes

Maryland, Florida Both Boasts Dazzling Air Offensives.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 26 (Spl.).—Conscious of the power in their air attack, Maryland University and the University of Florida promise to present a sensational aerial battle tomorrow in their intersectional game at Municipal Stadium before an expected crowd of 30,000.

Maryland, whose own forward passes have featured the team's offensive this season, knows the sting in the 'Gators' aerial display. Two of the touchdowns by which Florida beat back Maryland last year, 19 to 0, were the direct result of a sensational passing game by the Floridians.

Drawing the full attention of the Terrapins will be Capt. "Chuck" Rogers, Florida end, who is adept at snaring the heaves of the 'Gator backs. Last year Rogers caught two passes that took the ball from Florida territory to within the Maryland 5-yard line and set the stage for touchdowns.

Caught Seven Passes.

Rogers caught seven of the nine passes the 'Gators attempted that day at Gainesville.

Engaging the attention of the Maryland defense also will be 165-pound Wally Brown, of the Florida back field, who has provided the spark in Florida's running attack. Brown is one of the South's high-point scorers, having scored six of the 'Gtaors' nine touchdowns this

Virginia Grid Fans Keyed Up For W. & L. Homecoming Day

LEXINGTON, Va., Oct. 26 (Spl.). All the color of great football rivalries will run riot here Saturday when the Generals of Washington and Lee University and the Gobblers of Virginia Polytechnic Institute meet on Wilson Field in a home-coming day game.

One of the most spectacular clashes in the history of W. & L.-V. P. I. football is in prospect, observers say, basing their predictions on reports of competent persons who declare the Gobblers have a strong team to pit against the powerful Generals.

But aside from the game, there will be other events to please the hearts of old grads and make the enthusiasm of undergraduates run high. Actually, the festivities started this afternoon when the Little Generals met the freshmen of William and Mary on Wilson Field. That is the first act in Lexington's three-ring football circus: The Generals and the Gobblers meet at 11 Saturday morning, and V. M. I. and Virginia will play in the afternoon in a home-coming day affair of their own to top the week-end card.

Rally Precedes Game.

Tonight Washington and Lee freshmen staged a torchlight parade through the streets of Lexington following the traditional homecoming day rally. The rally, always an outstanding event for freshmen and undergraduates generally, on the eve of a traditional clash, was held in front of Doremus Gymnasium, with the new Washington and Lee band making its appearance. The band this year is directed by Dr. Leon P. Smith, new member of the faculty and professor of romance languages.

Tonight also the first dance of the year was held in Doremus Gymnasium, beginning at 10 and lasting until 2 a. m. Another dance will be held Saturday night in the gymnasium. Jelly Leftwich and his band will play for both affairs.

Holiday Declared.

To make the day complete for all concerned, students will get a holiday from classes Saturday.

Indications are that one of the largest homecoming day crowds in many years will converge upon Washington and Lee's campus for the week-end. It isn't often that a chance to see all of Virginia's "Big Four" teams in action on one day is offered football-minded people of the Old Dominion, and both alumni headquarters and athletic officials report numerous requests for tickets for the game.

District Rider Wins K. C. Horse Show Prize

Kansas City, Oct. 26 (AP).—Kazan, a 7-year-old, won first in the three-gaited saddle horse, owner's class event, today at the American Royal Horse Show. The owner is Gayle Gray, Kansas City, Mo.

'Double' on $2.50 Wins $11,500 for British Turf Fan

Newbury, England, Oct. 26 (AP).—The largest daily "double" in the history of horse racing was paid today when one man won the entire pool of $11,500 with an original investment of $2.50. He refused to give his name.

The lucky man selected Mrs. N. B. Sneyd's Mr. Tickler to win the October Nursery Handicap of 7 furlongs and coupled with Maj. M. A. Calmont's colt, Boozer's Gloom, which took the 1 mile of the Beckhampton Handicap.

Mr. Tickler, a 67-to-1 choice in the totalisator, won by a head, but Boozer's Gloom, held at 12 to 1, came home with 2 lengths to spare.

Army, Middies Given Edge Over Foes

Cadets Not Too Certain, Critic Avers; U. S. C. May Surprise.

By Herbert W. Barker
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—The burned child may fear the fire, but football guessers are a hardier, or a less wise, breed.

Notwithstanding the scars already incurred in the line of duty this season, they were at it again today, hoping old man upset would keep his meddling fingers out of the pie for once. From this corner, week-end prospects seemed about as follows:

Yale-Army—Army, unbeaten, untied, unscored upon and untested. Yale, beaten once, but coming along fast as witness the 37-0 rout of Brown last week. The Cadets, led by Jack Buckler, seem to have far the better running attack but must beware of that demon passer, Jerry Roscoe. A not-too-certain ballot for Army.

Minnesota Favored.

Minnesota - Iowa — There's no choice but Minnesota, but the Gophers will have to keep Oze Simmons and Dick Crayne well covered and keep their own game at the same high level that overcame Pitt.

Stanford-Southern California — Here's the logical spot for one of the season's outstanding upsets, but it's a sheer impossibility to pick anyone but Stanford.

Penn-Navy—Penn has shown en-

Joe Pleased By Shift to Hubtown

Bewildered but Happy, Cronin Envisages Flag Winner.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 26 (AP). Still a bit bewildered by his sale by Washington to the Boston Red Sox as playing manager, smiling Joe Cronin expressed pleasure over the deal here tonight and said "the outlook is fine."

"Boston is one of the greatest sport towns in the world," he said. "A fellow with an Irish name like mine ought to get along there. Remember John L. Sullivan came from there.

"It all happened so quickly I'm still in a whirl," said the 28-year-old star. "There was some talk of a deal before I left the East but I was plenty surprised when Clark Griffith telephoned me last night to tell me it had been consummated.

"Delighted" With Contract.

He said he was "delighted" with the terms of his new five-year contract and that his salary was substantially increased over that received from Washington. It is understood he received around $20,000 a year from the Nationals.

Asked what his plans were for strengthening or revamping the Boston club, Cronin replied:

"It is too early for me to talk about that. I really don't know much about the set-up. You don't know much about your players until you have lived and played with them.

"But I am happy to get with the Red Sox. I consider the club the most progressive in baseball right now. From what I saw of the team last season I am satisfied it can be developed into a pennant contender with a minimum of delay. It may not come in one season, but the outlook is fine.

Praises Bill Werber.

"I know I will have the most improved third baseman in the American League in Bill Werber. There is one infield spot I consider weak, but I prefer not to talk of it now. Not until I get back to confer with Tom Yawkey and Eddie Collins.

"Mr. Yawkey is a young aggressive owner. It will be a pleasure to work for and with him. And Collins, the business manager, knows baseball from A to Z. With such a set-up, I don't see how we can miss out.

"Naturally I hate to leave Washington. Mr. Griffith was like a father to me. But as long as I am

Nats Seeking Infielder and Pitchers

Owner Says Club Now Is in Open Market for Added Talent.

HIS EXCHEQUER swelled by a sum of $200,000 by the sale of Joe Cronin to the Red Sox, Clark Griffith, owner of the Nats, immediately began to scan the baseball horizon for talent that would bolster his seventh-place team, now further weakened by the transfer of the league's outstanding shortstop.

Griffith declared almost heatedly yesterday that a generous share of the cash consideration paid for Cronin by the Red Sox would be dispensed in the search for at least two pitchers, an outfielder and a pair of infielders.

Lyn Lary, he declared, would fill the shortstop berth left vacant by Cronin acceptably if not in the same brilliant style to which Cronin accustomed Washington fans, but he readily admitted other problems.

To Buy Pitchers.

The Nats are solidly in the market for pitchers, Griffith said, adding that in view of the scarcity of trading material among the Nats he would be forced to buy for cash. He denied, as reported in New York, that Lary would be used in another deal for a pitcher, pointing out that his team was already short-handed in the infield as a result of Cronin's departure.

"It may sound absurd," said Griffith, "but I still think Washington had the best team in the league last season. No other club in baseball ever suffered the injuries in a single year that we suffered. Why, even my wife broke her leg and the concessionaire man was taken sick.

"If Joe Cronin had been able to put his full strength on the field in every game like the Tigers did, I believe Washington would have won the pennant."

Protected Behind Plate.

Griffith did not include catching among his rebuilding problems. With Luke Sewell fully recovered from his injuries of last season and Cliff Bolton vastly improved in defensive ability, he believes the club amply protected behind the bat.

But for the first time in four seasons, the Nats' owner is worried about his infield, particularly at first base. Joe Kuhel's broken ankle may impair his speed next season and the Nats' owner is eager to include a substitute first baseman among his purchases.

Neither is he content to gamble on his outfield. Jake Powell and Freddie Sington each will be given wide opportunity to oust Fred Schulte or Jack Stone from their regular outfield posts, but Griffith declares he is still in the market for outfield talent.

Harris Stunned By His Release; Eyes Nats' Helm

BUCKY HARRIS yesterday expressed himself as "dumbfounded" at the news of his release by the Boston Red Sox coincident with the deal for Joe Cronin, but declared that baseball had taught him to be philosophical about such matters.

"I had no inkling I was to be released," said Harris. "I knew I was working only on a one-year contract last season, but I thought I had done well at Boston under the circumstances. However that's baseball, and apparently I'm in the open market for a job."

Harris was on a short hunting trip in southern Maryland when he received news of his release and returned immediately to his home here to survey the future.

"There's no use denying it," he said. "I'd turn 18 handsprings if I was offered the job as Washington's manager again. Frankly, I'd like to have it. There isn't another spot I'd prefer. I'd like to start all over again with a clean slate here and stand or fall on what I might do. But no job has been offered me. That is a matter for Mr. Griffith to decide."

Fumble Costly to Eastern, Western Rallies for 6-6 Tie

By John R. Vosburgh.

AN alert Western High football team took advantage of the breaks yesterday afternoon to come from behind and tie Eastern's blue-jerseyed eleven, 6-to-6, at Central Stadium.

After Glenn (Hawk) Shaw, veteran Eastern back, had raced 54 yards early in the third period for the first score of the game, Western came back in the last quarter to capitalize on an Eastern fumble on the Lincoln Parkers' own 11-yard line and go over for the tying touchdown in three plays.

The game lost for Western its undisputed leadership in the series, pulling it down to a tie for first place with Tech, each having won one and tied one game. It was Eastern's second draw in two series starts. Coach Charlie Guyon's crew held Tech to a scoreless tie in its first game.

Play Conservative Game.

There was little or nothing to choose between the two teams yesterday. Both played conservative football, passing seldom and kicking on third down consistently. The running of Bob Hart, Eastern's unhelmeted half back, as well as that of Shaw, featured the ball-carrying display, though Bill Summerbell, and Jack Waddell, of Western, pressed them close for the honors.

Western missed a score by a narrow margin in the first period after driving from Eastern's 48-yard line to the 22. Here Eastern braced and on fourth down Waddell passed to Maloney, who barely missed catching the ball in the end zone. Shaw and Miller, of Eastern, batted the ball away from the Western quarter back to prevent what would have been the winning touchdown.

Stage Punting Duel.

The second period found Maloney and Hart engaged in a punting duel, and as the half ended Eastern was making its first sustained bid of the game, having the ball on Western's 40-yard line.

Shaw's brilliant run came like a shot shortly after the second half started. Western had received the kick-off, but had been unable to gain, and had kicked to Hart, who ran the punt back 17 yards to Western's 45. Huck Wynne threw Hart for a 9-yard loss, but on the next play Shaw knifed through right guard, side-stepped the entire Western secondary and was in the clear

Ruppert Is Willing for Ruth To Manage Athletics in 1935

By George Kenny.
(Copyright, 1934, by Chicago Tribune.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—Connie Mack, retiring manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, and Col. Jake Ruppert, owner of the New York Yankees, today tacitly confirmed the report that Babe Ruth would be next year's manager of the Athletics.

Ruth's appointment as successor to Connie Mack, as reported exclusively by the Chicago Tribune Press Service yesterday, was borne out in dispatches from Honolulu in which Mack was quoted as saying he would take Ruth on as club pilot if the "Athletics could pay the price Col. Ruppert would ask."

Wouldn't Stand in Way.

Col. Ruppert, informed of Mack's statement, generously announced he wouldn't ask a cent for Ruth's services if the Babe were offered a managerial post.

"Mind you," the colonel added, "this applies only if the Babe was to go to another club as manager. If another club wanted him as a player, not as a manager, they would have to buy him.

"But he can go as a manager, and I'd not stand in his way for a second."

Mack, in his interview with sports writers at Honolulu, where he, the Babe and their All-Star team made the first stop of an Oriental tour, had stated he would "like nothing better" than to have Ruth join the Athletics, but not as a player.

The cagey Silver Fox of the A's, who has managed their destinies for more years than most baseball players have lived, and who is not given to lengthy comment at any time or on any subject, clearly gave the impression that Babe would be taken on as manager "if he could be purchased."

Only Objection.

Ruppert's refusal to accept payment if the Babe were taken on by another club to serve as pilot today seemingly had swept away that—the only—objection.

Col. Ruppert was asked if—provided Ruth were to be transferred as a manager—he would be permitted to serve as a pinch-hitter.

"Certainly," the Colonel replied. "He can go in as a pinch-hitter at any time. The only thing is that he can't be a regular."

Bloodroot Winner of Laurel Feature Race as Jockey's Claim of Foul Is Disallowed

Bradley Filly Swerves in Stretch

Satrapal's Rider Makes Complaint; Day Hectic One at Race Track.

By Walter Haight.

WITH a rainbow curving over the shoulder of the track like a multi-colored ribbon ready for the salesgirl's scissors, E. R. Bradley's young filly, Bloodroot, collected the pot of gold at the end of "The Tomahawk," yesterday's feature race at nearby Laurel. As if she had not already been generous to the track with its long line of brown, yellow and red leaves bordering the backstretch and its deep green infield, Mother Nature, with a sweep of her paint brush, made the sky a prominent part in the beautiful scene.

But while Mother Nature worked, men played horse races, and the brilliant display was marred by boos and catcalls. Whether it was blown away by the force of the shrieks and bowls from the grandstand or just folded up in shame, I do not know, but the rainbow was fading from sight even before Jockey Wayne Wright was climbing the stairs to lodge a claim of foul with the stewards.

Swerves Toward Rail.

Wright had just ridden the Foxcatcher Farm's big gray Satrapal into second money in the six-furlong sprint. He had finished a length and a half in back of Donny Meade, on Bloodroot, and a length in front of Bobby Jones, on How's Chances. Bloodroot had passed Satrapal at the eigthth pole and, in doing so, swerved over toward the rail, impeding Wright's mount. It all happened in a brief second and opinion was divided as to whether it was intentional.

As momentary as it was, the "foul" did not escape the notice of those who backed the chances of Satrapal and the anvil chorus was pounding its merry tune before the horses crossed the line.

Bettors Keep Up Din.

While the stewards listened to Wright's complaint, Satrapal bettors kept up the din frequently referred to as the "Bronx Cheer." Bloodroot's backers, fearing the worst, applauded with unsteady hands.

But the officials took no action. The "official sign" was soon displayed. Now the Bloodroot backers cheered and the Satrapal backers booed. However, another 2 minutes found both clans busy scanning their programs and dope sheets and asking each other, "Who do you like in the next?"

Satrapal In Front.

The start of the race was as sour as the finish. The field was as ragged as a rip saw as it left the barrier with the grey of Satrapal showing in front. Wright rushed the colt along, with Boston Brook pressing him closely. Bloodroot was on the outside, forced to lose ground while keeping within striking distance of the leading pair. How's Chances, which had the worst of the break, was 10 lengths back as the field pounded up the back stretch.

Meade moved up with Bloodroot rounding the curve and cleverly ducked into the rail to catch up with Boston Brook and he went on flying after the streaking grey in front of the field. It was at the eighth pole that Bloodroot began to collar her rival. Satrapal obviously was tiring. For some reason, as she bounded by on the outside Bloodroot suddenly went sideways and Wright was forced to abandon the contest to concentrate on staying in Satrapal's saddle.

How's Chances, behind Satrapal, also was bothered.

Unlawful Disqualified.

Those who just had to witness a disqualification had their innings in the seventh race. Unlawful, a field horse, was shorn of third money under virtually the same circumstances that Bloodroot was cleared. Unlawful, a factor in as pretty a four-horse finish as has been seen at this track in years, bumped horses in the stretch run. The ruling allowed Kissin Bug, the odds-on favorite, to stick her pose into the money behind Countess Ann and Uncle Billy.

It was indeed a thrilling afternoon at the races, for earlier in the day the crowd had witnessed a steeplechase in which a jockey rode with one hand and whipped a riderless horse over the head with the other. Prince Apollo, which had thrown Jockey Haley early in the race, insisted on taking the jumps in company with No Frills, which Jockey McGinnis was trying to make catch the leading Spinach.

McGinnis finally swung away from Prince Apollo and went on to fight a neck-and-neck battle with Spinach, but his mount, No Frills, tired at the last two jumps.

The weather, like the racing, went up and down the scale. A warm sun, a dark sky, rain, and then rain with the sun shining, and, finally, a stinging autumn wind that sent the crowd away hoping for a warm supper.

Belmont and Saratoga Race Secretary Dies

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—Victor E. Schaumburg, for many years racing secretary at Belmont and Saratoga, died today at the Medical Center after a long illness of a complication of diseases. He was 67 years old.

Mr. Schaumburg never married and is survived only by a sister. He had been a patient in the hospital for several weeks.

Bush Hurt in Collision.

Chicago, Oct. 26 (AP).—Guy Bush, pitcher of the Chicago Cubs, broke his new automobile in so well last night he'll have to buy a new one.

It was badly damaged when it collided with another car. Bush was cut and bruised. The driver of the other machine, Edward W. Boss, escaped with bruises.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GALYARROW, $31.50, $10.70, $6.80; TRIOLET, $3.60, $3.20; PHARA (field), $19.70.

GALYARROW, rushed into contending position going to the first turn, wore TELL IT down gradually when settled on the back stretch, drew clear at the stretch turn, then was placed under stiff punishment in the closing furlong. TRIOLET, shuffled back going to the first turn, went to the outside for clear racing room in the last half-mile, then closed gamely. PHARA went prominently from the beginning, then held on gamely for the final drive. SUN VESTAL bettered her position stoutly to reach contention, but weakened after her early efforts. SUN WAY worked his way up on the inside after lacking early speed, but was not good enough. TELL IT and BAYDROP stopped badly. The others were never factors.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $600; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 2:11. Off at 2:13½. Winner, Mrs. M. N. Two-dollar mutuels paid—JACK LOW, $4.20, $2.90, $2.90; GRAND PRINCE, $7.40, $5.20; POSTPONEMENT (field), $6.50.

JACK LOW, away quickly and rushed into a clear lead during the opening furlong, was shaken up strongly when reaching the home stretch, and had enough in reserve to withstand GRAND PRINCE. Latter, close up from the beginning, continued willingly when the final drive came. POSTPONEMENT worked his way up on the outside until reaching the front stretch, then closed resolutely on the inside in the closing furlong. FRENCH KNIGHT went prominently and held on well nearing the finish. VACILLATE held a forward position in the early racing and had no excuses. HOUR ZEV broke well, but was unable to stay with the leaders after the opening furlong. PLAY EM went evenly. FIRST FLAG closed gamely after a slow beginning. The others could not threaten.

THIRD RACE—About 2 miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming; steeplechase. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:38. Off at 2:36½. Winner, Mrs. C. H. White's ch. g. (6), by Sir Martin—Sweet Thyme. Trained by A. White. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 4:01 (14 jumps).

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SPINACH, $4.90, $3.10, $3.00; NO FRILLS, $3.70, $2.80; GEORGE JESSEL, $4.00.

SPINACH went into an easy lead coming to the eighth fence, gamely withstood the bids in the last half-mile of NO FRILLS to win under strong pressure. NO FRILLS, bothered by the riderless PRINCE APOLLO after the eighth, secured racing room in the last five furlongs, but faltered after getting on even terms with the winner as the twelfth fence was cleared. GEORGE JESSEL closed a big sag and when WAR MIST lost his rider at the last jump. KANGEROO was not troublesome after the first mile. SIR CATALAN was far back throughout. WAR MIST and TOD SLOAN lost their riders at the last fence. CHAMPS ELYSEES lost rider at the ninth jump. SPRINGDALE ROSE ran out at the course at the fourth jump, and PRINCE APOLLO lost rider at the second obstacle.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward (foaled in Maryland). Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:06. Off at 3:08. Winner, N. B. Steward's ch. c. (3), by Fair Gain—Forefoin. Trained by H. G. Bedwell. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:49 2-5, 1:14 3-5, 1:41 2-5, 1:48 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MANAGER BILL, $3.20, $2.60, $2.20; TIGHT WAD, $7.90, $3.10; CAMPAGNA, $2.40.

MANAGER BILL, kept close to the leaders while on the outside, was placed to strong running when the last two sixteenths, and wore TIGHT WAD down to get up in the last sixteenth. He pulled up sore. TIGHT WAD raced up on the leaders' heels entering the back stretch and was eased back; slipped through on the inside at the final turn, then took command, but was unable to withstand the winner. CAMPAGNA opened a mild bid after losing command. BOKIE B, trailer far back for six furlongs, but she closed fast in the last five-sixteenths. BRIAR BLUE was used up racing with the leaders. SAND BELLE stopped.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; allowances. The Tomahawk. For 2-year-olds. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:36. Off at 3:36½. Winner, E. R. Bradley's b. f. (2), by Blue Larkspur—Knockaney Bridge. Trained by W. Hurley. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:47 2-5, 1:13 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLOODROOT, $4.10, $3.00, $2.60; SATRAPAL, $4.70, $3.50; HOW'S CHANCES, $3.10.

BLOODROOT, away in the first flight and going strongly, moved up on the inside of BOSTON BROOK midway of the turn to challenge the pacemaker, bore over slightly at the final furlong pole, was straightened out quickly after a left-handed command and drew out thereafter. SATRAPAL, showing improvement, raced BOSTON BROOK into submission, saved ground, and was slightly bothered when BLOODROOT swerved to the inside under punishment at the final furlong pole. Wright made a claim of foul that was not allowed. HOW'S CHANCES, away in a tangle, showed a good sag when clear. BLACK ROSE could not threaten the leaders. OFFICIAL was outrun. BOSTON BROOK began tiring after five furlongs. SUN FAIRPLAY had a rough trip.

SIXTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:07. Off at 4:07. Winner, Shandon Farm's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DUST GIRL, $11.60, $6.40, $3.10; HOPE TO DO, $5.60, $3.00; LATE DATE, $2.80.

DUST GIRL, racing reserved for the first six furlongs while in near pursuit of HOPE TO DO, came willingly to gain command when straightened into the home stretch, but had to be ridden out sharply until the end. HOPE TO DO set a fast early pace while racing nicely in hand, then held on when forced to a strong drive. LATE DATE, seated off the pace, came with a belated rush in the last half-mile. SUN ARCHER, outrun for most of the journey, failed to threaten when placed to punishment. FLAGSTONE was never a factor. JILTED went strongly for seven furlongs, then stopped.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:36. Off at 4:39. Winner, Mrs. C. D. Smith's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—COUNTESS ANN, $9.40, $5.90, $3.60; UNCLE BILLY, $19.40, $7.70; KISSINBUG, $3.20.

COUNTESS ANN, checked back going to the first turn and badly outrun for the first six furlongs, came through a wide opening on the inside at the stretch turn, secured racing room, and was up in the last strides. UNCLE BILLY avoided much interference going to the first turn to take command, was steadied in front, and then fought it out stubbornly when forced to a drive approaching the finish. UNLAWFUL, prominent from the beginning, challenged strongly midway of the home stretch and caused a bad jam inside the final furlong pole and was disqualified for a foul. KISSINBUG, forced wide at the stretch turn, was badly jammed by UNLAWFUL, gamely recovered and fought it out resolutely. She appeared best in the running. INSCRIPTION worked her way up gradually. She was favored by the crowding and was able to pass some of those that suffered when nearing the finish. WHITE GINGER finished willingly. MISS ALPHONSO was outrun. COLORIST stopped.

EIGHTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:07. Off at 5:08½. Winner, M. Two-dollar mutuels paid—†MY COUNSELLOR, $3.60, $3.00, $2.50; †BAND WAGON, $3.00, $2.50; CHATTERDOO, $3.20.

MY COUNSELLOR, favored by the fast early pace, moved up strongly in the last five furlongs, came through on the inside at the stretch turn when the leaders bore out, then came out under urging after gaining command. BAND WAGON set a fast early pace and held on willingly to outstay CHATTERDOO. Latter made a bold bid in the last five-sixteenths and then fought it out courageously. PRINCE ABBOT closed with a belated rush in the last half-mile and appeared to be racing strongest of all but the winner. GALLIC was rated close up and had no mishaps. WISE ADVOCATE stumbled at the start and dropped far back.

Old Rivalries Add Zest to Twin Bill

Lexington Grid Mecca; Roanoke to Test William and Mary.

RICHMOND, VA., Oct. 26 (AP).—Virginia's football faithful were moving over the mountains tonight for Lexington, gridiron's mecca where Washington and Lee's Generals battle the Gobblers of Virginia Tech in a morning engagement tomorrow and V. M. I. and Virginia come back to fight it out in the afternoon.

There'll be other important games, including the meeting of William and Mary's Indians and Roanoke at Williamsburg, but the twin bill at Lexington promises to steal the show.

Season's records and all predictions were tossed to the winds as the football hungry, most of them rabid backers of their favorite contenders, moved on Lexington for a pair of duels to which age-long rivalry will add zest.

Injuries Hamper All Teams.

All of the four teams will feel the hurt of injuries suffered in last week's battling. Virginia's Cavaliers, deprived possibility of the best services of Capt. Tommy Johnson and other capable performers probably suffered the worst. Johnson may play but the injury suffered in the Dartmouth engagement may slow him down.

V. M. I. Frosh Beat Young Cavaliers

The first touchdown, made by Roberson, followed a 20-yard end run by Beard early in the second quarter.

Play throughout the second half was almost entirely in Virginia territory, but three times in the final period the Cadets were forced to surrender the ball within the 5-yard line. Midway this quarter Cottrell shot a pass to Roberson, who raced 20 yards to score.

Cronin Pleased By Boston Deal

To Count on Grove.

Cronin expressed the opinion that much of the club's chances would hinge on the condition of Lefty Grove. "While I did not see Boston play the last month of the season, I heard Grove's arm was coming around. If he gets back to anything like his old form, he will be the mainstay of our pitching staff.

The new Red Sox leader inquired as to the ability of Ellsworth Dahlgren, first baseman drafted from the San Francisco Missions of the Pacific Coast League. Told Dahlgren was considered a good prospect, Cronin said he would be given every chance to make the grade. Cronin said his arm, which he broke last season, was fully mended and that he would be ready to take over the shortstop position next year.

Doesn't Know Price.

While he does not know the exact amount of his purchase price, he said he understood from Owner Griffith "it was a sizable figure."

His recent bride, the former June Robertson, adopted daughter of Griffith, smiled assent when asked if she liked the thought of transferring baseball affiliations. "I'd be happy to go with Joe to Oshkosh," she said.

Cronin said he would leave for the East early in December, in time to confer with his new bosses before the annual National baseball meeting. In the meantime, he is going to "forget baseball for a while." The deal caught the Cronins in the midst of a search for an apartment.

Long Dashes Feature As Virginia Teams Tie

Fredericksburg, Va., Oct. 26 (Spl.).—The Fredericksburg High School Yellow Jackets and the Clifton Forge pigskinners played a 12-to-12 tie today in the season's most spectacular game here. With the score even, at 6 to 6, in the fourth quarter, Bud Fenlon, Fredericksburg half back, returned a kick-off 80 yards for a touchdown. Clifton Forge had scored its first touchdown on the preceding play.

Late in the quarter Marshall, Clifton Forge center, took a blocked punt the length of the field to tie the score.

by the time he sprinted over the Eastern 35-yard line.

Capt. Dick Absher, the big Eastern tackle, whose play in the line, together with that of Bill Krause and Wynne, of Western, tried a place-kick for the extra point, but it went wide.

The Georgetowners' chance to score came soon after the start of the final period, when Owens lifted a tremendous boot from his own 15-yard line, which sailed 55 yards in the air for a net of 74 yards and rolled to Eastern's 11-yard line, where Hart tried to pick the ball up but fumbled. Greenwood, Western guard, fell on the pigskin. Clarence Allen made 6 yards on the first play; Summerbell picked up 3 more and then plunged over for the touchdown with plenty to spare. Waddell's place-kick was barely wide of the posts.

The alert Westerners stifled another Eastern scoring drive shortly afterward, when Alvin Kidwell, sub Eastern back, fumbled on the Western 17-yard line after the Lincoln Parkers had marched 38 yards in about eight plays. Waddell recovered and Western kicked to safety.

Middies Ready For Penn Invasion

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 26 (Spl.). Navy football players today put the finishing touches to a week of preparation for the Pennsylvania game and tonight their togs were packed, ready for the move on Philadelphia for the battle that will be waged on Franklin Field. The gridders, coaches and attendants, making up a party of nearly 60, will leave here on a special train at 9:45. They will be followed by the regiment of 1,700 midshipmen on special trains to depart half an hour later.

That the Middies expect to rely to a large extent on a wide-open game, such as was exploited to the bewilderment and annihilation of Columbia last Saturday, was indicated in the final round-up for the Red and Blue. The same combination of players that faced the Lions will be thrown into the breach. Coach Tom Hamilton, however, has given a great deal of attention to his back field reserves, and it is not unlikely that several of these will see considerable action.

Navy's greatest hope of victory, however, will rest largely with Fred (Buzz) Borries, whose scintillating performances in the back field have proved the undoing of all opposition thus far, coupled with the punting and line plunging of Bill Clarke.

Little Hoyas Upset Foes By Passes

GEORGETOWN PREP scored one of the big upsets of the scholastic football season yesterday by defeating the favored Gonzaga eleven, 13 to 6, in their annual fracas at Garrett Park.

Two well-timed flat passes accounted for the winning touchdowns, one coming in the second quarter and the other in the last. The same combination executed each of the scoring plays, Ed Flanagan, quarter back, doing the passing and Full Back Lloyd Rice the nabbing.

Gonzaga tallied after the second Georgetown touchdown, when the Little Hoyas fumbled on their own 10-yard line, and Pete Brew, Purple left end, recovered, paving the way for the Purple's score. Malcolm Leubkert, big Gonzaga quarter back, plunged for 5 yards and then passed to Curran for the touchdown. Leubkert's pass for the extra point was incomplete.

Both Teams Open Up.

The teams were even in the number of first downs, each knocking off six. Both played wide-open football, Gonzaga attempting 14 passes and completing 4, while Georgetown Prep tried 17 and completed 8. It was the aerial attack which spelled defeat for the Purple.

Lloyd took the first pass on the Gonzaga 30-yard line and raced over the goal line. The second one he took on the 5-yard line and stepped over the line. Cletis Keating took a pass from Flanagan for the thirteenth point. Both of the touchdown passes were out wide for little net gain exclusive of Lloyd's runs.

Passes Bring W. & L. High Victory

Little Generals Defeat St. John's Eleven by 21-0 Score.

THE Washington and Lee High Generals added another victory to their list yesterday afternoon, defeating St. John's eleven, 21 to 0.

The Little Generals combined running ends with passes to score their victory.

A pass, Birch to Bittoner, marked up a first score for the Generals in the second period. Bittoner kicked for the extra point. In the last quarter, a pass from Brich to Fixx from St. John's 20-yard line ended in a second touchdown for the Little Generals. Boswell kicked the extra point. Another pass, Fixx to Brich, on St. John's 15-yard line, brought the third score. Boswell again kicked for the extra point.

Griffith's Statement

The deal that sends Cronin to Boston as manager of the Red Sox was practically of his own choice. All negotiations pending the deal were conducted with his full knowledge and cooperation. When Mr. Yawkey made me the tremendous cash offer for Cronin at the recent world series, the offer being, by the way, the largest in the history of baseball, I flatly refused to consider selling him at all, and only reconsidered for the reason that Mr. Yawkey came up with an astounding offer of a five-year contract for Cronin, as well as throwing in a capable shortstop for us in Lyn Lary. This offer was so much in excess of what I ever could hope to pay him that I considered it my duty to give him the opportunity to accept.

Cronin had put in seven years of valiant, conscientious service to the Washington Baseball Club, and I am happy to give him the chance that all ball players dream of. Cronin has been a great ball player for us and a great manager. He is one of the finest boys I ever knew, and I am wishing him all the success in the world.

CLARK C. GRIFFITH,
President, Washington Baseball Club.

Joe Cronin Is Sold to Red Sox In Game's Biggest Cash Deal

$30,000 Yearly Salary.

Thus the deal that Griffith laughed off in midsummer and again during the World Series suddenly became a reality yesterday. The Nats' owner was further awayed in the release of the man, who three weeks ago married his adopted daughter, by Yawkey's offer to sign Cronin to a five-year contract as playing manager at a yearly salary reputed to be $30,000.

Declaring his decision to trade Cronin was so swift he has yet had no time to consider his managerial successor here, Griffith would give no inkling as to who his choice might be. Speculation yesterday mentioned the names of many famous baseball personages—Bucky Harris, Babe Ruth, Rogers Hornsby, Joe Judge and Sam Rice—but Griffith parried all queries. The name of Bucky Harris, deposed as manager in Boston coincident to the Cronin deal, was greeted with the most widespread approval.

The possibility that Ruth would be transferred to Washington as the Nats' manager was minimized in baseball circles where the belief is held that Washington is too small a city to support Ruth as manager.

"For Cronin's Sake."

Griffith announced the deal yesterday morning with a noticeable break in his voice. "Nothing on earth except Cronin's welfare would have caused me to part with Joe," he said. "Yawkey made me an offer that I could not afford to turn down for Cronin's sake and Joe was consulted on every phase of the negotiations."

The deal had been on the fire since the World Series, Griffith said. At that time, in Detroit, Yawkey discussed the trade with him and won the interest of the Nats' owner with his offer. Griffith said that he first must take the matter up with Cronin.

Impatient at the delay in the negotiations, Yawkey, according to Griffith, made him a later offer that the Red Sox owner boasted "would jar him for the rest of his life." Griffith consummated the deal Thursday night in New York, where he met both Yawkey and Business Manager Eddie Collins, of the Red Sox.

Griffith frequently communicated with Cronin during the negotiations by long-distance telephone to San Francisco, where the player is honeymooning with the former Mildred Robertson.

A "Fabulous" Price.

This last offer of Yawkey's was "fabulous," Griffith said, but beyond that he would declare only that the purchase price was the largest in the history of baseball, far more than the $125,000 the Yankees paid the Red Sox for Babe Ruth in 1919.

Cronin will meet his new employers in December, when he will come East for the annual major league meeting. According to reports from Boston, Yawkey and Collins have promised him unlimited financial support in their campaign to win the American League pennant. Cronin's task will be to bolster the left side of the Boston infield and add hitting power to the outfield. His pitching hopes depend in a great measure on the degree of improvement in the ailing arm of Lefty Grove.

His new manager, Griffith said, would be given a generous share of the cash received from Boston to reconstruct the Washington Club, which now is in need of pitching talent, a third regular outfielder and infield reserves.

The sale of Cronin marked the first time in Griffith's 22-year career as an official of the Washington Club that he has sold a player outright for cash. Long known as a prolific trader, Griffith nevertheless refused, until yesterday, to part with one of his stars on a cash basis.

Spectacular Rise.

None in baseball holds Cronin accountable for the sad decline of the Nats last season after their pennant-winning campaign of 1933. Harassed by more injuries than ever beset any club in a single season, the Nats could finish only seventh this year.

Cronin's rise with the Washington club was spectacular. Arriving here from Kansas City in 1928 as a raw rookie who had failed in a previous big league trial with the Pirates, Cronin immediately won himself the regular shortstop berth at the tag end of the season under the direction of Manager Bucky Harris, and two years later he was voted the most valuable player in the league.

Thus Cronin startled his critics, for he had come to the Nats with the reputation of being a clever fielder but a poor hitter. That season he hit .346 to land among the five batting leaders.

Impressed with the verve and dash of Cronin's play, Griffith marked the Californian as managerial timber and surprised the baseball world at the end of the 1932 season by appointing him manager of the Nats. As the youngest pilot in the big leagues, Cronin led the Nats to the pennant in his first year at the helm.

Cruickshank Wins State Open Again

Bobby Turns in Sub-Par 290 Despite Gale; Two Tie for Second.

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 26 (AP).—Bobby Cruickshank, master of the fairways and greens in fair weather and in foul, came home in the teeth of the wind today with a par-cracking 290 for 72 holes of medal play to win the State Open Golf Championship for the second consecutive year.

Ten strokes ahead of his closest pursuers and two strokes better than perfect figures despite a wind that lashed the course with almost gale fury, the Country Club of Virginia professional proved himself again the king of the Old Dominion golfdom.

Riegel Tied for Second.

Second honors were shared by Bobby Riegel, of Richmond, Middle Atlantic amateur champion, and Benny Loving, Petersburg pro, who slumped badly in the afternoon while the sensational Riegel was finishing two days' work with a brilliant 75, even par.

Their medal score of 300 was three strokes better than the 303 posted by Charlie Isaacs, of Richmond, who took fourth money and five strokes better than the 305 scored by Sam Snead, the Hot Springs professional who totaled 305 for the 72 holes.

Billy Howell, former Virginia amateur champion and Walker Cup player whose star rose to its ascendancy in a brilliant morning round, only to sink behind the bunkers of the first hole in the afternoon where he carded a nine, finished with 308 and a sixth place tie with Earl Howell, of Richmond.

Jack Isaacs, Newport News professional who was runner-up to Cruickshank last year, finished just outside the money with 309. It was the first time in four years that he had failed to carry home a check.

Actin's Easier'n Fannin' Greenberg, Diz Says

By Henry McLemore.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26 (U.P.).—All barbered up, and smeared with enough grease, paint and mascara to decorate a ballroom, Dizzy and Daffy Dean made their stage debut at the Roxy Theater today, and found it "easier'n striking out Hank Greenberg."

"Yessir," said Dizzy as he slumped in his dressing-room chair at the end of the six-minute turn, "it's a plum cinch. You just stand out there for 'bout an inning and jabber away. Hell, its easier'n striking out Hank Greenberg. I guess it's mighty near soft as umpirin'. I just hope I didn't look like no sissy with all this girl junk on my face. How'd you like the act?"

Before we could answer, the Deans' booking agent broke in.

"It was terrific, colossal. You were a wow. You panicked 'em. You had 'em rolling in the aisles."

"Didn't See 'Em Roll."

"You telling the truth?" asked Paul. "I mean do you mean some of the folks were right down on the floor rolling 'round?"

"That's right," said the agent.

"Funny I didn't see 'em," said Paul. "That musta been way back in the back. We sho did get plenty of applause, though. I sorta hated to go. I was just warming up."

Were they nervous?

"I wasn't," answered Dizzy. "The place was jammed with people, but even so there wasn't no more there than you get in Cincinnati for a double-header and I ain't nervous in Cincy."

Daffy Felt Relaxed.

"I wasn't neither," said Paul. "I felt as relaxed like as I did when I was pitching to that Greenberg. Say, you know that guy couldn't hit one my fog balls with a hatrack."

The Dean boys' act was a simple one. After a flare of trumpets, the curtain rose to reveal a green papier-mache dugout. In front, dressed in St. Louis uniforms much too clean to look natural, stood Dizzy and Daffy, playing catch. A moment of this, and the master of ceremonies, a gentleman with a mustache, called them downstage to the microphone and plied them with questions.

He asked Dizzy who did most in winning the National League pennant for the Cards, and Dizzy's reply, "The Giants," brought laughs.

Daffy's comment—"The Brooklyns helped, too"—brought cheers.

Admits He's Best.

Prodded by the M. C., Dizzy modestly admitted that he was the best pitcher in baseball, Paul was next, and that in his day Mathewson must have been a pretty fair slinger himself.

Dizzy's explanation of how he managed to get hit on the head in the fourth game of the World Series brought down the house.

"Wasn't nothing complicated about it," the Dizzy one said. "Frisch sent me in to run for Spud and told me to 'use my head.' I did."

"Did it hurt?" prodded the M. C.

"Didn't hurt much, but I couldn't see nothing but black cats and stars for the next four hours."

The act was scheduled to end with Daffy, just before he exited, turning and making Schoolboy Rowe's famed query—"How'm I doing, Edna?"

But Daffy forgot. So the boys turned their backs and strolled off.

Deans Go Hitless, Boot One

The result—No runs, no hits, one error, several left, but not until the skit was over.

They were as calm and casual, as easy as if they were still pitching against the Detroit Tigers, but as vaudeville stars they are still two great pitchers.

They are on the stage six minutes. Dizzy, as usual, does most of the talking. Daffy stands around, looking as if he'd like to climb down into the orchestra pit and hide. They get $3,500 for a week of this.

The error—Daffy forgot one of his two lines.

Stocks Yield One Point as Sales Slow Up

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—Stocks yielded with other markets to a mood of depression today and prices were again revised downward all around.

The dollar gave a lone show of strength in foreign exchange dealings. Wheat rallied briskly to recoup losses of about 2 cents a bushel, but the main drift in commodities, as well as securities, was toward lower levels.

Renewed selling in stocks, concentrated on steel shares and a few weak issues, shook the market out of the narrow groove it had occupied for two weeks. It steadied after a foreign decline and trading lapsed into the dull routine so familiar of late.

The reversal of recent trends embraced the bond market, too, although highest grade issues resisted pressure.

Brokers ascribed the heaviness of stocks in part to liquidation by holders who had been disappointed at the failure of the market to advance after President Roosevelt's address to bankers Wednesday night.

Bethlehem Steel preferred broke 6½ points to 56½ on the omission of the $1.75 dividend paid on the stock in the previous quarter and the poor profit showing made for the third quarter. U. S. Steel common and preferred, Republic Steel and other shares representative of the industry lost fractions to more than a point.

A further sharp decline in Baldwin Locomotive issues in consequence of the company's move to suspend interest payments on bonds in the sinking fund also was disturbing.

The preferred dropped to a new low at 20, where it was off more than 4 points, but rallied a little before the close. American Locomotive preferred dipped 4½ points and the common more than a point.

Rails slipped with the market, despite a seasonal gain in car-loadings last week. Santa Fe, New York Central, Union Pacific, J. I. Case, General Motors, Air Reduction, Du Pont, International Nickel and International Cement were among issues showing losses of fractions to about 3 points.

The Standard Statistics Co. average for 90 stocks dropped 1 point to 69.9, the lowest since September 20. Turnover declined to 869,850 shares compared with a little more than a million in the preceding session.

Wall Street Briefs

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—The price of high carbon spring wire has been reduced $6 a ton, effective November 4, according to schedules filed with the American Iron & Steel Institute. The new prices, ranging between $58 and $67 a ton, are effective at Pittsburgh, Chicago, Cleveland, Worcester, Mass., and Pacific Coast ports.

The New York curb exchange has admitted to listing Fanny Farmer Candy Shops, Inc., 400,000 shares of new $1-par common stock. Trading in old common will expire Saturday.

United States exports of refined sugar in September totaled 13,369 long tons, according to B. W. Dyer & Co. This compares with 4,020 tons in September, 1933.

By Special Writer of The Post.

Government officials frequently cite the rapid expansion of deposits as proof of a growing confidence in the country's banks and an evidence of business improvement. If the volume of bank deposits were an index to the state of business there would be good reason to feel optimistic, since recent increases have brought the figures for demand deposits of reporting member banks close to the level of 1929. During the past year, time and demand deposits in all member banks increased over $4,000,000,000, while the last statement for reporting member banks (October 17) shows an increase of $2,665,000,000 in demand deposits, as compared with a year ago, and only a negligible drop in time deposits.

During this same period, on the other hand, business activity instead of increasing actually declined. The Federal Reserve index of industrial production which stood at 83 per cent of 1923-1925 level a year ago dropped to 71 per cent by September, 1934. Although the textile strike had a temporarily depressing effect, the index had already fallen to 73 per cent of the base period in August. With the exception of retail trade, which shows a slightly larger volume of dollar sales as compared with a year ago, due largely to Federal relief and AAA outlays, business indices are generally unfavorable. They failed to show the usual seasonal expansion in many instances after a series of declines that have brought general production indices down to the low levels of the spring of 1933. Meantime wholesale prices have risen about 7½ per cent during the year—an advance that tends to exaggerate the extent of the improvement in retail trade. Thus it will be seen that business data directly refute the contention that the recent increases in bank deposits are a reflection of better business.

Growth of Member Bank Deposits and U. S. Expenditures.

The growth of member bank deposits can only be explained by examining the figures for Federal expenditures and debt. During the fiscal year 1933-34, the Government spent about $7,000,000,000 and ended with a deficit of nearly $4,000,000,000 which had to be covered by borrowing. During the current fiscal year a deficit in excess of $900,000,000 has already been incurred, making a total deficit of nearly $5,000,000,000 since July 1, 1933. These heavy uncovered outlays, financed by Treasury borrowing from the banks, account for the rapid growth of deposits. The banks buy Government issues, and credit the amount of their purchases to the Government. As these funds are disbursed, they return to the banks in the form of deposits (demand or time). Consequently, deficit financing, not business improvement, is responsible for the rapid expansion of the deposits of member banks. Confirmation of that fact is found in the heavy increases in bank holdings of Government securities. On October 17 reporting member banks held $1,663,000,000 more of United States obligations than they did a year ago and they had in addition $446,000,000 of obligations fully guaranteed by the Government. On the other hand, all other (commercial loans) were actually below the totals reported for the same date in 1933, although in recent months there has been some increase in the volume of commercial loans, due in part to higher prices and increased production costs.

Explanation of Methods Used to Produce Cash Reserves.

The cash resources of the member banks—that is, their reserve balances with the Federal Reserve Banks—are also often referred to as evidence of the inherently strong position of the banking system. But again, the methods employed to produce this large volume of cash reserves call for examination. These member bank balances have been built up by the credit policies and monetary and fiscal maneuvering of the Government. They do not represent resources or savings withdrawn from public use or hoarded by the banks. At the present time the excess reserves of member banks amount to approximately $1,750,000,000. These excess reserves have been produced first by Federal Reserve open market buying of Government securities and in more recent months by Treasury deposits of "gold certificates" issued after devaluation of the dollar.

Evidently, the basis for a formidable credit expansion has been laid, but so far little use has been made of it. It is not surprising that this should be the case, since the resources at the disposal of the banks have been provided by resort to devices that have impaired business confidence and weakened the incentive to borrow. An appearance of banking strength due to mounting Treasury deficits is quite consistent with declining business and limited demand for commercial loans.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—With mostly investment transactions taking place, trading on the stock exchange was fairly active yesterday. Industrials and gilt-edged securities improved, several of the latter issues reaching new high records. German bonds were cheerful, but gold mining, rubber, oil and transatlantic shares eased. The market closed dull.

Paris—Prices on the bourse, after a heavy opening yesterday because of the political uncertainty, resigned steadiness while awaiting the outcome of the radical Socialist convention at Nantes. The closing was firm.

Bonds Decline Four-Tenths as Volume Lags

Secondary Loans, Heavy; Trading Dwindles to $10,233,000.

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—Secondary loans were noticeably heavy in today's bond market, but prime investment issues, as a whole, were fairly steady.

The trading volume dwindled on the decline. Transfers totaled $10,233,000, par value, against $12,906,000 yesterday. The Standard Statistics Co. average for 60 domestic corporate bonds showed a loss of four-tenths of a point.

A substantial drop in the third quarter earnings of various important corporations was said by dealers to have contributed to some of the gloom in the day's proceedings. There was little change in the general news picture.

U. S. Federals Reactionary.

United States Goverment securities were somewhat reactionary, but there was no excessive selling pressure on this department. The turnover here amounted to about $2,550,000, compared with $3,320,000 in the previous session. Declines ranged from one thirty-second to ten thirty-seconds of a point.

Among the better acting corporate loans were some of American Telephone, Alleghany & Western, American Sugar Refining, Postal Telegraph, Shell Pipe Line, Standard Oils of New Jersey and New York, Utica Gas, Virginia Electric, Detroit Edison, National Steel and New England Telephone.

Baldwin Locomotive 5s, reflecting the decision of the directors to suspend sinking fund payments, dropped 6¼ points to 100¼, but the 6 per cent issues on the curb steadied. Bethlehem Steel and Consolidated Gas issues were off fractionally to around a point, apparently in response to the lower earnings statements of the companies.

The rails were the softest of the corporate divisions. Among losers of 1 to 3 or more points in this section were some loans of Baltimore & Ohio, Central Pacific, St. Paul, Chicago & North Western, Northern Pacific, Southern, Erie, Great Northern, Illinois Central, Missouri Pacific and N. Y. Central.

List of Losers.

Losses of a point or so were suffered by various issues of Liggett & Myers, International Paper, International Hydroelectric, Western Union, U. S. Rubber, United Drug, Paramount and American Rolling Mill.

The foreign group was dull and irregular. German Government 5½s advanced 1½ to 28, but Rotterdam City 6s were down 4½ at 128⅝.

Curb's Prices Pushed Down In Dull Sales

Losses Are Numerous in Industrial List; Trading, 145,000 Shares.

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—With few exceptions, curb stocks finished lower today. Losses of fractions to around 2 points were numerous in the industrial list. A number of inactive specialties recorded greater losses.

Alcohols resisted the downward trend. Hiram Walker was up nearly a point net at the close, while Distillers Corporation-Seagrams also improved.

Quotations were generally easier from the opening and the volume of selling increased during the late forenoon. Offerings leveled off after midday but little recovery appeared.

Losses of around 1 to 2 points occurred in Aluminum Company of America, American Cyanamid B, Gulf Oil, Pepperell Manufacturing, Safety Car Heating, Sherwin-Williams, Singer Manufacturing, Swift Internationale and United Shoe Machinery. Smaller recessions were shown by Electric Bond & Share, International Petroleum, Parker Rust Proof, Pittsburgh Plate Glass, Lake Shore and Humble Oil.

Illinois Central Profit Drops To $1,156,845

C., B. & Q. Railroad Report Net of $8,496,238 in 9 Months.

Chicago, Oct. 26 (AP).—Net operating income of the Illinois Central system for September was $1,156,845, a decrease of $255,838 from the same month of 1933, although operating revenues were $7,845,102, a gain of $66,882.

For the first nine months of this year net income was $9,634,004, a drop $1,773,355 from last year. Revenues totaled $67,545,994, an increase of $3,216,571.

New York, Oct. 26.—Net railway operating income of the Chicago Burlington & Quincy Railroad during the first nine months totaled $496,238, compared with $8,676,900 in the same month a year ago. Surplus after charges during the period amounted to $2,359,255, against $2,667,887 a year ago.

Tide Water Oil Co. reports for the third quarter net profit of $1,512,645, equal to 58 cents a share after preferred dividends, compared with $1,513,189, or 58 cents a share in the preceding quarter and $1,847,900, or 73 cents a share last year. In the first nine months profit was $4,037,803, equal to $1.15 a share, against $1,850,396, or 50 cents a share in the same period last year.

Directors of the Freeport Texas Co. today declared the regular quarterly dividend of 50 cents a share on the common stock, payable December 1 to stock of record November 15.

Directors of the United States Playing Card Co., meeting today in Cincinnati, declared an extra dividend of 50 cents a share and the regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents a share, both payable January 2 to stock of record December 21.

Directors of the Consolidated Gas Co. of New York today declared a dividend of 50 cents a share on the common stock, payable December 15 to stock of record November 9. Similar dividends have been paid in the last two quarters.

Directors of Lehn & Fink Products Co. declared a dividend of 37½ cents on the capital stock, payable December 1 to stock of record November 15. A similar dividend was declared three months ago.

Chicago, Oct. 26 (AP).—Consolidated statement of the Link-Belt Co. and subsidiaries today showed net income before taxes for the first nine months of this year totaled $642,659, compared with $52,129 for the corresponding period last year.

Non-Partisan Board Voted by Library Group

The District of Columbia Library Association will continue to be governed by a non-partisan board of trustees, appointed by but distinct from the District Commissioners, according to a resolution adopted by the group.

Other resolutions approved by the association were that the board of trustees of the Public Library shall continue to appoint a librarian and that copies of both resolutions shall be sent to the Senate and House Committees of the District and to the board of trustees of the library.

Week's Revenue Freight Loads Are Increased by 4,641 Cars

Loading of revenue freight for the week ended October 20 totaled 640,280 cars, an increase of 4,641 cars above the preceding week, but reductions of 16,725 cars below the corresponding week in 1933, and 1,705 cars below the corresponding week in 1932, the Association of American Railroads announced today.

Final Rallies Overcome Dips In Wheat Price

Cotton Market Is Steady at Net Declines of 4 to 6 Points.

Chicago, Oct. 26 (AP).—Violent late rallies that resulted from flurried buying in an oversold market led to gains today for corn, and practically overcame sharp losses in wheat.

The recovery started after wheat and rye had reached a new low price record for the season, influenced by about 3 cents fall of wheat today at Liverpool. Augmented buying on downturns in Chicago was attributed largely to the fact that wheat here was off nearly 5 cents and corn 4 cents from figures current earlier this week.

Corn Closes Strong.

Corn closed strong ¼ to ⅞ above yesterday's finish; May, 76¾@76⅞; wheat, irregular, ¼ off to ⅜ up; May, 96⅛@96¼; oats, at ¼ decline to ⅛ gain, and provisions varying 7 cents setback to a rise of 10 cents.

Dominated at first by acute weakness of foreign markets and by talk of proposed radical changes in Canadian government plans as to wheat trade methods, the Chicago wheat market suffered sharp early tumbles, showing in some cases 2 cents drop.

Particular attention was given to Liverpool reports of cheaper Canadian wheat offerings and of timely widespread rains in Australia.

New York Cotton Market.

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—Cotton futures lost a little further ground today under liquidation and scattered selling prompted by weakness of other markets. December contracts, after selling down from 12.30 to 12.20, closed at 12.23, with the general market ending steady at net declines of 4 to 6 points.

Early declines in grain made an unfavorable impression on sentiment, and late weakness of the stock market discouraged long operations.

An increased trade demand developed around 12.20 for December, however, and last-hour fluctuations were irregular.

The first sale of cotton for delivery in October, 1935, was closed at a discount of about 18 points under July, and the difference later widened to about 22 points through selling by houses with Liverpool connections.

Exports today, 17,113, making 1,223,348 so far this season. Port receipts, 48,257. U. S. port stocks, 3,146,041.

World Trade Status of U. S. To Be Studied

National Foreign Council Will Survey Conditions at Annual Parley.

By W. R. Huff.

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—The problem of America's trade relations with the rest of the world, in all its National and international aspects, will be exhaustively surveyed at the Twenty-first annual convention of the National Foreign Trade Council here October 31 and November 1 and 2.

The impressive line-up of speakers for the convention has aroused unusual interest in business circles. President Roosevelt, in a message to the congress of business leaders, is expected to go beyond the ordinary conventional greeting and to throw some light on the international situation.

In addition to the President, two of his cabinet members, a governor, a senator, a rear admiral, several former ambassadors and cabinet members, as well as a large number of other officials, American and foreign, will speak during the three-day session.

Secretary of State Hull will treat international trade as "indispensable to full and stable domestic prosperity." His address is expected to be of considerable importance in view of new trade agreements now being formulated. Secretary of Commerce Roper also will speak.

George N. Peek, president of the Second Export-Import Bank, will outline the future course of the institution and discuss with bankers and executives the part the Government should play in providing increased credit facilities for exporters and importers. The bank will have a temporary headquarters at the convention for information and advice.

Business Notes

Compiled
By G. L. HERRMANN

The annual food show of the Independent Retail Grocers of Baltimore will open there Saturday and continue until November 3. More than 200 booths featuring foodstuffs of National advertisers as well as local products will comprise the show.

Special nights for the Governor, the mayor and the food code authority have been arranged.

Two New York stock exchange firms are to be formed. They are Craigmyle, Marache & Co. and Shaskan & Co. C. F. Zeltner & Co. will be dissolved on October 31.

Field, Glore & Co., managers of the group recently formed to sell Home Owners' Loan Corporation 3 per cent bonds, announce the closing of the books to further sales. Orders substantially in excess of $50,000,000 had been confirmed by the close of business Wednesday.

The Department of Agriculture, according to reports, is analyzing present and prospective trade movements abroad with a view to adjusting the 1935 cotton production control program to meet such demands.

Ernest N. Hood, president of the Pequot Mills, Salem, Mass., was elected to a third term as president of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers.

The Chicago Mercantile Exchange, Lloyd S. Tenny, its business manager announced, will begin trading in future deliveries of round, white potatoes on October 29.

Virginia counties and municipalities have spent more than $600,000 for relief in the first three-quarters of 1934, as compared to a Federal outlay in the State of approximately $3,600,000 during the same period of 1933.

Acacia Mutual Life Business Growing

Volume of Insurance Rises 37 Per Cent in Nine Months.

Substantial progress was achieved during the first nine months of the current year by the Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co., it was revealed yesterday by William Montgomery, veteran president of the company.

"While the record of the company in many directions has been decidedly encouraging thus far this year, we are especially gratified at the conservation record established," Mr. Montgomery said. A 37 per cent improvement in that record was accomplished during the first nine months of 1934, compared with the corresponding period of last year.

"Net new business for the first three-quarters of this year totaled more than $18,000,000 against $14,500,000 last year, an increase of 23 per cent. Premium income of the company advanced by more than $250,000, and during the first nine months of 1934 business in force increased to more than $348,000,000.

"Fundamentally important, also, is the fact that assets of the company have increased to more than $35,000,000, the largest in its history."

Trustee's sale of the valuable eight-story and basement brick and limestone apartment hotel known as "The Jefferson," located at the northwest corner of Sixteenth and M streets northwest.

Because of default in the terms and conditions of, and by virtue of a certain deed of trust executed by the Jefferson Apartments, Inc., a Delaware corporation, dated June 20, 1927, recorded among the land records of the District of Columbia in Liber 5912 at folio 401 et seq., and at the request of the holders of over twenty-five per centum in amount of the outstanding bonds secured thereby, the undersigned substituted trustee, by appointment of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia in Equity Cause No. 52847, will offer for sale at public auction in front of the premises on WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 31, 1934, AT FOUR O'CLOCK P. M. the following-described land and premises, situate in the District of Columbia: All of lots numbered nineteen (19) sixty (60), sixty-one (61), sixty-two (62), sixty-three (63) and sixty-four (64) in William Redin, Charles, and others subdivision of square one hundred and eighty-two (182) as per plat recorded in Liber W., folio 70, of the records of the office of the surveyor of the District of Columbia, excepting the north one foot front by depth of said lot sixty (60), together with all buildings and improvements thereon which consist of the "Jefferson Apartments," and all furnishings, fittings and fixtures thereon which said trustee is authorized, by said deed of trust, to sell and convey.

TERMS OF SALE: One-third of the purchase price to be paid in cash on or before the thirtieth day of November, 1934, the balance in two equal installments, payable on or before one and two years from date of sale, respectively, with interest thereon at the rate of six per centum per annum from day of sale, said interest payable semiannually, and to be secured by first deed of trust on the property sold or in cash at the option of the purchaser. The said trustee will receive no bid from anyone offering to bid who shall not at or before the hour of sale, or any adjournment thereof, deposit with said trustee, as a pledge that such bidder will make good his bid in case of its acceptance, a deposit of $15,000, either in cash or certified check on any bank or trust company made or indorsed payable to the undersigned trustee, or in lieu thereof bonds of the par value of $15,000, for the purchase of which, delivery, secured by said deed of trust, said bonds to have all unpaid coupons attached thereto. The deposit of any unsuccessful bidder will be returned to him immediately after the sale. In case any successful bidder shall fail to complete his purchase by November 30, 1934, in accordance with the said terms of sale, said deposit may be forfeited at the option of the said trustee, or without forfeiting the deposit said trustee may avail itself of any legal or equitable rights against defaulting purchaser. The said trustee reserves the right to reject any and all bids and withdraw the property from sale. Adjustments with respect to taxes, assessments, insurance, rentals, income from operation of property, interest and all other adjustments shall be made as of the date of sale. The said trustee however, will continue to manage and operate said property and collect the income therefrom from date of sale to date of transfer upon existing terms as set forth in said deed of trust. After settlement of sale said trustee will not be responsible for any bills or expenses incurred in the management or operation of said property. Terms of sale to be complied with by November 30, 1934; otherwise the said trustee reserves the right to forfeit said deposit or to resell the property at the risk and cost of defaulting purchaser upon the foregoing terms, after advertisement of such resale published three times per week for two successive weeks in two newspapers published in Washington, D. C.

Thoughtlessness.

I would like to have a shanty far away from city sights, where, with niece and maiden auntie, I could pass refreshing nights. There in some some secluded hollow, I might sleep the nights away, and no noisy skate would follow with a loud, asthmatic dray. To my downy couch repairing I am hoping for repose, for my life is sad and wearing and I've corns upon my toes. Just when I am nicely dropping into slumber calm and sweet, some old motor car goes popping in the dark and silent street. I can hear a motor starting with a racket and a roar, and I feel my sleep departing. I can capture it no more. There are scores of weary voters who would sleep till day shall break, and the sound of roaring motors jolts and jars them all awake. And they walk the floor till morning, till the night of darkness flops, when they sound a solemn warning that they'll have to call the cops. They will see if law can punish those who desecrate the night, and with malice dark and Hunnish spoil the sleep of every wight. If you round up the offender he will prove a harmless boy, who would lose his best suspender rather than to spoil your joy. He just pulled the trick unthinking, in his manner smooth and bland, while you used up all the blinking adjectives you had on hand. Thoughtlessness is always making grief or trouble, in some guise, and it keeps tired people waking who would like to close their eyes.

Notables Flock En Masse Today To Horse Show

Champion Entries Will Vie at Meadowbrook in Charity Events.

Diplomats and Federal, District and Maryland officials will be included in the large crowd expected to attend the Maryland Parkway-Meadowbrook Club charity horse and hound show today at the Meadowbrook Club grounds on East-West highway at Beech drive.

Military and civilian horsemen and horsewomen will vie for the prizes in the show, said to be one of the most unusual in the country this year. Entries have exceeded 200 in number, with some of the most outstanding riders and horses of the District, Maryland and Virginia on the list.

The hound show has brought teams from all over the country to compete and to participate in the fox hunt which will be run in full view of the boxes and stands.

14 Jumps on Course.

The jump course is one of the most complete in the United States, with 14 jumps which conform to the Olympic standards and include log, water, bank and the Hitchcock fence jumps. All of these jumps are broad and require speed, determination and nerve on the part of both rider and horse.

A style show in which the latest fashion creations will be described over the microphone and extra feature acts which include the presentation by Sergt. Alvin C. Moore of his horse—Prepossession—which he has trained in high-school work for competition in the 1936 Olympics at Berlin, and the crack riding Troop F of the Third Cavalry at Fort Myer, will fill in all spaces between classes so that there will be no boresome pauses.

The show is sponsored by the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission, the American Remount Association, the Department of Animal Husbandry of the Department of Agriculture, the Meadowbrook Stables and horsemen of the District of Columbia and Maryland. It marks the opening of the extensive bridle paths and horse-show system in Rock Creek Park extended into Maryland.

Proceeds for Charity.

Proceeds of the show will be divided equally between the Community Chest of Washington and the Social Service League of Montgomery County for charitable purposes.

Among those who will be present are former Secretary of State H. L. Stimson and Mrs. Stimson, who are coming from their Long Island home to view the show.

Mrs. John Hay Whitney will bring her crack hunt team and hounds for the show from her home in Upperville, Va.

One on the most spectacular events will be the hound show exhibition of a pack of fox hounds and the fox hound race. A live fox drag will be laid and the chase will be run in full view of the spectators over the mile and a half course and will finish in the show ring.

The entire horse show grounds is ringed with a screen of Rock Creek Park trees and the natural amphitheater has been designed for horse show purposes. Boxes, reserved seats and ringside parking space have been provided. The boxes have been reserved by many prominent persons of official and social circles. The Italian Ambassador has reserved two boxes for his guests, members of the Diplomatic Corps, whom he has invited.

Committee members are:

What Today Means

IF OCTOBER 27 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:30 a. m. to 12:30 p. m., from 3:30 to 5:30 p. m. and from 8:30 to 10:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 6:30 to 8:30 a. m., from 12:30 to 2:30 p. m. and from 5:30 to 7:30 p. m.

This October 27 is very unauspicious for the egotistically inclined, or those suffering from a superiority complex, as there is every likelihood that events might transpire which may cause them a rude awakening. The sensible man and woman will avoid any actions that might create the impression that they have an exaggerated idea of their own importance or position. To obtain results in business on this date your undivided attention will be required as well as enthusiastic salesmanship. Half-hearted efforts will fail to get the desired outcome. Trading in certain lines, especially food commodities, should be brisk.

This day should prove to be a very good one for the making of conservative investments, or closing leases. Social activities may enable old friends to meet and exchange information that might be valuable. Interchange of ideas will also turn out to be useful. Married and engaged couples, as well as those making love, will avoid complications if they do not confide anything of a strictly personal nature, involving their adored one, to a third party.

If a woman and October 27 is your natal day, you may be rather partial to the limelight of publicity. Your dramatic nature might find a satisfactory background on motion picture screen. Teaching elocution might also be a profitable field of activity. Your attractive personality should draw many admirers. A domestic career need not necessarily interfere with your professional life should you decide to engage in a vocation. If you confide in your husband, you may prevent misunderstandings, and receive his full cooperation.

The child born on October 27, when it reaches school age, may display decidedly a good deal of histrionic ability, which its teachers might encourage. The parents should encourage this. The child may be very sensitive to ridicule, so it should be avoided.

If a man and October 27 is your birthday, your aggressive personality requires that you occupy a position that places you where you can give, instead of receive, orders. In a managerial capacity you should excel. The pulpit, stage or lecture platform might enable you to make both money and reputation. In anything of a promotional nature, you should be very successful. If you refrain from being dictatorial, your home life should be ideal. The woman you marry probably will be the type that appreciates little attentions, as well as a verbal expression of your affection.

Successful people born on October 27:

Kenyon Cox, artist.

Eugene A. Smith, geologist.

Whitelaw Reid, journalist and diplomat.

Jacob D. Cox, statesman.

Henry B. Plant, merchant and promoter.

Football Coach Loses $10,000 Court Verdict

Leonard Walsh Is Blamed for Auto Injuries to Capital Woman.

Mrs. Ann Rosenberg, of the Keystone Apartments, yesterday was awarded $10,000 damages by a jury in the District Supreme Court for injuries received when she was struck by an automobile she charged was driven by Leonard Walsh, assistant football coach of the George Washington University.

Justice Peyton Gordon, before whom the case was tried, previously had directed a verdict clearing Joseph Walsh, brother of Leonard, of any liability in the case. Both had been named because of the inability of the plaintiff to determine who was the driver of the car.

Both Leonard and Joseph Walsh offered alibi defenses. One sought to prove he was swimming in a hotel pool, when the accident happened and the other asserted he was with a sick friend at the same time. Three star football players of the university offered testimony in support of their alibis.

Attorneys A. L. Newmyer and Lewis Shapiro, for Mrs. Rosenberg, produced a park police sergeant who said a newsboy had identified one of the Walshes as the driver of the car. Attorney Cornelius Doherty, defending Walsh, denied that his clients were in the car when it struck Mrs. Rosenberg at Twenty-first street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest, two years ago.

Suits brought by Mrs. Rosenberg's husband were dismissed two days ago, there being no evidence that he had suffered any injury.

'Happy Warrior' Back, Stumping for Lehman

Rochester, Oct. 26 (U.P.).—Alfred E. Smith returned to his "happy warrior" role tonight when he went to the stump in support of Gov. Lehman's candidacy for reelection.

The former Governer and 1928 candidate for President threw his full support to reelection of the State Democratic ticket at a huge Rochester rally.

A Defensive Trump Hold-Up.

If it becomes obvious to the defense that the best plan of campaign is to force the Declarer and shorten the latter's trump holding, every defensive move must be directed to this end. There is more, however, to forcing the Declarer than merely leading a suit of which he is void every time you get on trick. There are times, for instance, when the Dummy as well as the Declarer is void of the suit, and a lead of the suit, instead of shortening the Declarer, will be ruffed in Dummy, enabling the Declarer to get a valuable discard. In this instance the defense must do everything in its power to force the Declarer to remove all of Dummy's trumps. This can often be effectually done by holding up a high trump. The technique of this play is shown in the hand below:

North, Dealer.

	♠ A K 2 ♡ 8 6 4 ◇ 5 3 ♣ K Q J 8 6
♠ 10 9 3 ♡ A 7 5 2 ◇ K Q 10 8 ♣ 9 2		♠ J 8 7 4 ♡ 9 ◇ J 9 7 6 2 ♣ A 5 3
	♠ Q 6 5 ♡ K Q J 10 3 ◇ A 4 ♣ 10 7 4

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1♣	Pass	1♡	Pass
2♣	Pass	3♡	Pass
4♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

West's opening lead was the diamond Queen. South won with the Ace, and the heart King was led. West could count one diamond trick, one heart trick and a probable club trick in the East hand. A fourth trick was needed to defeat the contract.

The only possible hope seemed to lie in West's fourth trump or an extra diamond, and neither could be established unless the Declarer could be shortened by diamond leads. Naturally, only one more diamond could be led while the Dummy still had small trumps, so West did not go up with his heart Ace on the King.

South continued with the Queen, and the West player again stayed off. The Declarer, of course, was now absolutely helpless. He could not shift to clubs as if he did this East could merely hold up on the the first round of the suit and then give his partner a third round ruff. South had no choice but to continue with the heart Jack.

West naturally won this time and led the Queen of diamonds, which he followed with still another round of the suit. South had to trump, and his heart Ten pulled West's last heart. He cashed three spade tricks, but now had to let the East player in with the club Ace. The latter had very carefully discarded spades on the earlier trump leads and then when the spade suit was run, had got rid of his two small clubs. East therefore won the last three tricks with his club Ace and two good diamonds, and the Declarer's contract was defeated two tricks.

Had West not held up on the first two rounds of hearts, South would have been able to fulfill his contract, losing but one diamond trick and the two Aces.

NRA Official Is Sued By Woman Auto Victim

A suit for $25,000 against Alvin Brown, executive officer of the NRA, was filed yesterday in the District Supreme Court by Marjorie B. Pitts, of 3249 N street northwest, who charged that an automobile operated by Brown struck her on March 4, while she was in a safety zone at Connecticut avenue and Woodley road northwest.

It is alleged that Brown negligently drove his car through the zone and knocked the woman to the pavement. The plaintiff claims she is permanently injured.
